SHORT ITEMS OF STATE-WIDE INTEREST.

Of interest to fruit growers of the state is the announcement that a new refrigerator steamship service is to be established between Seattle and the ports of Great Britain and continental Europe. The new service will make it possible to ship apples direct from Seattle and possibly Portland, if the ships call there, to the United Kingdom, Antwerp and Amsterdam, thus avoiding the risk of the long haul across the continent to the Atlantic coast ports. The apples will be placed promptly under refrigeration. The service also should prove of real service to the railroads as it will require refrigerator cars only for the short haul from the producing districts to Seattle. There is a heavy demand for our apples in Europe.

The five thousand coal miners of Washington has accepted the new wage schedule, which gives them 20 per cent advance over the old scale.

A Seattle contractor has taken a contract to build warehouses and an ice plant for the Northwestern Fruit Exchange and the Diamond Ice Company at Wenatchee. The main building is 40 feet square, two stories and basement. They are planned as a first unit of structures which will ultimately have cold storage space for 1000 refrigerator cars and when completed will cost approximately $1,000,000. The building will be of hollow tile and concrete. New ice machinery will be installed. An icing platform will be 800 feet long on the G. N. track. The ice plant will make 135 tons a day.

Washington dairy men will soon build utility plants costing approximately $600,000, capable of handling 500,000 pounds of milk daily with an annual output of an estimated value of about $8,000,000. These plants will manufacture the milk into butter milk powder and cheese. One of these plants located at Lynden, Wn., will cost $150,000 and will be able to handle 100,000 lbs. of milk daily. Skagit County dairymen are building a $260,000 plant at Burlington with a daily output of 250,000 lbs. of milk. Lewis and Pacific county dairymen will build a plant at Chehalis costing $175,000 and with a daily output of 150,000. Snohomish county dairymen have purchased a plant at Arlington, one of the most modern plants in the country. Besides these projects the dairymen in Grays Harbor have at Satsop what is said to be the largest cheese factory in the country, if not in the world. The output is 3,000 pounds every day in the year.

Kittitas valley, widely known as a hay producing center, shipped 74,000 tons of hay from July 19, 1919, to July 19, 1920, according to figures from the railroad companies.

Governor Hart has made public a letter he has written to Senator Harding, Republican nominee for President, urging that a Western man of experience in reclamation work be appointed secretary of the Interior in the Harding cabinet. At the same time the governor wired the substance of his cabinet suggestion to the governors of Oregon, California, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Nebraska, South Dakota, Kansas, New Mexico and Arizona, asking them to write similar letters to the Republican presidential nominee.

The joint committee from the Chambers of Commerce of Seattle, Portland, Spokane and Montana cities to further the interest in the proposed reclamation congress to be held in Seattle have written Senator Warren Harding Republican candidate for President, inviting him to attend the congress in Seattle. Governor Cox has also been invited.

Seattle has been designated as headquarters of a new district by the United States Chamber of Commerce. An office has been established there and business of importance to the Northwest will be handled directly with the national headquarters at Washington, D. C.

IS ANOTHER EUROPEAN WAR LOOMING?

Lloyd George's statement in parliament of the attitude of Great Britain and France toward Poland and Soviet Russia was frank and illuminating. Poland, he declared, was at fault for attacking the Bolshevik government. It would not leave a sleeping dog alone, and now must make the best terms it can with Lenin and Trotsky. If Russia will confine its punishment to a sound spanking the allies will look on with approval, but beyond that the soviet power must not go. It must not destroy or endanger Polish nationality and independence.

The British premier frankly added that in the event that the Russian dictators should seek the destruction of Poland a difficult situation would arise. The allies, he intimated, would cross that bridge when they came to it. It is not exaggeration to say that another European war is a possibility. The issue rests now with the soviet government. As Lloyd George said, if the Russians want peace they can have it, with an inference in his other utterances that if they want war they can have war.

Britain and France shrink from a grapple with the sovietized Russian bear, and their discretion is not misplaced. They have to consider Germany and the possible undoing of the allied victory over the central powers. On the other hand, it seems probable that Lenin and Trotsky will heed Lloyd George's warning and content themselves with peace terms that will be sufficient warning to Poland not to repeat its folly, but which will yet preserve Poland's nationality. Human nature is not essentially different in Russia than in other countries of Europe, so it seems certain that the Russians are as weary of war as are the French and the British; perhaps more so, for the Russians have been sore sufferers. Economic conditions, too, clamor for peace in soviet Russia.

