PREPARING FOR A SCIENTIFIC TARIFF.

The Ways and Means committee of the House of Representatives in Washington has now before it a bill providing for a non-partisan tariff commission, with a view of furnishing a scheme of tariff that will not only be scientific but will take that issue forever out of politics, and make possible the conduct of a presidential campaign without the economic disturbances that prevail under the present system.

Under the proposed law the shackles of politics will be stricken from the tariff issue, an issue that has been exceedingly prolific of governmental corruption for more than a generation. It should be borne in mind that the establishment of the non-partisan tariff commission does not carry with it the idea of making tariff schedules higher, more than it also represents the counter proposition of making tariff rates lower. It is not a device for either high or low tariff, but a means to ascertain what specific rates should be, whether more or less, as conditions prescribe. In practice, the labors of the commission would undoubtedly result in the lowering of some schedules, increase of some others, on the one hand keeping in view encouragement of our industries and the safeguarding of native enterprise and its millions of wage earners from being flooded by the inroads of the pauper wage scales of Europe—on the other, prevention of tariff becoming a cloak for monopoly and special privilege. The requirements as between higher and lower tariff should be measured primarily by the difference between the low wages of labor in Europe and the wage for labor here, a sufficient scale being maintained to safeguard the American laborer against cheap labor abroad. Not high, not low, tariff, for high or low tariff's sake, but adjustment of tariff schedules, be they higher or lower, for the good of the whole people, is the goal of the campaign for non-political tariff commission.
