

GIGANTIC MURDER PLOT

MILLER PLANNED TO ASSASSINATE FOUR

ROBBER LAY IN WAIT FOR E. R. BUTTERWORTH

PAT SULLIVAN, CAPTAIN TENNANT AND A RICH SPOKANE MAN WERE ALSO TO HAVE BEEN MURDERED, TENNANT FOR REVENGE AND THE OTHERS FOR MONEY AND DIAMONDS.

MEN PETER MILLER INTENDED TO MURDER

E. R. BUTTERWORTH, 512 Olympia place. P. E. SULLIVAN, 1910 Fourth av. CAPT. CHAS. TENNANT, 712 Warren av. HERBERT MANSFIELD of Spokane.

BY T. J. DILLON.

Peter Miller had it all planned to murder E. R. Butterworth and P. E. Sullivan to secure their diamonds, Herbert Mansfield of Spokane for his money and Detective Captain Tennant for revenge.

This was the startling story told me this morning by Roy Williams, his 16-year-old accomplice in crime. For two hours this morning young Williams talked to me freely and confidentially, unfolding a tale of criminal operations in Seattle last summer almost incredible.

And I believed the boy. No man on earth could sit and imagine details, dates and locations like that boy did. It would have overtaxed the abilities of a professional romancer, of Miller himself. And young Williams is just an ordinary boy of 16.

"I'm glad I'm arrested; I'm glad I'm in jail," he said. "Another month and we'd have got Butterworth and the rope would have been waiting for me. Miller had me and I couldn't get away from him."

STORY HARD TO BELIEVE.

The story of the planning to kill Mr. Butterworth reads like a chapter from a dime novel.

"Butterworth is worth $2,000 as he stands on his feet," Miller told me, "and he's worth that much to us dead," the boy said.

"Mr. Butterworth's diamonds were what Miller wanted. His plan was to get a Maxim gun silencer through Piper & Taft and wait for him on his way home. As he crossed an alley near his house, Miller was going to shoot him with the muffled gun. Then he and Williams were going to drag him a few feet to Kinnear park bluff and drop him down. If everything was all right they would descend and strip him of his diamonds.

"Miller had it all planned out to the smallest matter. He was going to have his revolver attached to a strap which would hang from his shoulder. As soon as he fired he could drop the gun and grab Butterworth.

HE WOULD THROW VICTIM OVER BLUFF.

"Miller told me that he and another fellow (Smith) came within an inch of killing Butterworth one night. They had been waiting for him, and as he passed the other fellow was sneaking along behind him to throw his arms around his neck and choke him. Miller was going to kick him in the stomach. Then they'd drag him into Kinnear park and strip him. Miller said that just as the other fellow was going to grab Butterworth Miller saw the glint of a policeman's star across the street and grabbed his partner just in time.

"Miller thought that this was a pretty close call, but he made up his mind to get Butterworth and he would surely have done so. At first he favored the strong arm work, but he later became interested in the Maxim gun silencer. He thought that was a great thing for us, and said that we could clean up enough in a few months to last us all our lives.

"Pat Sullivan, who has several saloons, was also to be killed. Sullivan lives out on Fourth av., and there is a big hole near his place. Miller and the other fellow, I guess his name is Smith, had talked about killing Sullivan with the strong arm, but Sullivan was too big, and they heard he was a hard fighter.

WOULD USE GUN ON SULLIVAN.

"When Miller thought of the gun silencer, he told me how he would get Sullivan. Sullivan has a ring which Miller said was worth three or four hundred dollars, and besides wore lots of other jewelry. We were to get him some night as he was coming home, just like we were to get Butterworth. When he dropped I was to grab him by the feet, and Miller would take his head and we would drag him to the excavation, drop him down and then wait for a time before we went down to strip him. I remember they were moving a house near Sullivan's at that time; they were doing steam shovel work, and we figured on the empty house."

"Did Miller want to kill Sullivan on account of the McMahon case?" I asked.

"He never said anything about McMahon. He wanted to get Sullivan because he had diamonds, and he would have strong-armed him long ago if he hadn't been afraid Sullivan was too husky."

"Do you honestly believe that Miller would have killed these men to get their diamonds?"

WAS QUICK ON THE TRIGGER.

"You bet he would. He always carried a revolver slung under his arm. He called it his business card. His scheme was that if he was ever caught in a tight place to say, 'Why, here's my business card,' reach in under his left arm as if he were going to get a card out of his inside coat pocket and quickly pull the gun while the policeman was expecting a card. "He told me a thousand times he'd just as soon kill one of them as not if they got him in a tight hole. He told me of many shooting scrapes, and showed me where he had been shot.

"MILLER MADE UP HIS MIND TO KILL CAPT. TENNANT AFTER THE FIRST TIME I WAS ARRESTED ON JUNE 22.

"That was the time Miller made his first mistake. When the policeman picked me up on the first hill and was talking to me, Miller butted in and said he was my uncle. Just then a woman came along and said I was the boy who was standing out in front of her place the night before. I guess we had robbed a house next to hers. Miller kept talking to the cop, but the cop decided to have some people look at me.

