SONG OF THE WHALE.

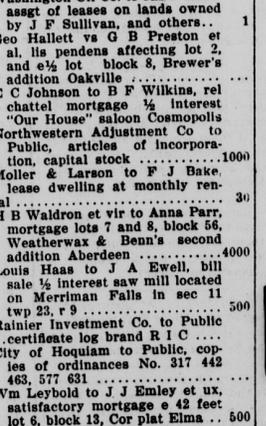

The Humpback is a Little More Musical Than the Bowhead. Whales are rarely thought of as vocalists, yet according to Miss A. D. Cameron in "The New North" they really have a distinctive song of their own.

A certain Captain Kelly was the first to notice that whales sing. One Sunday, while officers from three whaling ships were "gamming" over their afternoon walrus meat, Kelly started up with "I hear a bowhead!" There was much chaffing about "Kelly's band," but Kelly weighed anchor and went to find the band wagon. Every soul followed him, with the result that three whales were bagged.

Among bowheads this singsong is a call that the leader of the school, as he forces a passage through Bering sea makes in order to notify those that follow that the straits are clear of ice. Walrus and seals and all true mammals that have lungs and live in the water have a bark that sounds strange enough as it comes up from hidden depths. Every lookout from the mast head notices that when one whale is struck the whole school is "galloped" or stampeded at the very impact of the harpoon; they have heard the death song.

E. CLARENCE AIKEN.

Doing the work that is enjoyed is never a drudgery, and most people enjoy the work which makes a profit. An antitoxin has been developed which is effective in curing or relieving about 50 per cent of the hay fever cases in which it is used. We never realized until the other day how pretty a bouquet a bunch of bright red blossomed balsams make. While they are short lived, both leaves and blossoms make an effective combination. The consumption of veal calves is said to be two or three times greater today than it was ten years ago, and this is given as one of the chief contributing causes of the present high price of beef cattle.

WHOLE FRUIT JAM.

How to Successfully Make This Delicatable and Wholesome Dainty. Allow one pound of crushed fruit sugar for each pound of fruit. Heat the sugar in the oven and when very hot remove it and stir the fruit in it till the sugar is entirely dissolved, then pour in jars and seal.

Another recipe is as follows: Have ready the fruit, gathered on a dry day, and pick out a certain proportion of the finest. Weigh these and put them in a pan sprinkled with an equal weight of fine preserving sugar, being careful when doing this to sprinkle the sugar in gradually in layers with the fruit, so as not to crush the latter, and leave them till next day. In the mean time take the rest of the fruit, together with some peeled and sliced stalks of rhubarb, and cook it all gently in a covered jar till the juice has flowed freely from it; then place it in a sieve and strain off all the liquid possible. Now take this juice and pour it over the sweetened fruit previously put on one side and leave this to soak together for twenty-four hours, allowing from one to two gills of juice to each pound of the preserved fruit, the quantity of added juice depending a great deal on whether the preserve is to be very juicy or not. Now pour off all the juice which will have appeared and put it on to boil with an equal weight of pure cane sugar, allowing it to boil up rapidly, and when it does lay in the whole fruit and boil all together for twelve to fifteen minutes, straining it very gently so as not to break the fruit and removing every particle of scum as it rises. This preserve is said to be well worth the trouble, for the fruit will be found quite firm and plump, as well as tender, while the sirup round it will be of a creamy consistency and delicious in flavor. Almost any fruit can be preserved in this way.

The largest mule in the world is said to have been burned in a fire which destroyed a livery barn at Trenton, Mo., the other day. The animal was four years old, weighed 2,010 pounds and was valued at $1,000.

Glance at the trees just outside your lots on the roadway and see if limbs hang down so low from them as to scratch the head of the fellow who goes by on a load of hay. There are lots of just such limbs that need trimming.

None of the flowering plants are easier to propagate than the plox. Simply take pieces of a vigorous stalk containing dormant buds and put in moist earth or sand. In a short time the rootlets will start and the new plant will grow vigorously.

The railroads are not making a very loud noise these days about their yards and sidetracks being encumbered with empty freight cars. A bumper grain crop is being moved to market, and everything on wheels will have to be called into service to handle it.

ADVICE TO BRIDES.

How to Dress Quietly For the Wedding Ceremony. On her wedding day the bride should allow plenty of time to dress. If possible lounge a few minutes after the bath. Then dress leisurely in all but the dress itself, don a loose kimono and sit down with the feet on a comfortable hassock and rest quietly with a book or perhaps manicure the nails or find some light occupation until it is time to put on the dress. This should have been tried on and known to be all ready so that it need not be put on until a few minutes before the ceremony. In this way it will not be crumpled from sitting around in it, nor will the wearer be tired and hot and disheveled from being fully dressed for half an hour or so before the ceremony.

The veil, of course, is the piece de resistance, and the bride must decide exactly how far it is to cover the face. Be sure to wear your wedding corsets once or twice beforehand, both in order to see that they are just right and to remove any awkwardness in wearing them. Never get a smaller size for the occasion than you are in the habit of wearing, and in any case wear that very pair when you are fitted for the dress to insure its perfect fit, as no two pairs of corsets are exactly alike.

All these little details will help more than you think to keep the face free from unbecoming tired or fretful lines on your wedding day.

How to Earn Money. One girl earns money each season preserving fruit. She makes a specialty of peaches and quinces, which she prepares in the following manner: Pare and cut in halves large peaches. To one teacupful of water add one-half pound of sugar; boil for five minutes. Then drop in two pounds of fruit, cook until tender, then remove fruit to plates, cover with the sirup and place in the oven to dry, turning each piece often.

In about twelve hours the fruit will have absorbed the sirup and be dry enough to roll in granulated sugar, after which it should be placed in the sun for an hour. It will then be ready to be boxed for sale.

Quinces are cooked first in water until tender, then pared and put through a sieve. To one pound of fruit add one pound of pulverized sugar; boil until thick, then spread on plates to dry. When dry cut in squares and roll in granulated sugar.

One more term candidate's favorite reply to the telling, unanswerable arguments of Governor Wilson is that the latter's opinions are based "not on actual knowledge and experience, but by reading musty books on political economy." The colonel himself at a tender age was put at hard labor! It is not often that a man whose whole life has been given up to politics and officeholding gets as horny handed as Mr. Roosevelt in the ranks of labor and high finance.

There has been considerable increase lately in the cultivation of the ever bearing strawberry.

In Argentina the supply of beef animals is steadily and regulated by a law which prohibits the killing of the females of the species before they have reached a certain age.

There are a good many homesteads where a day's work might be done in trimming up trees whose lower branches sag and shut the sunshine from the house.

An interesting feature of several state fairs this fall will be Guernsey and Jersey bulls—usually excitable and dangerous—broken and hitched to carts and driven by children.

Estimates which have lately been compiled by the postoffice department put at $125,000,000 the amount out of which easy and glib investors have been swindled during the fiscal year closing June 30, 1912.

A short time since the writer spent a week in a suburb of Chicago, and was impressed with the remarkable vigor and thriftiness, as well as glossy, of foliage of the cottonwood trees that were growing on the borders of the streets and boulevards.

In Scandinavia the wedding shirt is an important part of the husband's marriage outfit. It is usual for the groom, among other gifts, to bestow upon his bride a prayer book.
