SOUNDS FISHY.
 A horticulturist, George Snavely, living at Sandy Grove, near Harrisburg, W. Va., is said to have succeeded in grafting a tomato stalk on a potato vine and having the plant reproduce itself, a feat that has never before been accomplished. The facts may be as reported in this case, but they sound decidedly fishy, and it would take ocular proof to convince the average man that the tubers from the potato vine on which this tomato stalk had been grafted would ever produce stalks that would bear tomatoes or that the seed from a tomato produced on the inserted tomato vine would ever develop a root system that would produce a Murphy. If a potato blossom were cross fertilized with pollen from a tomato blossom a plant might be developed which would produce both tomatoes and tubers, but the chances seem dead against its ever being accomplished by a process of top grafting.

No, This Is Not a "Joy Ride!"
 Merely Eaton Jury on Duty

IN this age of speedy autos and speedier air craft this picture looks odd indeed. It shows the jury in the trial of Mrs. Eaton on a charge of murdering her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton, retired, in a big cart drawn by four oxen. The jury was taken from Plymouth, Mass., to Assinippi, Mass., where the Eatons lived. The jurors received a good jolting over the country roads by this antiquated method of traveling. It was as novel to them as it was uninteresting. The cart and the oxen belong to the county jail, being used on the farm which supplies the prisoners with food.

CAESAR AS AN EPILEPTIC.

Glimpse of the Famous Conqueror That Are Not Inspiring.

Says Mark Antony, who had evidently seen the great Caesar in convulsions: "When the fit was on I marked how he did shake; 'tis true, this god did shake." Again: "Ye gods, it doth amaze me a man of such a feeble temper should so get the start of the majestic world and bear the palm alone."

We would hardly recommend horseback riding to an epileptic, "but by dint of perseverance," says the historian Oplius, "Caesar became an expert horseman, often dictating to two or three secretaries at once while in the saddle, and rode without using his hands." We have had a somewhat similar experience in our own practice, where the patient, unlike Caesar, gave up epilepsy while continuing as a horse trainer.

When Caesar came to unbridge rivers during his campaigns he swam across them, sometimes helped by inflated bladders, but usually unaided. Once, having a seizure in the water, he cried out, you remember: "Help me, Cassius, or I perish."

He explored personally and afoot, conquered cities, accompanied by way of precaution by but one or two servants—an admirable precaution for epileptics when at all possible. He needed to be careful. If he had lived in the gluttonous days of Caligula or Nero and had to any extent indulged in their dietary excesses, he never would have crossed the Rubicon nor effected the important victory over Pompey the Great at Pharsalia, and the protests of his nervous system in the way of convulsions would have been more numerous.

He paid the strictest attention to his hair, although he had so little of it. Like the rest of the baldheaded the world over, he allowed this occipital fringe to grow long, and boldly combed it forward, like a vine over a blank wall, in the vain hope of concealing his frontal baldness, the touch of nature that makes the whole bald world kin.—Dr. Matthew Woods in Neale's Monthly.

FOOD TABOOS IN ALASKA.

Queer Dietary Rules That Are Part of the Eskimo Religion.

To illustrate one of the phases of the native religion of the Eskimos, we may consider the question of food taboos. In the mountains of Alaska, on the upper Kuvuk and Noatak rivers, and on the headwaters of the Colville, the prohibitions which applied to the eating of the flesh of the mountain sheep alone were as extensive as the entire dietary section of the Moslem law. A young girl, for instance, might eat only certain ribs, and when she was a little older she might eat certain other ribs, but when she was full grown she would for a time have to abstain from eating the ribs which had been allowed to her up to then.

After a woman had had her first child she might eat certain other ribs, after her second child still others, and only after having had five children might she eat all the ribs; but even then she must not eat the membranes on the inside of the ribs. If her child was sick she must not eat certain ribs, and if two of her children were sick she might not eat certain other ribs. If her brother's child was sick she might not eat certain parts, and if her brother's wife died there were still different prohibitions.

The taboos applying to the ribs of sheep had relation to the health of her children and of her relatives. They also depended upon what animals her relatives or herself had killed recently and on whether those animals were male or female.—V. Stefansson in Harper's Magazine.

Old Viking Funerals.
 A Viking ship was often of large proportions, and it was seldom or never allowed to rot or to be broken up.

