Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Babies are the mainsprings of watches of the night.

When your vanity punctures its tire your pride is apt to get a severe concussion.

The man who goes a mile out of his way to attack a public abuse usually has strong personal interests as a big plank in his philanthropical platform.

Some people who act the fool aren't really acting.

Some women are so weak that they will allow their husbands to force their entire salaries on them.

The people who loudly declare that they don't like to waste time in sleep are apt to be found with a rooted objection to wasting it in work also.

The preacher who follows his calling too strenuously sometimes has difficulty in calling his following.

Hope is the club that nature has given us to hit despair over the head with.

Sometimes beauty is in the eye of the gazer and sometimes in the powder boxes of the corner druggist.

He who doesn't advertise his business today may find others advertising his failure tomorrow.

Dangers of It.

It isn't good
To eat too much
Upon Thanksgiving day.
It's nice to feed,
But it is tough
To hear the doctor say:
"Your case is not
A hopeless one.
In bed a week or two
If you will stay
And starve yourself,
I think we'll pull you through."

The turkey may
Be very fine,
The dressing flavored right,
But think about
The awful dreams
When you lie down at night.
Don't strive to load
Up with so much
That when you doze away
You'll dream about
Your sins and such
And spoil Thanksgiving day.

So only eat
A bird or two,
A barrel full of sauce,
Some dressing and
Such other things
As you may run across,
And take a chance
On being sick
And having dreams run queer,
Because you know,
Thanksgiving comes
Not over once a year.

It Counts Up.

"All is fair in love and war."
"Yes, and also when you take a party of friends about the city for a street car ride."

Interchangeable.
"I understand he promises to become a great actor."
"Yes; he has wonderful promise."
"What does he make a specialty of, comedy or tragedy?"
"Both. When he plays comedy it is tragedy, and when he plays tragedy it is rip roaring comedy."

That Even Tone.
"That is the picture of a man of spotless character."
"Why, I thought he was a noted criminal."
"Yes, but he has been painted so black that the color is perfect."

Time.
While the world is growing older
All the ladies younger grow;
When youth's flames begin to smolder
Father Time grows bold and bolder,
And he hits out from the shoulder.
Him the ladies do not know.
While the world is growing older
All the ladies younger grow.

Cets More.
"He has drunk his last glass of liquor."
"Saw the error of his ways and reformed?"
"No; he drinks it out of a can now."

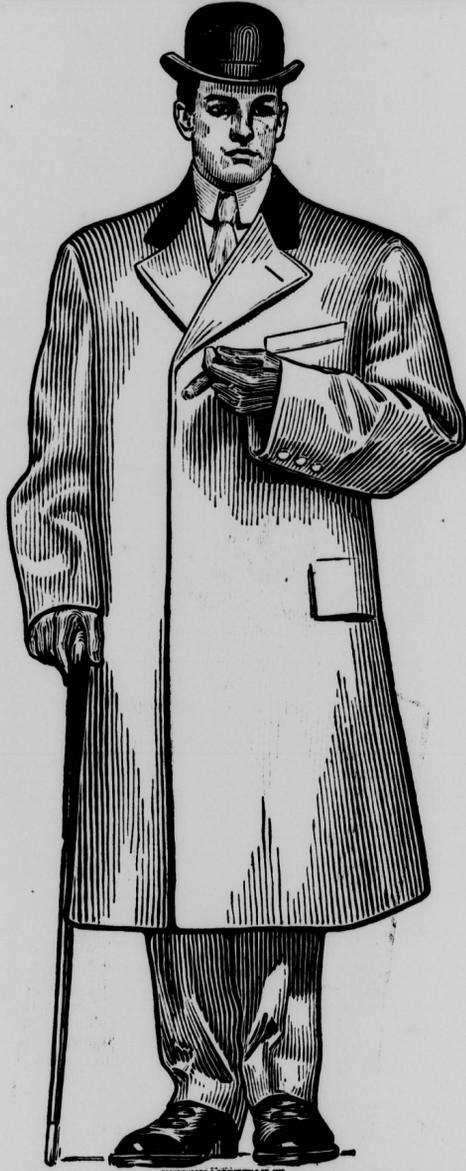

For the Quiet Life.
"He is going to marry a lady who is a popular lecturer."
"On the theory, I presume, that she will not talk shop at home."

Distinguished.
"He bears his honors modestly."
"I didn't know he had been honored."
"Yes; he was recently operated on for appendicitis."

Irresistible.
"It is not right to judge a woman by the company she keeps."
"No, indeed; the man may have an auto."
