Going to Buy a New Corset This Week? Then You're Interested!

To be sure of your gown, be certain of your corset. Select it intelligently, have it fitted scientifically and then your gown must fit correctly. We pay particular attention to the corseting of the stout figure, but we also corset perfectly the slender, the medium and the short-waisted figure. Corsets that we fit do not wrinkle as most long corsets do, for we pay particular attention to the shape of the back, both above and below the waist. This week we are showing advanced models of the Justite Corsets, those that nip the waist just a trifle and give just a wee bit more roundness to the hip. Your dressmaker will tell you this is correct.

Advertisement for corsets with illustrations of women wearing different styles. Includes text: 'STYLE 1720—For a full, heavy figure. This Corset is made of very strong quality white coutil, medium bust, low under arm. The extreme model will reduce abdomen and hips. $3.50' and 'STYLE 1911—For a slender, youthful figure. $2.50'.

WOMAN'S BOOK HAS SET ALL LONDON AQUIVER

Lady Cardigan, in Her Memoirs, Tells Court Scandals and Gossip of Royal Houses.

LADY CARDIGAN.

LADY'S FERVID TALE OF HER PROPOSAL. From "My Recollections," by Lady Cardigan. "On the morning of July 12, 1858, I was awakened by a great knocking at the front door. I looked at my watch and saw that it was not yet 7 o'clock. It was Lord Cardigan (who admired her, though married.) I had just time to slip on a dressing gown before he came into my room, sans ceremonie, and, taking me in his arms, he said: "My dear, est, she's dead. Let's get married at once!"

BY CHARLES F. STEWART. LONDON, Oct. 18.—A book which has caused astonishment among the nobility and has shocked even royalty, has just been written by the countess of Cardigan. "My Recollections," she calls it. The countess, 68 years old, is one of the oldest of the dowagers whose sharp tongues, excellent memories of the past and defiance of Victorian customs have made them the bêtes noir of the modern best families of Europe. Her recollections discuss the matrimony of George IV. The matrimonial relations, also, of the greatest couples in the land are mentioned with the greatest frankness. The maiden name of the countess was Horsey. She was a great friend as a child of the duke of Wellington.

commentary on mid-Victorian morality. Here is a grim story about the death of Lady Ward: "On the evening of the day before her burial Lord Colville came to see Lord Ward. They talked for some time, and then the widower suddenly turned to his friend: "Colville, you admired my wife." "Yes," was the reply, "I did." "Well, come and look your last look on her," said Lord Ward, lighting a candle and leading the way upstairs. "The room was full of shadows and the flickering light fell on the lovely face of the dead woman. Silently Lord Colville stood by her. Ward was watching him attentively. "Still admiring my wife? Well, she was a pretty woman—but you'd never imagine that she had such bad teeth." He put down the candle on a table as she spoke and raised his wife's head from the pillow. "With cold deliberation he wrenched the jaws apart. Look here, man," but Lord Colville had hurriedly left the room. Another anecdote refers to her uncle, Admiral Rous. "Mrs. Rous was very dictatorial, and I remember calling one day after her death to inquire after my uncle. "Indeed, my lady," said the servant, "I may say the admiral is very much better since Mrs. Rous' death." The next anecdote is of the acid variety. "The Altesbury took a house at Cowes every summer. Although Lady A. was considered a beauty, she was excessively thin. "She was devoted to Lord Wilton, but one day she went aboard Lord Cardigan's yacht, which was lying off Calshot, and stayed the night before returning to Cowes. Lord Wilton was furious about it, and made quite an unnecessary scene about it with Cardigan. Some kind friend said afterwards that after all it was only a case of two dogs fighting over a bone. "Poor Lady A.!" she was scrappy, but to be called a "bone" must have greatly annoyed."