Having been useful in the arts of war, it served quite another purpose in the arts of peace. When a chief died his body was reverently placed in the stern of the vessel and a torch applied to the hold. The man's kinsfolk and friends watched the flames grow bigger and brighter as the huge ship, with set sail, plowed its way through the water for the last time until corpse and ship disappeared under the waves.

What's the Answer?
 What gives us our sense of loathing for the garden toad, demurely useful little neighbor that he has proved himself, while his second cousin, the frog, who seems to do nothing but play the dandy and the boulevardier, is uniformly treated as a good fellow? If the toad gulped and croaked all night long and made his home in slimy pools instead of in the meadow patch, would they reverse their present order in our esteem?—Atlantic.

New Dishes.
 What new dishes have you had since you have had your new French cook? asked Mrs. Squire of a friend whom she met one morning. "Oh, a whole new dinner set," replied the other, "and several pieces of cut glass, and she's only been with us about a week."—Harper's Magazine.

Not Impressed.
 "I know no north, no south, no east, no west," declared the impassioned orator. "You are also just as badly mixed in several other respects," commented an old farmer in the audience.—Pittsburgh Post.

WIT OF A MORO UMPIRE.

He Had Learned to Know How to Use It.
 Captain John E. Morris of the Sixth Infantry was at one time, some years ago, stationed with his company in some inaccessible Moro town. Morris thought that if the Moros of his district could become interested in some sporting stunt outside of head hunting the United States insurance companies' mortality tables could readily be readjusted so far as soldiers were concerned, so he encouraged his men to teach the Moros baseball. When a man is playing baseball he is not chopping off heads, and Captain Morris appreciated this fact.

Two baseball teams were organized, a Moro team and a team from Morris' company, and one day the first game of the series was to be pulled off. The question of the umpire was the great one of the moment, and after much discussion a native Moro was selected to pass upon the fine points of the game.

In Filipino "umpire" is properly expressed as "makifula," and when Captain Morris arrived on the scene of the proposed ball game the Moro who was to be umpire approached him. "Makifula, me," remarked the Moro. Captain Morris looked at the native umpire without in the slightest understanding what he was driving at. "I'm glad you are a 'makifula,'" he remarked, "but please inform me what the word means." "Means makifula of Americans," replied the Moro. "Me learn American language fast."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Counting a Herring Catch.
 The fact that the record catch of herrings was 320 crans is proof positive that they were captured on the east coast of Scotland. On the west of Scotland herrings are counted, not measured. A "maze" of herrings is five long hundreds, and a long hundred is 123. At Yarmouth and Grimsby they are counted by the "warp," which is four, and thirty-three of these make a long hundred. Ten hundreds make a "thousand" and ten "thousand" a "blast." Therefore, when is a hundred not a hundred?—London Standard.

A fool and his money are soon spotted.

Mutual Concessions.
 "Bliggins and his wife seem to be on the best of terms."
 "Yes. They make mutual concessions. He stands on the corner and shouts 'Votes for women,' while she cheers every time the home team scores a run."—Washington Star.

Doesn't Work Both Ways.
 "I told him he resembled his wife, and he seemed very much flattered."
 "Yes. I told his wife she resembled him, and she won't speak to me."—Houston Post.

DISTLER WINS CASE

OLYMPIA, Nov. 20.—In the Chehalis county case of Adolph Distler against the Grays Harbor & Puget Sound railway, the supreme court affirms the lower court in awarding Distler damages in the sum of $1,115 against the company. Distler owns some property in Cosmopolis abutting on the street over which the Cosmopolis council granted a franchise to the railroad. He sued for damages and it was stipulated that it should be tried as though an original action for damages by condemnation. The supreme court permits the verdict of the lower court to stand.

HOQUIAM BOULEVARD

HOQUIAM, Nov. 20.—In adopting resolutions Wednesday ordering the improvement of portions of Riverside and Shippon avenues, the city commission inaugurated one of the most important pieces of work to be undertaken during the coming year. These improvements are to be part of the Hoquiam-Aberdeen boulevard system, in the building of which the county commissioners and the city council of Aberdeen are to cooperate with the Hoquiam commission.

J. C. C. SLIM PRINCESS
 TO be attractively corseted is to wear the new J. C. C. Slim Princess. The designer of this model, one of the J. C. C. line, had in mind the ideal corset for the slender woman and the growing girl.

In the J. C. C. Slim Princess that idea has been attained to a degree of perfection that you would not have believed possible.

$1.25
 NOTE—The Slim Princess is not boned at the side, a feature which slender women will particularly appreciate.
