A DAILY LETTER FROM JAIL TO HIS LITTLE INVALID WIFE

A PATHETIC CHAPTER IN THE LIFE OF SECRETARY HAYWOOD, OF THE WESTERN FEDERATION OF LABOR, WHO IS CHARGED WITH COMPLICITY IN THE MURDER OF EX-GOVERNOR STEUNENBERG, OF IDAHO—CARRIED HER IN HIS ARMS IN HER DAILY OUTINGS FOR FRESH AIR.

(Seattle Star Special Service.) DENVER, Jan. 9.—There is a chapter in the life of William D. Haywood, leader of the Western Federation of Miners and accused accomplice in the assassination of former Gov. Steunenberg, of Idaho, now in jail at Boise, Idaho, awaiting trial, not generally known. The story this chapter tells places the one accused and censured as an anarchist in the true light of faithful and home-loving father and husband. In a modest little cottage in this city patiently sits an invalid wife, and two young daughters, waiting the time they hope for when husband and father shall return to greet them. It was this home Haywood left the day in February, 1905, when he was arrested and rushed away to Idaho by special train. He bade his family goodnight that eventful morning and has not seen them since. Mrs. Haywood has been an invalid eight years. She was thrown from a horse on her parents' ranch in Nevada when 18 years of age. She sustained an injury to the spine, but recovered. After marriage, as a result of this injury, paralysis affected her lower body. In all those eight years she has been unable to stand and has lived most of the time in an invalid's chair. The comfort of herself and daughters is looked after by the miners' federation. Mrs. Haywood was born in Steubenville, O., the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Minor, members of prominent Methodist families. Her parents moved to Nevada, a where the father still has a large cattle ranch at Winnemucca, and in which state he has held important political positions. Haywood met Miss Minor when her father was secretary of state of Nevada and he was a young and struggling mining prospector. She says his honest and big hearted ways drew her to him. They were married and set out for the rich mineral fields of Idaho. At Silver City, Haywood established a modest little home. He continued work as prospector and miner and prospered moderately. His ability as a leader of men was recognized and he was soon at the head of the miners' labor union. Then he felt that he needed more education for the work before him and his wife, better schooled, began to teach him what she herself had learned, when the blow to her health came. Mrs. Haywood tells that when the husband came home from his toil each day he attended to the work of the home and cared for the then little tots. This done he would take his wife in his powerful arms and walk about the mountainside with her, carrying her all the time, for fresh air, hoping thereby that her health might be restored. The wife was assured of her daily outing through the efforts of the kind and faithful husband. After dark, Haywood attended a night school of the community. This routine continued three years until the family moved to this city, in 1901, where Haywood came to take the secretaryship of the miners' federation. From the jail cell in Idaho comes

EAST INDIAN WARRIORS AS A "YELLOW PERIL" IN FAR EAST

STALWART BROWN MEN FROM PUNJAB POUR INTO BRITISH COLUMBIA VIA THE PACIFIC—JOURNALIST OF THEIR RACE DEFENDS THE INVASION AS A WHOLESOME ONE—PREDICTS THE NEWCOMERS WILL PROVE VALUABLE CITIZENS.

(Seattle Star Special Service.) How did India get to know of the mineral and material wealth of the richest and most thinly settled area of Canada? Attempts have been persistently made to ascribe this to the aggressive but secret advertising done by the transportation companies and by large corporations of this country. The writer recently toured every country in the far east where from these immigrants arrive directly into British Columbia, and he is in a position to contradict this statement. Some discharged soldiers learned from their European military officers that the prospects of settlers in the Canadian west were very alluring. Letters from this advanced guard brought their relations, friends and acquaintances to British Columbia.

Their Numbers. According to the best figures available, the number of the East Indian immigrants now in British Columbia is less than 2,500. Ninety-nine per cent of these men are from the Punjab or the contiguous province of the northwest frontier. Seventy per cent of the immigrants hail from two neighboring districts. Four hundred immigrants who recently came to Vancouver, B. C., by the Canadian Pacific railway steamship Tartar were all from ten villages of these two districts, and almost every one of them either had relations or friends in the province or was accompanying those whose relatives or friends were already in British Columbia. The clanish tendencies of these immigrants must not be lost sight of in this connection. Classes and Religions. In the Punjab and northwest frontier provinces the institutions of caste and creed are freer than in the other parts of India. The immigrants are either Sikhs or Mohammedans, with a few Hindus, Sikhism, Mohammedanism and Hinduism are three distinct Indian religions. Quite a large percentage of these men have held positions in the army and constabulary, and another large section having worked as "watch men" in the far eastern countries. Virility and Elasticity. All of these men are supple and strong, tall and muscular, splendid looking and husky. They come from those districts of the Punjab which are cold in winter and have a regular rainy season in addition. Besides, they belong to those races of India who possess marvelous "virility," who have fought for the British empire in the trying un-

