

MOB AFTER A FIEND

(Seattle Telegraph Service.)
NEW YORK, May 30.—Two thousand people besieged the police station at the hearing of Leon Graham, who is accused of attacking the 17-year-old Mamie Lauk, and cries of "lynch him" were repeatedly made.

LITTLE STORIES

THE PLACE WHERE THE MOON WAS TORN FROM THE EARTH.

In Harper's for June, Professor Pickering, of Harvard, writes of the origin of the moon. He holds that the moon was originally a part of the earth, and was cast off when in a nebulous condition from a point somewhere in what we now call the Pacific ocean. The results of this are interesting:

"If it is true, as here suggested, that we owe our continents and ocean beds to the moon, then the human race owes far more to the body than we have ever before placed to its credit. If the moon had not been formed at all, or if it had carried away the whole of the terrestrial crust, our earth would then have been completely enveloped in its oceans, as may be the case with the planet Venus at the present time. Our race could then hardly have advanced beyond the intelligence of the present deep-sea fish. On the other hand, the moon had been of but a fraction of its present bulk, or if it had been a little larger than it is, our continents would have been greatly diminished in area, and our numbers decimated, or our lands overpopulated."

WHEN THIEVES BREAK IN.

One midnight I watched the moon disk pass behind the minaret of the Djema-el-Djard (Mosque of the Steps) at the corner and just the city in silver. On the other side of the Arab-Arsat, far away the street, I caught sight now and again of a thief, as, ropes in hand to lower himself into the courts, he worked his way along the roof tops. Quick and catlike his wiry figure dropped lightly to a lower level here or scaled a height there, until he reached the lower across the street. Sitting motionless, I watched him with interest. Barefooted, he wore only a pair of cotton trousers, while a turban was twisted about his feet. The moonlight played over the muscles of his supple body and glistened a silver crescent from his crooked Arab knife. It was not until directly opposite that he saw me. For a second he stood motionless, then like a flash dropped below the parapet of the house and disappeared.—C. W. Pringle, in HARPER'S

TACOMA WINS

This morning's ball game at Tacoma was won by the Tacoma Tigers over Dug's Siwashes, 4 to 2. The Tigers started the scoring in the first inning. In the second one more was added. In the fourth inning things were made lively by the Dugites. A fusillade of hits connected with errors by Mike Lynch's warriors tied the score. Things looked bright after their little rally, but Con Walsh, who was on the slab for Dug, weakened and in the next two innings allowed the Tigers to score two more runs. This afternoon the teams are playing at Athletic park.

WILL ATTEND EXERCISES.

The Illinois club will meet tonight in the Holyoke building at 8 o'clock to discuss plans for attending the ground breaking exercises of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition en masse. The officers urge every member of the club and every former resident of Illinois to be present either at the meeting tonight or at the exposition grounds Saturday.

Harvard university now has a Boeton office.

Harvard university now has a Boeton office, at 509 State street, with E. H. Wells, '97, in charge. He will hereafter be in charge as editor of the Harvard Bulletin, the organ of the alumni association, though his incumbency will not disturb the managing editor of the magazine in his position. Mr. Wells will also have the editing of the quinquennial catalogue, which has heretofore been published by the university itself.

creek. They raised a doubt as to Lindsay's safety, friends fearing that he was overcome with heart disease, of which he was a sufferer, an d that the boy was left alone. Others conjecture that the lost pair, facing starvation, would kill and devour the dog.

The boy's mother and father, who live here, are distracted. Lindsay, the school teacher, was very popular in Fairfax, and the town seems wrapped in gloom, though his death cannot be a certainty until the body is found. The searchers have worked night and day, and many returns to town in a state of collapse from their efforts.

PERSUADED WIFE TO LEAVE HOME

H. A. STANLEY SUED FOR $10,000 BY HUSBAND OF MRS. EMMA REEDER, WHO IS SEEKING DIVORCE.

Some startling charges of breaking up a family and inducing a faithful wife, by showering expensive gifts upon her, to leave her home and bring a suit for divorce against her husband, are made in a suit which was filed in the superior court yesterday by David C. Reeder, a painter, through his attorneys, Peters & Carr. The defendant is Henry A. Stanley, a wealthy feed dealer on Ninth av., near Lenora.

THE WAY OF A MAID

By Lydia F. Penster.
I went down to Bolinbroke when the time came, but it was trying, for I had not been near the place since I broke my engagement with Horry Trenton.

You see, I had done this because Horry's father had grumbled about his son's blasted prospects ever since our engagement, so I retorted with some wild words and then parted furiously with poor Horry. That was the reason Bolinbroke was well nigh impossible to visit, but Peggy Daly begged me to come and help with a church fair. She assured me that I could avoid the Bolinbroke people easily.

"I am going to have a fortune-teller's tent," she said, "and I want you to tell fortunes by impression, just as you used to for fun. Don't you remember?"
"Yes; and then?"
"You will be in a dark room and I will label you the seventh daughter of something—"

"At a church fair?"
"Well, wasn't religious pillage once considered? I could avoid the Bolinbroke people easily."

"I am going to have a fortune-teller's tent," she said, "and I want you to tell fortunes by impression, just as you used to for fun. Don't you remember?"
"Yes; and then?"
"You will be in a dark room and I will label you the seventh daughter of something—"

"Don't mind me!" I prided myself that my sarcasm hid my pain. "Anyhow, you had better hear the gossip from me. She is his cousin, the cause of the misunderstanding between you and Horry. She had money, and persuaded Papa Trenton that Horry's prospects would be ruined if he did not marry her."

The complaint, which is for $10,000 damages, for alienating the affections of the plaintiff's wife, alleges that the plaintiff and his wife, Emma Reeder, had been married for more than 10 years, and had always been happy and contented until Mrs. Reeder met Stanley.

The latter, it charges, by costly gifts and giving of money to Mrs. Reeder, and continual persuasion as well as promising to marry her if she left Reeder, finally induced her to leave her home and sue the plaintiff for divorce.

Stanley, who is a man of over 50 years of age, is a widower and owns considerable real estate in addition to being the owner of a large hay, grain and feed store.

"Now, Olive," cautioned Peggy, "speak in a whisper; this will add to the mystery and disguise your voice."
Peggy purposely called each one who entered by name. People came quickly, and after my first confusion I felt cool enough. I amazed all by my accurate description of incidents in their lives, and was getting on merrily when I heard Peggy call out:

"Won't you walk in Horry? Oh, surely you will! I assure you the sibly will give you a marvelous reading." She haggled for some time before I heard him say:
"Well, to please you, I will go in."
Then the curtain was pushed aside in his own impatient way.

"Where are you, seventh daughter?"
"Hither!" I whispered.
He approached and placed his warm palm over mine.
"Go ahead," he ordered, carelessly.
For a moment I was speechless at the touch of his beloved hand. I longed to fall on his neck; to blot out the terrible two years with a torrent of weeping.

"Why don't you say something?" he asked unseeingly.
"I was looking into your past," I whispered. Then I proceeded to give an accurate account of meddling Frances, and I dare say had him puzzled.
"You are not at all happy; you have not been for two years," I went on in a deeper whisper. "My soul, this is marvelous!" he exclaimed in a low tone.

"You are," I continued, in my natural voice, "about to become engaged to the woman who undermined your happiness. Is this not so?"

He did not utter a word for a full minute, nor could I articulate. Then I felt both my hands seized, I was drawn forward imperatively into Horry's arms, his lips were on mine. We kissed wildly many times, then he said in a shaking voice:
