EXCAVATIONS SHOW OLD RACE LIVED ALONG COLUMBIA

Copper Utensils Unearthed Along with Stone Implements.

PORTLAND.—That a race corresponding to the cliff dwellers of Arizona or the Aztecs of Mexico though not so highly civilized as the latter, once lived in the region along the Columbia river is the opinion of George H. Himes, assistant secretary of the Oregon Historical society, who recently returned from the scene of the excavations at Big Eddy, Ore., where skeletons and implements of various kinds were unearthed by a state road construction crew.

Copper utensils which were uncovered along with stone implements and a stone image of the sun correspond to other relics dug up at other points according to Mr. Himes, though some of the objects uncovered in the latest find were of finer workmanship than any in the possession of the historical society.

Mr. Himes expressed the opinion that these articles had been left by a race of people preceding the Indians inhabiting this section at the time of the coming of the white man.

F. B. Hall, who lives at Big Eddy, Ore., uncovered what can nearest be described in modern terms as a vase. It is made of stone and is slightly larger than a teacup, with handles projecting about four inches on each side. It is made of solid stone and is decorated with a symmetrical design formed by a capital "V" standing erect with a capital "W" inverted, the two letters joined.

John Powell found what was apparently an idol worshipped by the tribe, a stone image of the sun. The center of the disc is depressed, forming the sun, while from it to the edge of the circle are wavy lines such as used by modern artists to indicate light waves.

On the cliffs back of Big Eddy many hieroglyphics suggestive of those found in ancient Egypt are to be seen. These are all painted in red, yellow and black colors. In these the sun predominates, images of it appearing in virtually all designs. At one place high on the cliffs, groups of figures of what were evidently intended to represent men may be seen. At another place an excellently designed human face with a hideous grin upon it is painted upon the rocks. The extreme age of these paintings is shown by the fact that many of them have been obliterated by the elements, perfect specimens being seen only in sheltered nooks high on the cliffs.

B. Frazier, a traveling man of Portland reported that on a recent hunting trip he found picture writings chiseled on the cliffs at Roosevelt, Wash., across the Columbia river from Arlington, Ore.

CITY'S GLORY LONG DEPARTED

Petra, Once Great Trade Center, is Now Place Utterly Without Human Inhabitants.

In A. D. 106 one of Trajan's generals conquered Petra, the ancient city of the Nabataeans in Arabia, and created the Roman province of Arabia Petraea, but the city continued to flourish as a trade center under the strong peace of Rome, writes Lowell Thomas in Asia magazine. In those days Petra was the focusing point on the caravan routes from the interior of Arabia, Persia and India to Egypt, Palestine and Syria. It was a great safe deposit of fabulous wealth, for trodden by frowning cliffs. When Roman power waned the Romanized Nabataeans were unable to withstand the desert hordes. The caravan trade was diverted through other channels and Petra declined in importance.

A little more than a century ago, John Lewis Burckhardt, a Swiss traveler, who had heard rumors of a great city of rock lying far out on the fringe of the Arabian desert, penetrated the gorge and found once more this wonderful old city of Petra, which had not been mentioned in any literary record since A. D. 536.

In the century or more since Burckhardt wrote of his discovery of the rock city in a letter from Cairo, only a few explorers and archeologists from the west have visited Petra. The journey is so long and arduous and the danger of violence from Bedouin nomads so great that not many have had the time or zeal to attempt it. The lion and the beard kept the court where Jamshyd gloried and drank deep until Thomas Lawrence brought his fighting Bedouins into this city of tombs and empty palaces.

Great for Fish Bait.

Siamese fishermen do most of their fishing by means of what is known as a ghost boat. This consists of a long board, painted white, and arranged in position in the water. The top must not be too high above the surface of the water for the fish it is desired to capture to leap over. When in position the ghost resembles very much the white side of a boat or punt. The fish, seeing this white board, become frightened, and in fear they leap over the board. At the back of the board, however, nets are arranged in such a position that those fish that succeed in leaping the board land in the nets and are caught. The amount of fish caught by the employment of ghost boats is very large indeed, and the method has the advantage of preventing the smaller fry from getting into the nets, as they are unable to leap over the board.

Largest Venomous Snake.

