HE KNEW A GOOD PLAY.

The Sagacious Canine Didn't Even Have to Read It. One day I brought to my rooms in Twenty-third street a box of old manuscripts. Death and Trap, a bulldog and fox terrier, stood by and looked on idly while I as idly looked over the plays. Suddenly Trap flew at a heap of manuscripts and seized a printed book. We tried to get it from him. He dashed about the room, under and over the bed.

The landlady opened the door. Out went Trap, nearly upsetting my landlady. My brother Sam and I rushed after the dog. Trap headed down Twenty-third street direct to the Lyceum theater, play in mouth. In and out among cats and cubs, pedestrians and Jesus, that wonderful dog went directly to the box office of the theater. Frank Bunce, the business manager, beheld him. "What has he got there?" said he. "A play," said I. "Does he want me to read it?" said Bunce. "If you please," I replied. "Take it upstairs to Mr. Frohman," said the business manager.

"Was done. Frohman read it. He accepted and produced it. The play had been written twenty years before for my father by Madison Morton and Robert Reece. They called it "Trade." Frohman christened it "The Highest Bidder." The play was a great success and started both Dan Frohman and myself on the waters of prosperity.—Edward H. Sothern's "The Melancholy Tale of Me."

Harriman Told Him.

Harriman had an almost supernatural instinct for knowing what was going on and who was doing it in the mysteries of stock manipulation. Once when Southern Pacific had been going up fast, Harriman and various banking houses buying in concert, he called upon the telephone one of his private brokers, "Is anybody selling?" he said. "Yes sir," was the answer. "Well, land the market 25000 for me." He immediately he called up the head of a banking firm much interested in the market. "Who's selling Southern Pacific?" he asked. "I don't know. We haven't been able to find out," was the answer. "I'll tell you," snipped Harriman; "it's your house." And he cut off the connection before any reply to him could be made.—Exchange.

Somewhat Different.

Fred—There are times when I care nothing for riches, when I would not so much as put forth a hand to receive millions.

Kittle—Indeed! That must be when you are tired of the world and its struggles and vanities, when your yearns for higher and nobler things is it not?

"No; you are wrong."

"Then when is it?"

"When I'm sleeping."—London Mail.

Nothing Dull About It.

"It's funny the way poets speak of dull care, isn't it?"

"Why, what's funny about that?"

"Well, every care I ever had was most awfully sharp."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Courtroom Humor.

Case and Comment says that when Major B. R. Dysart, Nestor of the Missouri bar, was presenting a motion for a new trial before a special judge at Macon, he was severe in his criticism of the rulings during the trial proper, and he insisted so vehemently that the trial had been unfair that the judge became irritated and exclaimed: "For goodness' sake, major, please stop the court credit for a little sense."

SHEEP GROWERS GIVE OPINIONS

Maintenance Costs Vary From 75c to $5 a Year; Wide Preference for Breeds.

Sheepmen owning more than 200,000 sheep in the Pacific Northwestern states were some time ago asked by Professor William Hislop, head of animal husbandry at the State College of Washington, to give facts concerning their costs of production, sources of herd loss, marketing, feeding, and so on. What the sheepmen say gives in rather concrete terms, a good deal of information on the every-day problems of the sheep business.

The 200,000 sheep included in this survey range mainly in Washington and Oregon, subsisting through the winter on alfalfa, grain or grass hay, grain and other feeds, according to preferences and opportunities of feeders. After lambing in the spring, the herds are moved up into the forest reserves of the mountain ranges and kept there till towards fall when the lambs are marketed and the rest of the herd driven down to winter quarters in the hay and grain-growing lowlands.

Sources of Herd Loss.

Ranging thus, from lowlands in winter to mountains in summer, the sheepmen encounter certain herd losses which are in wide diversity enumerated in the information given to Professor Hislop. G. A. Minor, of eastern Oregon, states that lambs seldom die if the mothers are in good condition at lambing time in the spring. Other sheepmen substantiate this view by citing the herd losses they have sustained through the impossibility of their obtaining sufficient early grass for mothers' milk, want of good hay in lambing, not taking care of the ewes in winter, exposure, wind and rain, lambing too early, lack of proper care, and bad herders.

