IS THIS THE SOLUTION?

The Episcopal Church Goes Into the Saloon Business on the "No Treat Plan"

The Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter, D. D., LL. D., bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York, opened the "Subway Tavern" with prayer, and at the conclusion of the opening exercises the doxology was sung.

The Subway Tavern is a saloon, fashioned and conducted after a new idea, at the corner of Mulberry and Bleeker streets near the Bowery. The bishop made a speech in the barroom, standing on a beer case, praised the new saloon and declared that it represented more progress toward temperance than the efforts of temperance leaders of 50 years.

The Tavern has been financed by certain members of the City club, who believe that, in addition to the predicted 5 per cent dividends, the saloon will work a reform among drinkers. Any man or woman can buy anything from a glass of soda water to a rye highball in the place so long as he or she does not "treat."

When Bishop Potter arrived in the saloon to conduct the opening exercises he approached the bar and spoke to the bartender, remarking about a picture on the wall showing some sportive nymphs in rather glaring negligee. The Bishop apparently was not over-pleased with this feature of the saloon.

To a crowd of members of the club and a few stray wanderers from the Bowery who happened in Bishop Potter made his speech.

"We have the great multitude of people whose daily life is one of toil to consider," said the bishop. "When the day's work is done what is to become of them? I belong to the Century, the Metropolitan and a half dozen other clubs, and I can go to one or all of them for my entertainment and my pleasure.

"But what is to become of my friend who lives in two rooms with his wife and five children? It's all very well to go to your club for lunch when the day's work is finished, but where is the man going who does not belong to these clubs? Inevitable necessity drives him to the saloon.

"Gentlemen, I hold the effort to shut up the saloon as the most tragic and at the same time the most comic failure in modern history.

"The temperance question is as far from solution today as it was 50 years ago.

"I may add that the efforts to settle it in a high handed way have led to an untold amount of hypocrisy. Gentlemen, this movement of ours today must be taken into account by all if they wish to save the republic. We must make the home of the working man cleaner and brighter, and we must see that he gets his recreation."

The saloon is divided into two sections, the "Water Wagon" and the "Not Water Wagon." They are separated by a partition. Women who want to drink a glass of beer at a bar may be served from what looks like a soda fountain on the "Water Wagon" side. The bar proper is in the second room and that is exclusively for men. Any sort of a drink can be had but each customer must pay for his own drink. The idea is to raise the standard of drinking rather than attempt to abolish it. It is not altogether new. Earl Gray tried to revolutionize the dram shops of London by just such a scheme.

The Subway Tavern, its promoters say, is to be made a pleasant, comfortable place where the drinker can be surrounded by a moral atmosphere and where first-class beverages will be dispensed cheap. Regular 15-cent whisky is sold for 10 cents per glass and other drinks in proportion.

Bishop Potter put himself on record a number of years ago as being a friend of the workingman's saloon. He recognizes it as the poor man's club.

One day last week a bad Indian by the name of Antoine was shot to death near Conconully, Wash., by a young man by the name of Hill. So glad was the community to be rid of the Indian, who was notoriously bad, quarrelsome and dangerous, that no inquest was held and nor was Hill arrested.

Brother of Judge Parker Lives in Astoria, Oregon

A brother of Judge Alton B. Parker, democratic nominee for president lives in Astoria, Oregon, in the person of Eugene B. Parker, a grocery clerk in the store of A. V. Allen. He has resided there for the past year, coming from Seattle. He first worked for Ross, Higgins & Co. for a few months and was highly thought of by that firm, as he was an expert window dresser and was well liked by customers of the store but he transferred to the A. V. Allen store upon receiving a very flattering offer.

He is a married man, with two young children, and had completely concealed his identity as the brother of so distinguished a man as Judge Parker. His associates in business had no knowledge of it, and his family never mentioned it to their friends. When approached on the subject he at first denied that Judge Parker was his brother and said there was some mistake; but finally half acknowledged it to be a fact, saying he had hoped it would not be discovered, as he knew it would bring him into publicity, which he wished to avoid.

He refused to talk about his early home life or his brother upon any condition, and said he had not seen Judge Parker and that he did not correspond with him or any member of his family. Even to his personal friends and members of his family he absolutely refused to say a word about Judge Parker, except to say that he had no reason to be ashamed to be his brother, and from what he could learn he had an excellent chance for election.

Mr. Parker is a man about 45 years of age, and stands well in Astoria, although he is not of an obtrusive personality, and few are really acquainted with him. His present alarm is that he will now become an object of curiosity, and that it will interfere with his employer's business. He is a democrat in politics, but has not taken any active interest in the party in that city.

