Swat the House Fly

The whole United States government, with its vast treasury of wealth, its brainy statesmen, its army and navy, its immense horde of highbrows, against the poor little house fly! That's the line-up in a bitter war of extermination scheduled to set the nation by the ears and enlist the courageous support of every man, woman and child in this broad land. The final knell of the house fly has been sounded, and the battle has just begun. "Catch 'em and kill 'em; show no quarter"—that is the war cry of the army of extermination that is to put forth every effort to rid the land of the musca domestica, the polite name by which the house fly should be addressed by strangers. Until the scientists got busy with their investigations the house fly was considered merely as a pestiferous insect, designed by the Creator of all things merely to take its bath in the sweet cream and maple sirup, annoy the late morning sleeper, skate about with abandon on the polished surface of shiny bald heads and practise the Morse telegraph code on the cleanest of windows. Long suffering housewives since time began were the only really active enemies of the seemingly insignificant little fly, and they alone and unaided applied the imprecations and dishcloths vigorously against the nuisance. But after the scientists got onto the job the fight against the insect began to assume proportions of magnitude.

That little insect which the average citizen was wont to regard merely as a domestic pest is now branded as the most dangerous creature on earth.

The house fly has been publicly indicted as a murderer of the human race, the greatest disease propagator and the carrier of more menacing and malignant germs than all other creatures put together.

This little, but potent, messenger of death wanders from the sick room, from the filth of the garbage pail, from the heaps of refuse of all kinds into the peaceful, happy homes of our land, walks upon the butter, the meat, the fruit, the sugar, takes a bath in the milk, leaving everywhere the germs of disease that have gathered upon its furry feet and body.

In experiments conducted by the New York health authorities, the scientists found on the body of a single little fly 1,222,570 different bacteria, enough to kill a few thousand human beings. In another experiment a fly was caught in a sterilized net and dropped into a bottle of sterilized water. The bottle was shaken and the germs washed off the insect's body, as would be the case if the fly dropped into a glass of milk for the baby. The previously pure water was then examined and it was discovered that the fly's bath contained no less than 5,000,000 disease germs.

About half the deaths from typhoid in New York, according to the health authorities, are attributed directly to the distribution of germs by house flies. And worse than that, the figures show that of 7000 deaths of cooing babies in that city from infantile diseases, more than 5000 were traced to infection carried by house flies.

According to a noted scientist, the extermination of the pest is comparatively easy. All that is necessary, he says, is a systematic effort on the part of the public. If all the people will practice the utmost cleanliness, it is declared, the house fly will be extinct in this country within a few years, for the house fly cannot exist without filth. "Cleanliness", then, is the watchword for the American public to put an end to an insect that is not only a terrible nuisance, but a terrible instrument of death to thousands of our population every year.

The Last Ditch.

When William, prince of Orange, afterward William III. of England, was elected stadtholder of the United Netherlands in 1672 and found himself in the midst of war with England and France he was asked by the Duke of Buckingham whether he did not see ruin impending over his country. "Nay," he answered. "There is one certain means by which I can be sure enough to see my country's ruin. I will die in the last ditch." And, rejecting all terms of peace, he checked the invasion of France by opening sluices and flooding every tract of land, drove them from Holland in 1674 and made honorable terms with England and finally after varying effort brought the war to a successful close by a treaty with France in 1678.

Taken at His Word.

The doctor was telling how he came to lose one of his best paying patients. The man was a hypochondriac, who was always imagining that something terrible was about to happen to him, and the doctor, who was a great jollier, was kept busy trying to reason him out of his morbid condition. "You have worried yourself until you are bordering on a nervous collapse," said the doctor to him one day. "You shouldn't think about your symptoms all the time, but just attend to your affairs as if there was nothing the matter with you."

And He Wasn't.

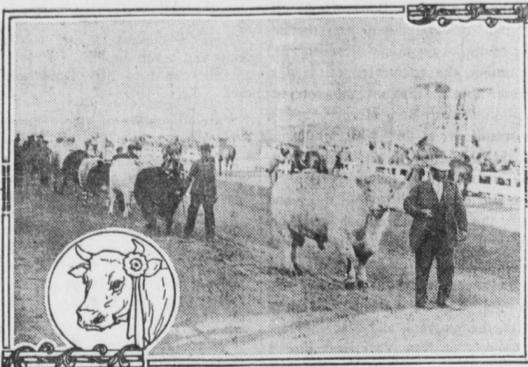

"Victoria," said her husband, "you will not mind it, I presume, if I should happen to be detained downtown late this evening?"

"I shall not mind it," austere answered Mrs. Vick-Senn, "because you will not be detained downtown late this evening or any other evening."—Chicago Tribune.

