A French statistician has compiled a statement of the loss of life in the wars of a century. The grand total is 14,000,000, divided as follows: Napoleonic wars, 8,000,000; Crimean wars, 300,000; Italian wars, 300,000; American civil war, 500,000; Franco-German war, 80,000; Russo-Turkish war, 400,000; civil wars in South America, 500,000; various colonial expeditions in India, Mexico, Tonquin, South Africa, etc., 3,000,000. If all the figures are as near to the truth as those given for our civil war the statement must be accepted as correct. Even this exhibit will not account for all the mortality caused by war, since it includes only those who die in service. Millions have died after discharge as a result of wounds or disease incurred in service, and millions more have been maimed or otherwise disabled for life.

Consumers of cigars made from home grown fillers will soon have to take them without the Havana flavor heretofore imparted to some brands by the use of Cuban wrappers. Cuba now forbids the exportation of the "yagua" leaf, which has been extensively used for wrappers in this country. It keeps the cigar moist and gives a fragrance much appreciated by smokers. Last year the importation of "yaguas" amounted to sixty-five tons.

Japan's new loan of $60,000,000 is in the nature of a second mortgage. Her loan of last April was a first lien upon the Japanese customs revenue and was offered to the public at 93%. The new loan is secured by a subordinate lien on the same customs revenue and is offered at 90%. This reduction, however, does not show a marked decline in Japan's credit.

THE HEART MUSCLES.

How They Do Their Work and Why They Never Tire.

It is generally supposed that the heart is an organ which never takes a rest. But this is not so. The muscles of the heart are not incessantly working. The heart contains four chambers—two upper, called the auricles, and two lower, the ventricles. In the beating of the heart the auricles first contract and force the blood into the ventricles; they then relax while the ventricles repeat the process. Then follows a pause, during which the heart is perfectly at rest.

The contraction of the auricles takes one-fifth of the time between one beat and the next, the contraction of the ventricles two-fifths and the pause two-fifths, so that the heart is really resting two-fifths of its time. Sleep also aids in relieving the muscles of the heart, as it considerably diminishes the rapidity of its action.

This alternation of rest and activity endows the heart muscles with their capacity for untiring work.

Sacred Mountains in Japan.

Travelers in Japan are astonished to find the grandest shrines throughout the land situated on the top of high, precipitous mountains. This is because every mountain in that country is dedicated to some deity who is believed to be its guardian. These temple grounds are covered with the oldest and largest forest trees, and to the eyes of the people below the effect of the clouds which hover around the peak has originated the belief that the gods hold the power over the clouds to give or withhold rain.

Serenity of Temper.

One sign of mental health is serenity of temper and a self control that enables us to bear with equanimity and unruffled temper the petty trials and jars of life, especially those arising from contact with scolding, irascible, irritating folk. It is well to remember at such times that these unfortunates are their own worst enemies, and a cultivation of the art of not bearing will help us very much. It is a very useful art all through life and well worth some trouble to acquire.

Far From It.

Young Widow (to partner at ball)—Mr. Crogan, I've made a wager of a pound of chocolate that you are a single man. Mr. Crogan—Ye've lost, ma'am. I'm wan av thriplets.—Chicago Tribune.

Japan is now floating in New York and London a war loan of $60,000,000, which, added to a previous issue of bonds to American and English investors, makes $110,000,000 raised abroad for military purposes. Russia is in the Berlin market for a war loan of $250,000,000. By the end of the present year Japan and Russia together will have shot away $500,000,000. Other expenses incidental to war will probably bring the total expense of the year's fighting close to a billion dollars.

The Bed.

The bed is a bundle of paradoxes. We go to it with reluctance, yet we quit it with regret. We make up our minds every night to leave it early, but we make up our bodies every morning to keep it late.—Colton.

If you haven't time to prepare Holister's Rocky Mountain Tea, it is now made in tablet form also. Get a package already to use. Makes you well; keeps you well. 35 cents.

A GIRL'S NATURE.

Little Signs That, It Is Said, Reveal Phases of Character.

Much of a girl's nature is betrayed by the little act of brushing a speck off a man's coat. If she picks off the thread or imaginary bit of lint very carefully between the thumb and forefinger it is an indisputable sign that she is a woman of a very practical and executive character.

On the other hand, if a girl should brush the coat lapel of her fiancé very softly and tenderly with the second and third finger of her hand in her endeavor to remove an invisible speck it is a sure sign that she is more sentimental than practical. The man who marries her will live in a continual atmosphere of romance and bad house-keeping.

There is still another type of girl who will brush the speck off a man's coat with a broad sweep of the hand in which all the fingers and thumb play a part. She is in all probability an athletic girl who excels at tennis, golf and the links and who will prove a high spirited, strong minded woman after marriage.

Then, again, the girl who puts a flower in a man's coat with her hand held jauntily upturned from the wrist and the flower held in the tips of her fingers is sure to be something of a coquette, while the maid who gives you only the tips of her fingers when she greets you in the drawing room or public street is probably an ambitious girl.—Chicago Journal.

Literary Fads of the Japanese.

Few of the contemporaneous writers of fiction in English are popular in Japan, but scientific works are widely read. Describing the literary taste of the Japs in the Booklovers' Magazine, Harold Boyce says:

There is one American writer of today who has succeeded in impressing his work upon the mind of commercial Japan. Every clerk in the stores, banks, commission houses, railway and steamship offices and godowns of the mikado's empire is familiarly acquainted with "Old Grogan Graham," oracle of the Chicago stockyards. Heads of big houses all over the empire bought the book wholesale and distributed copies among their employees. Published in paper covers and selling for 4 sen, the book reached a circulation of over 200,000, but with no profit to the author, as there was no international copyright. In the Japanese appraisal of the book its humor was entirely overlooked. The production was accepted solely as a serious gospel to overconfident young manhood. It is when one glances at the strangely assorted books that enjoy popularity side by side in Japan that wonder is expressed at the unexpected preferences of these peculiar people. The same merchant or manufacturer or transportation magnate who read with great seriousness Mr. Lorimer's book and distributed it by the armful among his clerks and agents will confess that when he wants to experience a genuine joy in reading he proceeds to revel in the absorbing delights of Darwin's "Origin of Species." A leading publisher in Tokyo sent thousands of blank votes to professors, students, merchants, bankers and others throughout Japan, asking them to name their favorite foreign author. Darwin was found to be the people's choice by a large plurality. Carlyle is also widely read in Japan. A work which has entranced the Japanese mind is the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The native Japanese writers transform dry works of history and scientific treatises into works of imagination, preserving in these fanciful works the name, but not the reality, of the original.

Charles J. Bonaparte having been chosen a presidential elector from Maryland, it is evident that the "deceitful Napoleon" has not lost all its potency.
