POPE PIUS X IS CROWNED

ST. PETERS WAS CROWDED WITH 70,000 PEOPLE.

Cardinal Macchi Placed the Triple
Crown on the Head of Venerable
Pontiff—Fifty-seven Years Since
Last Ceremony—Pope Was Wildly
Cheered—He Blessed the Audience.

Rome, Aug. 10.—The ceremony of the coronation of Pope Pius X. took place Sunday in the basilica of St. Peter's, in the presence of the princes of the church and with all the solemnity and splendor associated with this the most magnificent rite in the Roman Catholic church. As Cardinal Macchi, the dean of the cardinal deacons, placed the triple crown on the head of the venerable pontiff, the throng of seventy thousand persons gathered within the cathedral burst into unrestrained acclamations, the choir intoned a hymn of triumph and the bells of Rome rang out a joyful peal.

It is 57 years since the Romans and Europe assisted at such a function as was held in St. Peter's. The great basilica, popularly supposed never to have been quite full, was overflowing with humanity. The papal throne, owing to a bewildering mixture of gold, red and silver, was erected in front of the high altar. As, contrary to custom on these ceremonious occasions, there were no galleries, the basilica bore more of its normal aspect. On the altar which was dressed in white, stood the famous silver gold candlesticks and magnificent crucifix. All the available standing space within the cathedral was divided into sections by wooden barriers, which, to a certain extent, kept the vast crowd in order.

When the doors were opened the inrush was terrific, many who started from the bottom of the steps outside being lifted off their feet and carried into the cathedral. It was a great human torrent let loose, thousands of people rushing, crushing and squeezing amid screams, protests, gesticulations and cries for help. But once in the cathedral there was no escape and the compactness of the crowd proved to be the safety of those who were caught in it. Women fainted in comparatively large numbers and even men were overcome by heat, but no serious accidents were reported. Fortunately there were very few children present. After their entrance the people had further long hours of waiting, and it is computed that the majority were on their feet altogether ten hours before the ceremony began.

The procession was a long time in getting under way, but afterwards as it moved through the magnificent halls and corridors of the vatican it recalled former days when all was color and picturesqueness with the palace. The pope was the central figure in the long procession. White robes and the mitre were worn without an effort, making a vivid contrast to those memorable occasions on which Pope Leo XIII. wore them, for Leo seemed always unable to support their weight. Over the pontiff's head a canopy was held by eight men, while the historic ostrich feather fans with peacock tips gave a touch of barbaric splendor to western eyes.

Surrounding Pope Pius X. were the noble guards in new red uniforms and gleaming helmets and carrying drawn swords, while in front marched the cardinals, a gorgeous bit of color with many handsome faces among them, the cardinal bishops in their capes, the cardinal priests wearing chasubles and the cardinal deacons in the delmaticas.

Another figure which evoked murmurs of admiration and craning of necks was the chaplain in his crimson cape, proudly bearing the cushion on which reposed the famous triple crown so soon to rest on the head of Pius X. He was accompanied by the pontifical jeweler and by a special guard composed of Swiss, and was followed by the choir of the Sistina chapel. At the right of the throne stood Prince Orsini, the assistant to the papal throne, who withdrew his recent resignation of the post in order to participate in the function.

Besides the pope were the major-domo, Mgr. Caraino; the master of the chamber, Mgr. Bisleti; the master of ceremonies, Mgr. Riggi, and Dr. Laponi. The pontiff was very pale, but composed. The low ceiling sent back an exquisite echo of the "Tu Es Petrus," sung by the Sistina choir, whose voices were heard outside in the piazza of St. Peter's.

Cardinal Rampolla, advancing with dignity, knelt at the foot of the pope. He then said:
"I offer an act of obedience to your holiness and wish you a prosperous and glorious pontificate."
The cardinal recalled that the bodies of the first pope and of St. Paul rested in the basilica, which fact, he said, was of good augury for the work of the new head of the Catholic church. The pontiff was visibly touched, and, answering in a trembling voice, warmly thanked the cardinals for their well wishes.
"Good wishes," he said, "are extremely precious."
The procession then reformed and proceeded to the door of the basilica, through which Pius X. gave an almost terror stricken glance, whispering to Dr. Laponi: "Shall I ever be able to go through with it?"
The people in the basilica had in the meantime become impatient and when the gleaming cross which preceded the cortege was seen it was greeted with great applause. On the appearance of the pontiff himself it seemed as though the people would seek to carry him in their arms, so great was their enthusiasm.

