

CASHMERE MAN OUT FOR COUNTY SHERIFF

Mr. Bert McManus Seeks Nomination on Republican Ticket—28 Years Resident of Valley

Mr. McManus, who coming out late and handicapped by the fact that he ran against a man who had held the office one term and sought re-election, he ran within 250 votes of the nominee in the last election.

The following flattering notice of his candidacy appeared in his home town paper, the Record, last week. Mr. McManus needs no introduction to the old timers of Leavenworth, many of whom knew him before he was grown. He possesses all the qualifications necessary for the office he seeks.

"In a sense Mr. McManus will be Cashmere's candidate for a county office, probably the only one on the Republican ticket, and with practically a solid local support and the spirit of fairness that has been promised from Wenatchee, which from fact of population can control any county political situation, he and his friends are exceedingly sanguine as to the results.

"Then Bert's qualifications, his experience and his natural ability make him the logical man for the position. Over a year as chief deputy of Sheriff Kenyon, his work attracted the favorable attention of attorneys and other county officials for promptness and exactness in details. He is strong for economy and has an idea that many of the expenses of the office are unnecessary. A taxpayer himself, he is in sympathy with the agitation and movement to keep taxes down.

"In Cashmere Mr. McManus' candidacy is regarded with much pleasure. Up the river, at Chelan and on the Entiat he is well known and has been promised support. In 1914 he made a remarkable run for the office against Mr. Kenyon, who was seeking a second term, receiving 1056 votes against 1308 for the latter. By reason of this, the well defined principles he is known to stand for, his twenty-eight years' residence here and his wide and intimate acquaintance all thru the county, he is entitled to the office and honor he seeks.

"It gives the Record pleasure to print the foregoing and to lend whatever aid and influence it can to assist Mr. McManus to promote his candidacy, and while in no way will this paper discredit the ambitions and aspirations of any other candidate, it feels that aside from the local reasons, that the affairs of the office directed by Mr. McManus will bring forth a practical, efficient and economical administration."—Advertisement.

BUYING A HAT IN HAWAII.

It Cost More to Find the Article Than It Did to Purchase It.

In his eagerness to see a whale during the voyage between Honolulu and the island of Hawaii, Homer Croy, who tells about his adventure in Travel, leaped too far over the rail and lost his hat.

After arriving at the island he climbed into a taxicab and told the driver to take him to a hat store. "Do you understand?" he asked. "A hat store."

"Yes, for sure, all right," the Japanese chauffeur answered.

They went bumping up the street, swung wildly round a corner and finally, at the far side of the town, drew up to the curb. In the window of the store was a bedstead, on which hung the sign, "This Week Cheap."

"What do you mean by taking me to a furniture store?" Mr. Croy demanded. "Dis Hata store," replied the Japanese driver, and he pointed to the name of the proprietor, "K. Hata."

"I want a hat, not a bed," Mr. Croy said, with feeling. "I want it for this," pointing to his bare head.

"Yes, for sure, all right."

With that the cab whirled down the street and away to the other side of the town, while the taxi bill was merrily running up. This time it stopped before a barber shop.

"No; I don't want anything taken off my head. I want something put on it," declared Mr. Croy, who was now quite irritated.

"Yes, for sure. I understand all right," replied the chauffeur, with a grin.

They went clattering just as far to the other side of the town as they could and drew up before a store that as an afterthought apparently carried a line of hats. Mr. Croy had to pay twice the price of a hat on the way to buy it, but this did not seem to worry the driver, who, after the manner of automobile drivers, stood up under it bravely.

Contrasting Three Coast States

President Eden, of the Superior Portland Cement Co., in an address at Seattle said, "The political and economic experiments in state and municipal legislation has caused the investor to hesitate before placing his capital in Washington and Oregon. The attacks on public utility companies and the enactment of legislation of an experimental character are factors that prevent the location of new industries and the investment of money in this state.

"In contrast to the Pacific Northwest, California is in a healthy condition of business and industry," said Mr. Eden. "Investors regard California as essentially sane in its attitude toward business. There can be no fundamental reason, except a difference in political attitudes why the North Pacific coast should not enjoy prosperity when California is in a condition of well-being."

Mr. Tom C. Atkinson, deputy county engineer, has announced that he will be a candidate before the Republican Primaries for the office of County Engineer.