"They took me to one house, and the people there didn't think I was the man. The cop had a notion to let me go, but didn't want to take any chances. Miller told the cop that he was a business man down town, and handed him some fancy talk. Finally the cop said he'd take me down to the station.

"Miller asked the cop if he wanted him, too. The cop said 'No,' and Miller said: 'I'll give you my name, and I'll be down to the station and get the boy out tomorrow.' Miller wrote the name in the cop's book, and

GLAVIS WILL TELL STORY

Lewis R. Glavis, who was dismissed by order of President Taft from his position as chief of the Seattle field division of the federal land office, will present his side of the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy in Collier's of November 13. In announcing the publication of the Glavis article, Collier's of this week says: "Mr. Glavis gives facts which can be proved, and these facts go much further than to demonstrate that Mr. Ballinger is a grossly unfit man to be entrusted with the great public interests. They demonstrate that he has already taken steps which deserve not only condemnation but punishment."

President Taft Misdid. "Mr. Taft is good natured and trustful. He has been outrageously misled. He is at the parting of the ways. No such opportunity, we believe, since he came into office, has been presented to him for a decisive stand in favor of a square deal. Other questions which have come up to him have been complicated and have presented many sides. This is a sheer proposition of public morality. It is a question of being for the people or against them. It is a question of saying that the laws are intended to work only against the poor man, or that they are intended to give every human being a fair and equal opportunity as far as may be. Do government and the laws exist to increase human inequality, or do they exist as far as possible to limit it?"

Who Glavis is. "It is known who Mr. Glavis is. He was the confidential investigator of the land office who was thrown out of his position because he was too thorough. His facts have never reached the public. Next week the people of this country will have an opportunity, by a little careful reading, to know precisely what the relations have been between Mr. Ballinger and the Cunningham-Guggenheim crowd. They will know how, in order to help his friends, Mr. Ballinger has gone against the express regulations of his own department. They will realize more fully the degree to which Mr. Ballinger misled the president into extremely essential misstatements of fact. They will have an opportunity to realize the extent to which Mr. Ballinger is willing to go to prevent justice being visited upon a statesman who has been occupied in defrauding the people of the United States."

NEWSIES WILL DANCE

The newsies will dance. One week from tonight the newsboys of the city will gather at the Leschi Park pavilion for their seventeenth annual ball, and for one of the most interesting functions ever witnessed in Seattle. It will be a masquerade ball, and there will be prizes for the most startling, finest and prettiest costumes, as well as prizes for a host of other things.

"UNWRITTEN LAW" TO BE HER DEFENSE

Killed the Man Who Had Wronged Her in Irresistible Impulse of Primeval Womanhood.

AUBURN, Cal., Nov. 6.—When court adjourned today after three days of the trial of Alma Bell, not a single juror had been accepted finally. The feeling in the case is bitter and almost every man called has a most decided opinion.

The pale, child-faced defendant sat quietly through the session this morning, apparently not realizing the full significance of the proceedings.

AUBURN, Cal., Nov. 6.—The plea of wronged young American womanhood and the unwritten law are to be placed on trial before a California jury here. The defense is simple, whimsical Alma Bell is that of deceived feminine trust, a pistol and the deceiver paying the penalty with his life.

When Alma Bell shot Joe Armes, her lover, she did not argue with her conscience. She obeyed the irresistible impulse of primeval woman, killed, and expected to end her own life.

The prosecution is making a bitter fight to bring about conviction. Armes' relatives are wealthy and they have hired one of the best lawyers of the community to assist in avenging the young man's death.

They have framed a hypothetical question which they put to each juror. It runs something like this: "I would kill him."

"Suppose a man had loved and led astray a girl under promise of marriage and refused to keep that promise. Put yourself in place of that girl. What would you do under those conditions?"

Three of the talesmen examined yesterday, sturdy Americans, one a Tennessean, in their turn promptly replied with emphasis: "I would kill him."

They were as promptly excused for cause by Judge Arnett.

Joe Armes, aged 24, was the son of a wealthy rancher. Alma, barely 20, is a poor girl with a widowed mother in her declining years. The mother lives three miles from Auburn with the one sister and the four brothers of Armes.

The Old, Old Story. She had known Joe Armes since childhood. To use her words last evening, she had "gone with Joe" for four years. She had trusted him implicitly. He took her to all the dances and parties. She says they were engaged. She still wears the ring which she says he gave her.

Last February Joe Armes' father died. Then Alma went to live with his family. Many times she says she had asked Joe when he intended to acknowledge her as his wife. He always promised her it would not be long, she says. At last marriage became a necessity if she were to keep herself respected and her good standing. Joe made his promises again.

Then Another Came.

The climax came a few days before the killing, the night of June 5, with only the moon and stars as mute witnesses. A beautiful girl came to visit the Armes family. Joe showed this newcomer some attention and Alma's torture became acute. On Decoration Day, Joe took the rival to the events of the day. It had formerly been his custom to devote all his time to Alma. Shortly after this, it is declared, came to visit the Armes family.
