They were married at Leavenworth Dec. 21, 1917, and have one child. The plaintiff asks for absolute divorce, $50 per month and the care of the child. She alleges that her husband has neglected to contribute to the support of herself and child and claims that he is able to do so.

DAM HERE PROBABLY SAFE.

According to the Wenatchee World, County Engineer John Duff thinks that there is danger of the dam at Leavenworth going out. Mr. T. G. Jarvis, an old employe of the Great Northern Lumber Co., who is watching the dam closely, informed the Echo yesterday that the dam is holding and he believes that it will not go out. The river is still high and it may go higher. This is doubtful, however, as it has gone down at intervals then up and down again, indicating that the high water mark for this season has probably been reached—unless an unusually heavy rain should come.

Attorney Lindley has discovered what he believes is a sure cure for sleeping sickness. He and Mrs. Lindley, their son, C. C., and wife and Miss Gilbert, of Wenatchee, drove to Fish Lake Saturday and remained over night. They happened to drop in at the time of the annual powow of the Mosquito tribes of North Central Washington, who had invited all their kinsmen from the Pacific to the Rocky Mountain Divide, and all were present, according to Lindley. Saturday night all the "old heads" were giving a demonstration of all the latest bites and several fancy and long-distance bite races were also down on the program. Not caring to butt in on the skeeters, the Lindley party retired but the skeeters soon missed them and extended an urgent invitation to them, and all other visitors, to sit the night out, which invitation was duly accepted and our legal-minded townsman is ready to defend, in court or out, the allegation that one suffering from sleeping sickness would have been aroused, dead or alive, here or in heaven, had he been present at that party.
