The Swiftest Yet.

William B. Hibbs, a Washington broker, has a big country place just outside of Leesburg, Va. He put a large searchlight on top of his stone water tower and from time to time at night amuses himself by throwing the light around the country.

One night last summer Hibbs was on the tower playing with the searchlight. A Virginian driving a skittish team hitched to a surrey, in which there were two ladies, was coming along a road leading to Leesburg and was about four miles from the village.

Hibbs threw the searchlight down the road.

"Gosh darn it," exclaimed the Virginian, "here comes one of those pesky automobiles!" He jumped out and took the horses by their heads. The light continued on the road for half a minute and then was switched away. The Virginian stood stupefied. Then he turned to the ladies and said in an awed voice: "Jeezus! That automobile must be going fast. It's gone by, and I didn't even see it!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Not Noticeable.

"That horrid cat!"
 "What is the matter, girl?"
 "Oh, the cat went to sleep on my new hat, and I wore her down town and back!"—Washington Herald.

Vic Kennard's shoe, with which he booted the field goal which beat Yale last season, has been emblazoned as a trophy at Harvard. The upper part of the shoe has been painted crimson, with the score of the game, 4 to 0, embellished upon it, while the sole has been painted blue.

Brothers who have made good on the big varsity elevens are the Millses, Traffords and Brewers, at Harvard; Hinkeys, at Yale; Poes, at Princeton; Felwells, at Pennsylvania; Glazes, at Dartmouth; Warners, at Cornell, and the Weekses and Snows, at Michigan.

The plan of numbering football players, it is declared, never will go on teams that have anything like a complicated attack. It would take coaches on the side lines about two plays to know what was going on if the opposing backs were distinguished by numbers that could be read in the stands by the spectators.
