

PRIZES FOR THE BEST DEFINITIONS OF A KISS

THE STAR WANTS ITS READERS TO TELL WHAT A KISS IS— TRY IT, YOU MAY WIN A PRIZE

In order to get at the best definition of a kiss The Star will offer a series of prizes for the best five answers received to the question: "What is a kiss?" For the best definition received, The Star will offer as a prize, Five Dollars in gold. For the second best definition, our readers. For the third best, Three Dollars. For the fourth best, Two Dollars. For the fifth best, One Dollar. The answers must be short—the shorter the better, so long as the definition is broad enough to convey a clear-convincing picture of the writer's idea. The only condition of the contest is that the definitions be written on a coupon like the one below. This coupon will be printed daily during the contest and you may send in as many definitions as you like.

KISSES, KISSES, KISSES--- NOTHING BUT KISSES

A lawyer is minus a big fee, a prominent local business man is no longer threatened with an attack of almonitis, and a pretty little woman is so happy that she feels like giving every thing she has to the poor. It's all due to the soothing and peace making influence of a kiss, and, incidentally, of course, to the Star's kissing contest. A husband and wife had lived together in the same house, but had not spoken for weeks and an attorney had already been consulted as to the smoothest and most rapid method of severing the galling bonds. And then, at dinner, the children began to think up definitions for the kiss contest, and who could help laughing? After the ice had been broken a kiss did the rest. One of the most interesting definitions of a kiss, on hand today, is one written by an old man 65 years of age who signs his name to his coupon, but says that if it is published he will kill the editor, who would be dared, so here goes: "A kiss is joy and gladness, enjoyed by two. Each takes half and both have been in heaven."—Andrew Fairbanks of Ballard. Following are a few definitions selected from more than 200 opened today: "A kiss may be the illusioned deceit, the magnetic button of friendship or the yum-yum of love."—Deputy Sheriff Mike Kelly. "A wireless transmission of affection."—F. E. Phillips of South Park. "A rock in the sea of life on which the good ship bachelor is wrecked."—Gustave Rueger. "The language of the betrayer."—Gleason Fletcher. "A salute first patented by Judas, and which the whole human race has since been trying to improve on."—A. "A kiss is the sweetest thing in the world, and the more you get the more you want."—A. Carson. "The food by which the flame of love is fed."—Mrs. F. S. "A magnet that draws two human hearts together."—E. Denond. "The purest, sweetest, most sacred and sublime blessing from love's great storehouse."—A. O. Welch. "A kiss is Cupid's magic dart."—A. F. M. "The seal and troth of love."—E. Ryan. "A kiss is a weapon by which we accomplish good or evil."—H. C. "A kiss is something made of nothing and never twice the same, although it is known in every country where love has a name."—E. Rawlings. "A kiss is a message to the heart that words cannot express."—R. L. Henderson.

STAR DUST

Another rain like the visitation of last night would probably lay the dust. An easy graft flashed now and then is apt to tempt the best of men. Jim Callaghan knows the answer for Hughie Behn has told him so. Chas. M. Schwab and some others may be probably taking post graduate courses in the penitentiary. Then again some of the Yoder pupils are probably taking post graduate courses in the penitentiary. Speak kindly to the cow (The British of the Chalmersford, England, Technical college have issued a bulletin saying the cow is an affectionate animal and likes pleasant words and gentle treatment, and that when she is treated kindly she rewards her owner by giving more milk.) (With apologies to the late Mr. McGuffey.) Oh, treat your cow with kindness, lad. Where'er you chance to meet, No matter if perchance it be In pasture, road or street, 'Tis well to show your kindness, lad, By word and action, too. Remember, if you're good to her That she'll be good to you. At eventide, when out you go To milk the gentle brute, Be sure to smile and softly pat Old Bos's slippery snout. Upon the beast bestow; Methinks, for all your trouble, lad, Her gratitude she'll show. Approach upon the right, my lad, And should she kick the pail.