Professor Wm. Hislop

The necessity of having alert herders who possess good knowledge of the mountain sheep ranges is emphasized in a number of statements as to herd loss on the summer range. K. O. Kohler, of central Washington, said that from coyotes and wild cats he has lost as many as 175 sheep in 35 days. Coyotes, wild cats and bears are mentioned repeatedly as sources of loss, and along with this goes mention of losses from poisonous plants.

Many Breeds Used.

In reference to different breeds preferred, showed widely varying choices. Leo Nicholas, of eastern Oregon, preferred Merino ewes with Shropshire rams, saying that the lambs matured early and produced the best mutton. J. M. Williamson, also of eastern Oregon, who lams as many as 8,000 ewes, preferred Merino ewes and Merino and Lincoln rams, first, for wool, second, for mutton. C. R. Dodge, an eastern Washington sheepman handling several thousand sheep, preferred Rambouillet ewes and Lincoln rams, saying that the lambs matured earlier. Oliver & Son, of eastern Oregon, used Delaine ewes and Delaine rams "in order to get young breeding ewes." E. S. Hubbard, of central Washington, uses Lincoln ewes and Lincoln rams, saying that they are better rustlers. A. W. Coffin, of Yakima county, Washington, preferred Rambouillet ewes and Lincoln rams, saying "more wool, bigger lambs." Merino ewes and Shropshire rams were the preference of Alex Taylor, of Yakima county, who said the lambs were easily fattened. Donald Urquhart, of Grant county, Washington, preferred Rambouillet ewes and rams, saying they could be handled better in large bands. J. D. Hoke, of Oregon, preferred grade Merinos and Hampshire rams, saying the lambs fattened quickly and were heaviest in July. Thus the opinions went, any two sheepmen seldom agreeing, and each having a decisive reason for his preference.

Year-Around Costs.

Inquiries made to ascertain the cost of running one ewe one year elicited answers varying as greatly as those pertaining to breeds. C. R. Dodge, of Garfield county, Washington, running his sheep in the nearby Blue mountains in summer, and wintering and lambing on his home farm, gave annual maintenance cost for one ewe, of 75 cents. From this low cost, the estimates ran up to $5 an ewe for a year's maintenance. A good deal seemed to depend upon the nearness and kind of summer range, kind and cost of hay and other feed used in winter, length of feeding season, amounts of feed bought or raised, and many other variable items making for cost or economies in the handling of sheep. The average for 200,000 sheep was $2.59 per ewe per year, many running from $2 to $3.

Dated this 2nd day of April, 1917. JEFFE BARTELL, Sheriff of Grays Harbor County, Wash. By ELMER GIBSON, Deputy. A. M. Wolfe, Aberdeen, Wash, Attorney for Plaintiffs. Date of first publication, April 6, 1917. Date of last publication, May 4, 1917. Published in the Aberdeen Herald.

STATEMENT OF OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912.

Of Aberdeen Herald, published weekly at Aberdeen, Washington, for April, 1917. State of Washington, County of Grays Harbor, SS. Before me, a Notary Public in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared Jno. J. Carney, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the owner of the Aberdeen Herald and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily paper, the circulation,) etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations.

That the names and addresses of the publishers, editor, managing editor, and business managers are: Publisher Jno. J. Carney, Aberdeen, Editor E. A. Minnich, Aberdeen, Wn. Managing Editor Jno. J. Carney. That the owners are: (Give names and addresses of individual owners, or if a corporation, give its name and the names and addresses of stockholders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of the total amount of stock.) Jno. J. Carney, Aberdeen, Wash. That the known bondholders, mortgages, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: (If there are none, so state.) None.

That the two paragraphs next above giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

JNO. J. CARNEY (Signature of owner) Sworn to and subscribed before me this 4th day of April, 1917. MICHAEL RYAN, Notary Public (My commission expires April 18, 1918)