Cries of "Pius, our pope, our father," and "Long live Pius X." were raised, notwithstanding the large placards posted all over the basilica saying "Acclamations are forbidden."

Leaflets to the same effect were distributed until the pontiff was compelled to rise and bless the multitude and at the same time he made a sign for more reverential behavior. Silence was enforced when the choir announced its entrance with the "Ecce Sacros Magnus," which was accompanied by the sweet notes of the silver trumpets.

A quiet ceremony was then carried out. The master of ceremonies knelt three times before the pontiff, each time lighting a handful of hemp, which surmounted a silver torch, and as the flames rushed up and went out he said:
"Holy father, thus passeth away the glory of the world."
The procession then proceeded, the pope's face meanwhile illuminated by a smile. At the chapel of the sacrament there was another halt and his holiness left the sedia chair and prayed at the altar. On reentering the chair he was carried to the chapel of St. Gregory, where he officiated at mass, being assisted by Cardinals Macchi, Di Pietro, Signa and Vanutelli. Then all the cardinals donned their silver capes and white mitres and the pope was borne to the throne amid renewed acclamation and waving of handkerchiefs and hats.

ANOTHER NEGRO HANGED.

He Had Shot Jailer Sexton in Attempted Jailbreak.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Aug. 10.—A negro, Amos Jones, was hanged by a mob here for shooting and mortally wounding Jailer M. M. Sexton. Jones and another negro named McElroy, who were prisoners, seized Sexton, intending to break from the jail. McElroy threw Sexton down, and two white youths, also prisoners, held him. The negroes disarmed Sexton and Jones shot him, inflicting three wounds that are said to be fatal.

A crowd gathered outside the jail, while a deputy and several others entered and overpowered the other prisoners. In the confusion McElroy escaped from the jail. The crowd outside decided to lynch Jones. Prominent men urged them to desist, and the wounded jailer sent word to leave the man unharmed. The mob later seized Sheriff Bateson and tied him. The fire brigade was requested to turn out and help disperse the mob, but refused.

The mob then broke into a window of the jail and cut the negro out of his cell with chisels. He was brought out to the crowd of about 500 men and boys, a rope was tied around his neck and he was dragged through the town to the Gordon creek bridge, where he was hung to a telegraph pole and bullets fired into his body. It is thought he was dead before he was hanged.

BREWSTER, WASH., BURNED.

Principal Business Portion Destroyed—Two Business Houses Left.
Brewster, Wash., Aug. 10.—Fire has destroyed the principal business portion of this town. Only two business houses are left standing. The loss is about $40,000, with a total insurance of $63,000.

Brewster is located on the Columbia river, near the mouth of the Okanogan river, and is a town of about 200 inhabitants.

The fire originated in Dr. McKinley's drug store. Flames were first discovered coming from the front of the drug store. The most generally accepted theory is that the extreme heat of the sun against the glass of the show window caused some of the chemicals to explode and start the blaze.

The wind was strong, and despite the heroic work of the men and use of innumerable so called fire extinguishers, the fire gained rapidly and soon had three fourths of the town wrapped in flames.

NINETY LIVES BLOTTED OUT

AWFUL ACCIDENT ON ELECTRIC RAILWAY IN PARIS.

Trains Broke In Two and Caught Fire in Tunnel—Panic Ensued—Officials
Excited—Eighty-Two Bodies Have Been Recovered From Burned Ruins —Firemen Flooded Burning Mass.

Paris, Aug. 12.—An awful catastrophe has occurred on the Metropolitan electric railway which runs mostly underground, in which many persons are believed to have lost their lives.

One of the trains broke down at Menilmontant, which is a poor and populous section of the city. This train was promptly emptied and the train which followed was ordered to push it to the repair sheds. On the way these two trains caught fire, but the employes succeeded in escaping. Meanwhile, a crowded train reached Les Charonnes, the preceding station, and the officials seeing smoke pouring out of the tunnel, gave the alarm.

A panic ensued, the passengers struggling to escape. Amid the increasing smoke many attempted to return along the line toward Belleville and were suffocated.

The officials seem to have lost their heads and are unable to say how many passengers went out. The firemen for several hours were unable to enter the station or the tunnel, owing to the dense smoke which poured out in black clouds. Meanwhile, tens of thousands of anxious people gathered about the station. All the police and fire engines were on the spot and the excitement was intense.

Finally the firemen succeeded in flooding the burning mass and shortly afterward they were able to enter the tunnel. They brought up the corpses of five men and two women, all belonging to the working class.

Eighty two bodies have been recovered from the trains which were burned on the Metropolitan electric railway. The total number of victims is estimated at 90.