Mr. Atkinson is a tax-payer in Chelan county, having resided at Entiat for the past nine years, where he and his father, Rev. T. H. Atkinson, own an orchard. He has been chief deputy for the whole of the present administration, and is thoroly conversant with the work, having had charge of all the construction contracts, and his work speaks for itself. If elected he says he will give all of his time to the county, and do the work required of him with the greatest economy consistent with good efficient work.

The engineer's office under the present head has fought all high priced paving propositions and has succeeded in getting a hundred cents worth of work out of every dollar of road money entrusted to it. It has worked in harmony with the Board of County Commissioners, the people, and the State Highway Commission, with the result that there has been no friction and work has progressed in the most efficient manner. Mr. Atkinson, as chief deputy, is largely responsible for this, and if elected he promises that he will continue to work to the best interests of all the tax-payers.

Working Out a Garden's Salvation. Looking backward, I note the transition from reading books about gardens to doing work in one of them and how it gradually came to pass that I read less and only of standard substantialities that might be termed principles, because I found that I must work out my own garden salvation and work it out, if not with fear and trembling, certainly with a humble mind and a humble disposition.—From "My Growing Garden," by J. Horace McFarland.

Goals to Newstead. Mother was measuring a dose of tonic for her little son, who looked up and said:

"What am I taking this for?" "An appetite," she replied. "An appetite," he scornfully repeated. "I can't begin to hold now one-half I want to eat."—New York Post.

WHAT IS STYLE?

It Is Difficult to Define Because It Is So Intangible.

What makes a woman stylish? Applied to dress, style is a curiously elusive quality, either to define or to acquire.

"A stylish garment!" we say of one made in the fashion of the day. But when we ask, "What is the style of the garment?" we are inquiring for a description that may be of this year's style, or last year's, or of the last century's. A dress may be "in style" so far as its material, cut and trimming go and yet not look stylish when worn, either because it is worn by the wrong person or in the wrong way.

"A stylish woman," we say of one dressed in a mode, and yet in the next breath we describe another woman as "good style," although she is not wearing the latest fabrics or newest cut and often is not herself beautiful.

Style is not a simple quality, but a compound one. "We say style," says an old writer, "of everything in which form or matter is conceived to be, in however slight degree, expressive of taste and sentiment." And it is taste and sentiment more than a specific mode that go to the making of style in dress—that intangible something so hard to define, so seldom acquired and so much desired because it is so widely admired.

The French word chic expresses, as Americans and English use it today, a good deal of what we have in mind when we say "stylish." It implies a certain knack in the selection and manner of wearing clothes. The meaning in French includes the idea of subtlety and finesse, and it is these qualities more than the elegant (striking) effect that are suggested by the best dressed women, so often lacking in those of expensively dressed Americans.—Good Health.

Entirely Stopped.

It was at a big boxing show in Brooklyn that at the time for beginning the third round of one of the bouts of the night, master of ceremonies climbed through the ropes and from the center of the ring made this statement: "Gentlemen, I wish to announce that in the last round Harry Pierce broke his hand and is compelled to stop. He is therefore unable to continue. And so he will not fight any more tonight."—Saturday Evening Post.

The First Oyster Eater.

The gluttonous Vitellius is reported to have eaten 1,000 oysters at a sitting. "He was a very valiant man who first ventured on eating of oysters," King James was wont to declare, a sentiment echoed by the poet Gay: The man had sure a palate covered o'er With brass or steel that on the rocky shore First broke the oozy oyster's pearly coat And risked the living morsel down his throat.

The Persian Crow's Beak. There is a weapon known as the crow's beak which was formerly much in use among men of rank in Persia and north India. It was a horseman's weapon and consisted of a broad curved dagger blade fixed at right angles to a shaft, pickax fashion. The shaft incloses a dagger, unscrewing at the butt end. This concealed dagger is a very common feature of Indian arms and especially of the battleaxes of Persia.

Not the Same. On one occasion when "The Mikado" was being rehearsed Gilbert called out from the middle of the stalls, "There is a gentleman in the left group not holding his fan correctly." The stage manager appeared and explained. "There is one gentleman," he said, "who is absent through illness." "Ah," came the reply from the author in grave, matter of fact tones, "that is not the gentleman I am referring to."—Dundee Advertiser.