Oh, do not in the tender spots The playful cow assail. And if her tail she switches 'round, But take the act in jest. Don't hit her with a fence rail, lad, And you'll be doubly blest. 'Tis well when you're at work to let Her eat her evening lunch; A dainty mash or wisp of hay 'Beter now than never' a prisoner in jail for falling to pay alimony remarked, but Hayne told him to go to. Newspapers are telling how John Sweet, once a poor man of Toronto, O., became a millionaire. How? By work. John sweet. An advance of one cent a gallon in the price of oil means an increase of $10,000,000 in the Standard's annual earnings. No wonder John D. Rockefeller doesn't weep over stocks shrinking. The women of Denver, meaning, of course, some of the women of Denver, determined to drive out mashers, have decided to employ "hand-some women in plain clothes" to act as detectives. Mashing in Denver ought to have a boom. Even if appearances are deceitful, it's a cinch that by the time the lawyers are through squabbling and splitting hairs over the settlement of her husband's estate, and turning bills for "legal services rendered," the widow Drasdo, even if she "wins out," will be forced to admit that the game was not worth the candle. The largest green turtle ever seen in Seattle was received at the Grand Cafe, 1414 Third avenue, Thursday. It will be served in green turtle soup and steak within a few days. Watch for the notice. A Harem-Scarem Sort o' Chap At the opening of Cleveland's thermometer, in Chicago, with Sudermann's

"Magda," it was found the acoustic properties were such that the audience heard not only the words from the actors, but their repetition in an echo. It's pretty tough to have to listen to "Magda" twice in one night. Gobb Reason for Error We got the poets mixed up a little in a recent issue. Goldsmith wrote the "deserted village" instead of Longfellow. We knew it all right, but a fellow had just been in and paid his subscription before we wrote the piece—which excited us not a little.—Exchange. Did You Ever Notice Did you ever notice that the man who brags that he hasn't any debts usually can't get any if he tries. It's funny, but it's so. A Word from Josh Wise There's no hope for a man if his hind-sight don't show him where his fore-sight was off. ## THE THEATERS

"Florodora" Notwithstanding the fact that the production was given on practically a bare stage, "Florodora" was enthusiastically received at the Grand last night. The scenery of the company was entirely destroyed by fire during the trip from San Francisco to Portland, and, contrary to expectations, the new baubles had not arrived from the East in time for the show last night. However, the gorgeous costumes and elaborate lighting in a way made up for the lacking paraphernalia. The company this year is almost entirely new from the one that appeared here last season. In some ways it is better and in others not so good. The double sextette is, if anything, superior to last year's bunch of beauties. "Tell Me, Pretty Maiden," was encored time and again. The male voices were excellent, and the maidens were exquisitely gowned. The chorus of six young ladies who in the first part are flower girls, captured the hearts of many of the young men in the audience. It appears that this season the management has taken especial pains with this smaller sextette, and have dressed the little beauties in extra finery and have taken especial pains to pick out positively beautiful girls. The main chorus was good. Miss Isadore Rush, who is the Lady Holyhood of the company, is vivacious and makes up for her lack of voice by her pretty mannerisms and an abundance of slang that never fails to please. The way she sang "Fact" was a treat. Her dances were graceful and her gowns the most gorgeous and tasty that were worn. Phillip H. Ryley made a good Tweedle-punch, and his pranks never failed to bring forth laughter. Jo Phillips as Lord Berceoc, R. E. Graham as Cyrus Gilfain, and Donald Brine as Capt. Donegal, were all good. Miss Greta Risley, who is Dolores, has a good voice, but is not adapted to the part she assumes. She sang well and acted admirably. "Florodora" will close at the Grand tonight. "Rudolph and Adolph" "Tudolph and Adolph" is the same roaring farce that it has al-

Spain, acquitted herself well. Dona Maria is Miss Lillian Kemble off the stage, and she, with William Corbett as Don John of Austria, principally her lover, but brother to King Phillip, and heir to his throne as well, made a very pleasing impression on those who braved last night's storm to see them. Thomas Oberle was the king, and both he and Frank MacVicar, as the cardinal, played their parts admirably. For pretty and natural stage work, Miss Adora Andrews as the Princess of Eboli, was really the best in the whole cast. She had a part, that of a cruel, selfish woman, that elicited no sympathy from those who wrapt up in the story of the play, hence did not get the much-merited applause. "The Palace of the King" presents opportunities for striking scenic effects, and in this last night's production, it is not lacking. "The Palace of the King" will run at the Seattle all week.

"The Palace of the King" A large and enthusiastic house enjoyed the Nelli-Morocco company's production of "The Palace of the King" at the Seattle theater, last night. This pretty love story, written by F. Marion Crawford, is well known, and its dramatization only adds to the telling of the story, if, as in the present instance, the play is in good hands. That the audience was more than well pleased was evidenced at the end of each scene, when the stars had to respond to numerous curtain calls. The climax of this vociferous applause was reached at the end of Scene 4, when the cardinal was forced to come to life and respond to seven calls. Dona Maria Dolores, the captain's daughter in attendance on the queen at the court of King Phillip II. of