Just after she was presented formally at court she went to a gipsy to have her fortune told. The gipsy prophesied for her a widower for a husband, a second marriage and a long life. She says: "The prediction came true, for Lord Cardigan was a widower, and nearly all the men who proposed to me were widowers. I was asked in marriage by Lord Sherborne, a widower with 10 children; by the duke of Leeds, a widower with 11 children; Prince Soltykoff, the duke of St. Albans, and Disraeli. "This incident of her girlhood is worth recording. She tells how one day she very much wanted to go to the old Princess theatre to see a play that was causing a great sensation. She asked her father to accompany her. He refused, saying: "You could not possibly go to a play like that. It is one of the most wicked and wanton spectacles ever put on the stage." Still she was fully determined to go, and at last found someone to take her. But in the middle of the performance her friend said to her: "You must leave this theatre at once." "Why?" she asked. "Because," was the reply, "your father and his mistress and Lord and his mistress are sitting in the box opposite to us." A pretty will vote for officers for the coming year this afternoon. BALLARD, Oct. 18.—The officers for the coming year will be elected this afternoon at the regular weekly meeting of the Salmon Bay Improvement club. Every voter in this ward has been invited to be present, and the men expect to have a full house. Those running for officers are: For president, Dr. C. G. Emory and C. W. Casler; for vice president, George H. Lee and A. W. Preston; for secretary, W. C. Keane; treasurer, John E. Ostrom; for three trustees, F. J. Hemen, T. C. Tiedeman, Frank Enquist, H. B. Pederson, J. P. Wall, Thomas Houlston and A. E. Ruffner. These men are all business men in this ward. A paid secretary is to be employed to take charge of all files and other business of the organization. The purpose of the club is to promote business and improvements in Ballard and the community in and near the 13th ward. With a large membership now and more joining every session, the club promises to be the largest of its kind in the city. Now that the exposition has closed, several more cars have been put on the Ballard-Fremont and the Ballard-Sloop lines, and the company has taken off all the old cattle cars from the Beach line, and is running the big single entry cars there. The whole ward is given a better car service. When the new sub power station is completed more cars will be put on. By that time the 14th av. line should be well started. The Seattle-Everett Interurban is to run down Phinney av. in a few days, and will not come into Ballard at all. Mrs. Anna Olberg, aged 52 years, the wife of J. B. Olberg, died Saturday evening at her home, 6438 21st av. N. W. Mrs. Olberg leaves her husband and two sons. Mr. Olberg is in the shoe business here, and is very well known. The family came from Port Angeles to Ballard about a year ago. The funeral was held from the residence this morning at 11 o'clock. The interment was in Crown Hill cemetery, under the direction of W. S. Mayfield. Walter, the 17-months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Church, 938 W. 63d st., died Sunday morning. No funeral arrangements have been made. Astrid Olafson, the 8-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Olafson, 6730 27th av. N. W., died this morning at the residence of cholera infantum. No funeral arrangements have been made. The Leary av. boulevard is still coming up, according to reports received here from the corporation counsel's office. Paul Baine of the Ballard fire department, at engine house No. 18, is thinking of resigning and going into the shoe salesman business. He has not announced his intention yet, but according to the other boys at the house, it is true. Some of the people in the residence district have been complaining because they say that Postmaster Pell has taken off some of the mail carriers, and that they are only having one mail delivery a day. Mr. Pell says that this report is untrue, and that there has been no change whatever of the deliveries. "The woman who flirts is doing work that is very fiendish." (By United Press.) NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—"Flirting is grossly immoral," according to declarations made by Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman at the Rand school, where she delivered a lecture on "Assorted Sins." She said: "The woman who flirts is doing a fiendish work. I know a beautiful girl, perfectly decent and cultured, who took great delight in urging men on. I could never understand how she found pleasure in it. "Oh, it's fun," she answered, when I asked her why she did it. "Fun to get a man so he can't wait another minute before he embraces you, and then not let him do it," she added, gleefully. "There are thousands like her, who either don't realize or don't care about the harm they do." Mrs. Gilman a few years ago earned the sobriquet "The Truly Modern Woman" because she asserted that a married woman should work like her husband and should cease adorning herself to attract men. She also stated that all mothers should hand their children over to the trained nurses and teachers to rear.

SAYS FLIRTING VERY IMMORAL WOMAN WHO DOES FLIRT IS DOING WORK THAT IS VERY FIENDISH.