The bush master is the largest known venomous snake. It inhabits the Amazonian region in South America. Its teeth and poison apparatus resemble those of a rattlesnake, and the fangs are very large. Death has been known to occur within 10 minutes after the bite of one of these reptiles. It lives in dens and holes in the ground, frequenting river banks and does not climb trees. This snake attains a length of 12 to 15 feet; the color of its body is yellowish pink, with brown patterns and tints of purple.

LONG LABORING CENTER

Since 1665 Ypres Has Been Celebrated for the Excellence of its Manufactures.

It was in 1665 that the manufacture of lace, now known as Valenciennes, was begun at Ypres, and with other cities and towns and hamlets in Flanders the clack of the bobbins and the chatter of the lacemakers may once more be heard. Many a little village is re-establishing its industry and is finding its ready a market as it did before the war. Flemish laces have always been favorites in England from the time when Henry VIII in 1546 made a present of "kerchiefs fringed with Flemish work" to "his verrie deare wife," Catherine Parr. Lace making was part of the education of women in the Low Countries in the latter part of the fifteenth century, and Charles V ordered it to be taught in the schools, but in 1699 it was not only a flourishing industry in Belgium but, with the approval of Louis XIV, a Manufacture Royal de Dentelles was founded, and lacemakers from Flanders were brought to France, as Flemish lace was even more sought after than Italian lace. It was at this time that some of the most famous "points" first appeared and were developed. The "point de Bruxelles," which is made with the needle, and "Blanche" lace, the queen of all pillow lace, as well as "point d'Angleterre," in which pillow and needlework are mingled, all enhanced the reputation of the Flemish designers.

RABBIT PELTS IN DEMAND

Country Boys Have Opportunity to Make Some Money During the Coming Winter Months.

In recent years several kinds of fur, formerly of so little value as to offer no inducement to the trapper, have increased in price, and consequently collecting them has been made profitable.

Rabbit pelts, which are extensively used by hat makers, are among these products. Formerly rabbit skins were of virtually no value; country boys who eagerly sought the fair of the skunk and the raccoon and who were even able to sell squirrel skins, thought so little of the rabbit and made so little effort to dispose of skins that they were seldom used except to form a pad on which they "knocked down" in the marble game. Now, however, rabbit skins are worth something, and the country boy who will devote this winter to saving and marketing the skins of the rabbits he kills should make a comfortable sum of money.

One big eastern firm has announced that it will need 10,000,000 rabbit skins. The skins are usually sold by the pound, which will contain seven or eight skins.

No Place to Boil It Then.

At the bank of the Missouri river, one mile west, I questioned a man who replied that he had heard nothing about Sitting Bull. I then asked him whether it was true that they drank the Missouri river water, which was rolling by us like a tidal wave of sand. "No," he said, "we can't do that, but we often break off a piece and suck it like molasses candy."—Fred Copeland in the Youth's Companion.

TRAFFIC MANAGER BACK.

World's Manager Edwin Smith of the Wenatchee Valley Traffic Association returned Tuesday from St. Paul.

Cold Weather SUGGESTIONS

For Your Car

- AUTO ROBES
- HOOD AND RADIATOR COVERS
- WINDSHIELD CLEANERS
- SPOT LIGHTS
- HOT SHOT BATTERIES

And OH YES—before you forget it, better put a gallon of denatured alcohol in your radiator before it is too late.

Cascade Garage

T. E. PAINE, Proprietor

and Chicago where he had been for three months looking after the interests of the shippers of the district in the way of refrigerator supply.

It is needless to say that Mr. Smith is highly pleased with the service that has been given by the Great Northern in co-operation with the Car Supply Commission. The bulk of the crop has been moved on time without any delay or damage, in fact the service has been the best ever received by the District.

A meeting of the Traffic Association has been called for Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Commercial Club rooms at which time Mr. Smith will make a report on his work in the east, as well as on the prospects for next year as they relate to car supply problems.

Another important subject that will come up at the meeting is the proposal made by Yakima valley growers and shippers to change the state grading rules back to the two grade plan, combining the Fancy and C grade into one. This question will come up at the Spokane convention of the state horticultural society.

The street signs are now being put up about the city, preparatory to the installation of village delivery. The house numbers will no doubt soon be in place.

H. E. Jacobson, a truck driver, was arrested at Wenatchee for larceny and forgery and sentenced to six months in the county jail and to pay a fine of $250.

Jock Miller has been in a condition which the authorities considered dangerous, and he has been taken into custody, with a view to the best interests of himself and the public.