Washington Ranks First in Wheat and Wool

According to the report of the national department of agriculture, the crops of Washington were in good condition at the beginning of this month. The report for July 1 places the "average condition" in this state at the following rating:

Corn, 92 per cent; winter wheat, 98 per cent; spring wheat, 88 per cent; rye, 91 per cent; Irish potatoes, 92 per cent; sweet potatoes, 100 per cent; clover, 94 per cent; timothy, 93 per cent; pasture, 96 per cent; apples, 88 per cent; peaches, 90 per cent; grapes, 97 per cent.

The rating on winter wheat—98 per cent—is the highest given to any state, Idaho coming next with 95 per cent, Georgia coming third with 93 per cent, the average condition for the entire United States being only 78.7 per cent.

In the average weight of wool per fleece, Washington again takes first place with 8.1 pounds. Oregon and Wyoming being next with 7.5 pounds each. The average for the United States is placed at 6.4 pounds.

What Converted Him

This story regarding a converted barbarian is told in the English papers: A negro clergyman was entertained at tea by the president of a college. The guest, who came from west Africa, related some particulars of his early life when a lady asked him how he became a Christian. "The story of Jezebel converted me," he answered. "You know, we wore told the dogs did not touch the palms of her hands. Well that convinced me of the truth of the narrative, for we never eat the palms of the hands in my country. they are too bitter.

Mrs. C. H. Jennings, Boston—"Our babies (twins), were sickly. Had several doctors, but no results. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea made them strong and robust. 35 cents. Tea or tablet form. City Drug Store.

SOME POLITICAL HISTORY

The Record of George Turner, the Democratic Candidate for Governor

The following bit of political history is extracted from an editorial in last week's Palmer Mountain Prospector. Being personally acquainted with Mr. Turner, and living in the same town for many years, Mr. Dallam speaks as one who knows:

"We do not look upon Mr. Turner as a formidable candidate, and believe that Mr. Tollman, Mr. Druth, or any other old time and well known democrat would be far stronger with the mass of voters than George Turner. We have nothing personal against Mr. Turner. On the contrary he is a man whom we have an intense liking for, and wish to see him successful in everything but politics. He has been remarkably facile in changing his political faith—if he really possesses such a thing as political faith—for the benefits that might accrue to him from such transformation. He came to Washington in territorial days with a commission as judge in his pocket from a republican president. His being a federal appointee does not detract from the fact that he made an able judge. But in those early days Judge Turner made public speeches occasionally for the republican cause, and no man on the stump ever said so many bitter things about the democratic party as he did. During the silver craze of 1896 Mr. Turner split with his old party and became the most rabid silver republican in the country. The attitude of the republican party on the money question he denounced as a heinous crime. It was this apostasy that eventually carried him into the United States senate. But the judge did not long remain with the silver republicans. The star of populism was in the ascendancy and he, publicly proclaimed himself an unswerving and uncompromising populist. As soon as populism commenced waning the many sided judge joined hands with the democrats, and became one of the most virulent demagogues that party has ever produced. He let no opportunity escape to abuse and vilify the lamented McKinley. It was the abuse of such men as Senator Turner and the Hearst newspapers that nerved the hand that fired the fatal shot, and in the death of the president Senator Turner stands an accessory. All this time Turner has posed as a devout worshiper of silver. However in the campaign leading up to the nomination of a gold standard democrat for president Turner stood at all times for Mr. Parker, showing that his financial ideas are as susceptible to a great change as is his political belief. With such a record, known to every voter in the state, Mr. Turner has a very poor show of election in November. Aside from his acrobatic political stunts Mr. Turner is not a man of the people. There is nothing magnetic about him to arouse public enthusiasm. He has the appearance of being cold, calculating, austere, and is so considered by a majority of people. Fortunately for the republican party few know him intimately, as he is not a man to invite intimacy, and the result will be, with the first time he has every stood before the people for their suffrage, that he will be decisively defeated at the polls."

It is now accounted a disgrace for any Japanese of any class to retain any articles of gold. All have been sent to the treasury to be converted into coin for the Emperor.

It requires a high grade of nerve to ask the voters to support a man who admits that he voted in two elections for a money plank which he was convinced was wrong.—The Outburst.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lee of Sherman are the owners of a cow which for rapid increase, is well up toward the head of her class. This animal is seven years old and has had nine calves, bearing triplets this spring. At three years old she had one calf, at four she had one; at five she became mother of twins; at six she found twins again and this spring went one better than twins and presented Mr. Lee with triplet calves, though they lived but a short time.

'Tis said a bottle and glass Will soon make a person mellow, But Rocky Mountain Tea's the drink That livens up a fellow.