A Stitch In Time.

Dorothy was visiting her grandparents in the country for the first time. Seeing a quantity of feathers scattered about the henyard she shook her head in disapproval. "Grandpa," she said gravely, "you really ought to do something to keep your chickens from wearing out so."—Delineator.

LIVE STOCK PARADE FEATURE AT SPOKANE FAIR

Last year's exhibits of eastern bred live stock at the Spokane Interstate Fair proved, as anticipated, an incentive to stockmen of the northwest to put forth the finest in competition, and the benefits resulting from the coming of those trainloads of eastern stock are felt this year in the certainty of an even better exhibit for 1910. The live stock parade, to be held this year on the fifth day of the fair, Oct. 7, is an event that means pure, unadulterated pleasure to all lovers of good cattle and horses, whether the delighted spectator be owner of the proud, beribboned animal that is displaying his premium to the grand stand or not.

Another cause contributory to the future of live stock exhibits at the Interstate Fair lies in the holding of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition's stock show immediately following the Interstate Fair last year. To insure the appearance at Spokane of stock en route from south and east to Seattle, the Interstate Fair management substantially raised the premium list of former years, and, once raised, the prizes stick at the advanced figures this year and, most probably, for all future years.

Still another element that assures the best stock exhibit at the Spokane Interstate Fair in the history of the northwest is the schedule of dates for state and county fairs for this territory this year. The schedule last year proved to be unhappily arranged in that, amongst other details, the dates of the Portland exposition and Spokane Interstate Fair were the same. This year the Portland fair will be held Sept. 5 to 10. The week following the Oregon state fair is held at Salem. Then come the Walla Walla and Seattle fairs, both held Sept. 19 to 24. North Yakima holds its fair in the following week—the week immediately preceding that which sees the opening of the Spokane Interstate Fair.

This schedule, the best arranged for the convenience of stockmen in the history of expositions of the northwest, also insures the public's seeing at the Spokane Interstate Fair the best stock exhibited at all the fairs of the northwest.

SPOKANE FAIR MIDWAY BETTER THAN EVER.

The grounds of a big exposition like the Spokane Interstate Fair, held this year Oct. 3 to 9, present all the contrasts of cosmopolitan life. This is as it should be and is probably one of the aims of all big fair managements. The fair is for all citizens. Its appeal must be directed to the humblest toiler as to the wealthy. Autos must hobnob with farm vehicles. The exhibits and attractions are free to pedestrian and driver of elegantly appointed carriage alike.

On the Midway all men meet on a level, in Spokane as in Paris. A laugh is a luxury cheapened to the reach of all. Visiting the Midway of the Spokane Interstate Fair last year was to laugh. Also there were thrills—fully as many as provided by any big circus' side shows. And, above all, it is innocent, harmless amusement that is furnished by brass throated spieler, fortune teller, snake charmer, wild animal show or what not of the hitherto unbelievable that is seen on the Interstate Fair Midway.

This year's Midway is heralded already as a revelation in popular entertainment. The best features of last year have been booked again, novel attractions fresh from the great Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin state fairs secured and a new plan for handling the big aggregate of Midway shows adopted. The illustrated program of amusement features, issued July 1, will be mailed free by Secretary Robert H. Cosgrove on request.

HUNDREDS TO FIGHT IN INDIAN BATTLE.

The battle of the Clearwater will be fought nightly at the Spokane Interstate Fair, which will be held Oct. 3 to 9 this year. For its spectacular night attraction the fair management last year produced the Biblical story of the siege of Jericho, a tremendous theme, well suited to the vast staging and gorgeous pyrotechnical effects made possible by large open air spaces and a lavish use of money. In fact, the famous battle that was fought between Chief Joseph's Indians and the United States troops under Brigadier General O. O. Howard, like the more famous Biblical siege of Jericho, would be impossible of staging in the largest theaters of the world on the scale that it will be staged at the Spokane Interstate Fair.

For the fierce attack of the dusky warriors, circling around the troops on their wild horses, riding in daredevil style almost upon the troopers' guns, for the determined resistance of the white soldiers, the obstinate struggle for every foot of bloodstained ground, vast space is needed.

Some 800 actors take part in the pictured battle, whose actuality is not forgotten by still living pioneers of the Lewiston country, where was fought the bloody battle of the Clearwater. The state militia will take part, as will about 300 Indians, Nez Perce, Coeur d'Alene, Spokane, Yakima, Colville, Flathead and Umatilla. The other actors, numbering several hundred, will be supplied by B. E. Gregory, superintendent of amusements at the Minnesota state fair, who staged the siege of Jericho last year for the Spokane Interstate Fair and will this year stage the battle of the Clearwater.