If Russia were a democracy, like France or Britain, these considerations could be given great weight at this moment. But a military despotism can make its people fight where the heads of a free and democratic government must yield altogether to public opinion. And that, at this moment, is the advantage that Lenin and Trotsky have over Lloyd George and Millerand.—Spokesman-Review.

REALLY MUST BE A GREAT PLACE TO KEEP HOUSE.

At Rapa in the South Pacific, they toil not neither do they spin, and in all the reaches of the Seven Seas it would take a long voyage a find a more lazy population of men than Rapa's. In Rapa, the women are the hewers of wood and the drawers of water. In other happy climes of Micronesia and Polynesia the self-appointed "lord of creation" will deign to raise his hand and pluck for himself the fruit of the banana and orange tree. In Rapa, however, he will not even feed himself. When meal-time comes the woman of the family, after foraging for food and cooking it must also put it into the mouth of her lord and master. They roll the taro "poi" into little balls and toss them into the open mouths of the men folks.

The people of Rapa wear no clothes—or did not until a scandalized white missionary from Tahiti insisted on gathering some old garments from his more favored parishioners in Papeete and hurried them to Rapa.

Rapa, known also as Oparo, is one of the most isolated and most interesting islands in the South Pacific. It lies south of Tahiti, far out in the tropics, included in the French settlements in Oceania and inhabited by Polynesians of the same type as the Tahitians.

It is one of the few spots most lightly touched by the finger of civilization. Seldom does a schooner touch here—not more than once a year—and once in a great while a French gunboat from Papeete will voyage into the Dangerous Archipelago.

The island itself is mountainous, with strange castle-like peaks rising in the interior. It possesses a good harbor, and what is most unique in South Sea islands, has deposits of coal, not of very good quality, though.

When the Panama Canal was nearing completion there was much talk in Tahiti of establishing a coaling station here. Rapa being close to the Southern Great Circle route and admirably adapted to such a purpose, but no such thing has come to rudely shock the serene existence of Rapa men.

ALASKAN FACTS.

The warm Japan ocean current does for Alaska what the Gulf Stream does for Great Britain, Ireland and Norway.

The lumber industry of the United States now has its principal producing center in the Pacific Northwest, where the timber resources are located; it is predicted that the pulpwood producing center of the future will be in Alaska and the Pacific Northwest, for the same reason.

Secretary of Agriculture Meredith believes that the development of the forest hydro-electric resources of Alaska is a practical means of increasing the supplies of newsprint available for the United States, and therefore eventually lessening the paper shortage now so acute.

Western hemlock and spruce are the standard mechanical and sulphite pulpwoods for the United States mills in the Pacific Northwest, the hemlock forms 60 per cent of the merchantable stand of timber on the Tongass National Forest, Alaska.

Aside from newsprint paper, only a few grades of building and mill wrapping paper are made at the British Columbia pulp plants, but hemlock-spruce sulphite fiber is shipped to outside mills for the production of bond, manila, tissue, pure fiber, printings, and other high-grade papers requiring a strong, tough, white fiber; this same system could probably be followed with pulp plants located in Alaska.

WORTH PASTING UP.

From the Pickle Cellar under the caption of "The Matter With America" we glean these excerpts which have been going the rounds until they are somewhat old, but will bear repeating. Cut it out and paste it in your hat, and read it over once each day.

What's the matter with America these days?

Too many diamonds; not enough alarm clocks.

Too many silk shirts; not enough blue flannel ones.

Too many pointed-toe shoes; not enough square-toed ones.

Too many serge suits and not enough overalls.

Too many decollette and not enough aprons.

Too many satin upholstered limousines and not enough cows.

Too many consumers and not enough products.

Too much oil stock and not enough savings accounts.

Too much envy of the results of hard work and too little desire to emulate it.

Too many desiring short cuts to wealth and too few willing to pay the price.

Too much of the spirit of "get while the getting is good," and not enough of the old-fashioned Christianity.

Too much discontent that vents itself in mere complaining and too little real effort to remedy conditions.
