"The circus is coming!"

That's what the small boys of Seattle have whispered to one another for days; they have been telling their fathers and mothers and their grandparents all about it and with the precision of an advance agent cautioning them not to forget the date. In their eyes the event is as important as the home coming of the Washington troops.

Ringling Bros. shows with their aggregation of performers will drop anchor at Seattle about 4 o'clock next Friday morning.

Any chap of 12 or under can tell you the big tent will be pitched. The site is opposite the Y. M. C. A. park. The modern circus works swiftly and systematically and each year a quicker way is found of doing things. Within two hours after the last train reaches Seattle the Ringling Bros' family of 1000 people, the animals, the curiosities and all the other appurtenances of an attractive circus will be comfortably housed in a white city on East Jefferson street.

This work is in charge of the master of transportation, while the man who is known as the boss canvasser assigns each division to its quarters on the show grounds.

To transport the circus and its countless belongings requires 65 cars of which the performers and tent hands occupy 20. There will be 500 horses, from the Shetland to the Percheron, in charge of a score of attendants.

Mr. Charles Andreas declares there is not a drinking person in the whole show. "This is rather remarkable," said he, "when you consider the irregular hours of the men, but still we couldn't tolerate toppers because every move in a circus must be made with promptness and dispatch. Human lives are always at stake. Strict obedience of an employee to his superior is also required. Army rules and regulations prevail."

Besides the largest hippopotamus in the world, there will be 25 elephants and all kinds of foreign and domestic animals.

Mr. Andreas says the show will leave more money in Seattle than it takes out. He attributes that to the fact that the employees always spend considerable money in a large city. He declares that the circus will not only be an entertainment but a profitable investment to Seattle.

That incidents of human interest often find their way into the circus tent is evident from the following story told by Mr. Andreas, who is the attorney and licensee for Ringling Bros.

"We have among our performers," he said, "a young woman named Millie Turvour, who is an expert on the trapeze. She was born in France and lived there with her father up to twelve years ago. The elder Turvour is a tight rope walker. His son, Julie, joined a troupe of acrobats at 15 years of age. Several months passed and no tidings were received of the boy. The father and daughter went to England and searched for him there, but without success. He was traced and placed to place and finally given up for dead."

Subsequently Turvour and his daughter came to the United States. A year ago we learned of a wonderful trapeze performer in Gilbert City Mich. We sent our agent there and learned that the performer was Miss Millie Turvour. She was traveling with her father, who was suddenly taken ill at Gilbert City and the daughter took his place. We employed her and a month later there was a joyful reunion between father, sister and brother.

"While on the trapeze one afternoon Miss Turvour was complimented by one of the clowns on her work. The voice struck her as familiar, but not until afterward did she learn that the speaker was her lost brother Julie."

"After they had left France he had started home and while they were searching for him, he was seen by his father and sister. The trio are with us now."

A COAL TRUST BEING FORMED

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 13.—A trust, to control the entire coal output of Missouri and Kansas, the two heaviest producers in the West, has just been formed. Its leading spirit is Byron F. Hobart, president of the Kansas & Texas Coal company.

The combine or trust so far includes the Kansas & Texas, the Western Anthracite and the Bolen Coal companies and the Central Coal and Coke companies, formerly the Keith & Perry company. The Bolen and the Central are Kansas City companies, the Western and the Kansas & Texas have headquarters here. The trust has a capital of $10,000,000, one-half in preferred stock.

The four companies mentioned are the big ones in the field in the two states named and have practically the control of the market. In both Kansas City and St. Louis there have been agreements that practically amounted to trusts for years. The culmination of their working in harmony in this actual combining of interests.

There is one hitch to the success of the scheme and that is the railroad mining interests. If the roads, particularly the Santa Fe, does not enter the combine or keep hands off, the scheme will not last. It is likely, however, that the railroads have already been brought into line as some of the railroads mentioned, particularly the Central, handle the coal for the railroad companies. The Central controls the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis mines; the Bolen, the Missouri Pacific mines.

THREE BIG COMBINES

Views of Ex-Congressman Warner, of Ohio, President of the Bimetallist League.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 13.—Ex-Representative Adoniram Judson Warner, of Ohio, president of the National Bimetallist league and for years one of the most pronounced silver men in the country, has started his political friends in Washington by saying that free coinage of silver must be a secondary issue in the next campaign.

"The Democratic party," he says, "will stand by the Chicago platform. The money plank will be as full and as strong as it has been for many years. The money question has lost none of its importance, but in the meantime other questions of greater importance have arisen. I would be in favor of making a declaration against trusts as if that were the only issue and the same against imperialism and the Philippine war. Within a short time the country will be awakened to the existence of three strong combinations working together and controlling minor contributing trusts."

"First, there will be the combination of the great lines of transportation, next in importance, and ultimately controlling the rest, is the banking combination, and third, the great iron and steel combination. It will not be long, in my judgment, before these combinations represent a capitalization of $1,000,000,000, and they now present a problem of the utmost importance, demanding the immediate attention of the American people, and taking precedence over all others, for they will reduce the amount of labor employed, determine the price of products and destroy all competition."

"Furthermore, an effort will be made at the next congress to reduce the greenbacks and give the national banks entire control of the currency. This phase of the money question is likely to attract more attention for the time being than free silver coinage. None the less they are deceived who think the free silver question is finally settled. There was much wisdom in the reply of the Scotch preacher when his congregation requested him to pray for rain. Some one in Boston the other day started the story that there was a premium of ten cents on the new one dollar silver certificate, series A, and that for some unknown reason the government had called in the entire issue.