A NEW "YELLOW PERIL"

Vancouver and British Columbia have of recent years been flooded by East Indians, who, coming from the English possessions of India, cannot be kept out. Many of them are also coming into the American Pacific coast states, where they threaten to become an issue in a few years. Up in British Columbia, however, their numbers are so great that agitation against them has become bitter and they are a political issue. At home they work for 20 cents a day, and there is in line the menace to white labor. As a spokesman for this class of orientals, Saint N. Sing, a much traveled and cultured young East Indian journalist, has been found by this newspaper, and he has written a quite logical explanation of their presence upon this continent, and couples with it an appeal for a "square deal." In his opinion the Hindus, Sikhs and Mohammedans who are coming to British Columbia form no economic menace, which is doubtless correct as long as their numbers are no larger than his figures show they are. Other reports, which, however, may be partisan, indicate that Vancouver is becoming overrun with these aliens.

SAINT N. SING

just and malicious statements as to the worthlessness of these immigrants. Despite Opposition. Without in any manner discounting the opposition of a section of British Columbians, in the estimation of the writer of these lines there is no danger of the immigrants proving themselves a failure. It is merely a question of time when given fair and square play, they will establish a name for themselves in British Columbia, as they have done in other countries. The railroads, the fruit ranches, farms, mills, etc., offer work to the immigrants which they will soon prove to the world they can do efficiently.

GREEN B. MORRIS IS OUT OF LUCK

Morris, killed by Sam Hildreth, biggest winner of Empire. BY FRED J. HEWITT. (Seattle Star Special Service.) SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 11.—Green B. Morris, one time millionaire and campaigner of some of the greatest horses of the American turf, is trailing along here with a string of selling platters and not overly much money. I don't think there is a man, woman or child in the United States who has the remotest idea of what a huge race is who has not heard of Green B. Morris. He was born in Mississippi so many years ago that he himself has forgotten the exact date. He was a pioneer in California—a real old forty-ener. He has raced on every track of importance in America. He has won millions in purses and wagers. What is more, he has gotten rid of it all, just about. He has been a jockey, a trainer, a driver and an owner. He was a boy he was a sensational rider of "quarter horses." In the trotting game he was a brilliant driver. As a gambler he has always cut a spectacular figure. There was Gold Bug, a hero of the late 70's, that cleared up every thing in the South and Middle West. It was Green B. Morris, if you remember, who owned him. Then, there was Apollo, with which Green B. won the Kentucky Derby at Louisville in 1882; Drake Carter, the best 2-year-old of the same year, which Morris sold to the Dwyers for $17,500; Bersan,

SALE OF DOPE PATENT MEDICINE STOPPED

CHIEF OF POLICE ISSUES INSTRUCTIONS TO THE DRUG STORES TO STOP SELLING MEDICINE CONTAINING COCAINE, OPIUM OR MORPHINE. Chief of Police Wappenstein today issued an order to all drug stores to stop the sale of patent medicines which contain either opium, cocaine or morphine, without a physician's prescription. "It is in the use of these medicines," said the chief, "that many persons acquire the drug habit. There is an ordinance covering my order, and I shall enforce it." Among the condemned medicines is Berney's Catarrh Cure, which contains a good percentage of cocaine, and for which the druggists say they have had an immense demand since the police started the drug crusade. By this last order, Chief Wappenstein has, in a few days, put an effectual check, if not stop, to the unlawful sale of drugs in the city. The work has been a tremendous undertaking owing to the number of "dope" fiends and druggists, and whether or not the evil has been stamped out remains to be seen. At least, it has been dealt a severe blow, and an emigration of incurable "dope" fiends may be expected at any time. A number of prominent physicians, who interviewed this morning on the chief's last order, gave their hearty approval. ITAURI IN PORT. The German steamer Itauri of the Kosmos line arrived in port this afternoon at 1:30 from Hamburg with a general cargo. The manifest shows that she brought ore from Valparaiso for Tacoma, and wine, glass, flax and general merchandise for Seattle. Captain Kaundson reports that the trip was uneventful and that no bad weather was encountered on the trip around the Horn.
