

OF INTEREST TO OUR WOMEN READERS

Q—I am a constant reader of your column, and want a little advice. I am a young married woman of 20, and have been married four years. I think the world of my husband, but he asks me to lead an immoral life. He says it would not take long for me to make enough money to start him in business, and I could quit, and we could both take it easy. He is 28, and strong and healthy, and earns $20 a week. He says if he doesn't get enough money saved by spring he will never work again. I have always helped him, and am a good cook and housekeeper, and would be willing to be a good woman, and would love to work and earn honest money, but he says it takes too long. I hope you will answer this, as it means a lot to me.

B. L. A.—You have been married just

"CASCARETS" FOR LIVER-HEADACHE

YOU'RE BILIOUS AND CONSTIPATED—CLEAN UP INSIDE AND FEEL BULLY.

Get a 10-cent box now. You're bilious! You have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes, your lips are parched. No wonder your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that liver and bowels are cured by moving with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet, and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

four years too many to that sort of beast. There is no reason on earth why a woman should take an insult from her husband any more than from another man. Did you sell yourself, body and soul, to him when you married? He vowed to protect and cherish you. Does this look like it? Why, he doesn't show even the brute protection for its mate, nor that of the beast man of primeval days. Take it from me, and ponder it hard and long, that no one can make you lead an immoral life but yourself. If you are fool enough to stay with him until he puts into effect the threat to stop work, have him arrested under the lazy husband law, and he will have a chance to try a prison bed instead of the soft future he has planned at your expense. Remember, if you stand for this proposition of his, it is your own fault.

Q—Last night at a party which I thought perfectly respectable, when it was time to go, a couple of boys brought out the picture of "Septimus B. Mors." I want to know whether you consider it proper for that picture to be shown in public places, and become quite a serious affair in our bunch, and we would like to hear your opinion. Please answer as soon as possible. SEPT. A. M.

A.—You, who have been reading my column any length of time, know full well that I stand for purity of a high order. If a picture is proper for exhibition anywhere it is proper that it be shown in public. There is absolutely nothing but beauty for me in the work of art you mention, and none but a vulgar mind will see anything else. It may be made of any and everything, and if the boys had an evil thought in the matter, it was not proper. If there had been one girl there who had a perfectly pure conception of the picture she might have uplifted the thought of the others, and shamed the boys for holding any but the best conception of the beautiful young girl, shivering as she is about to take her morning plunge.

Q—I have been reading your philanthropic answers, and think them fine, so I have decided to ask a question. If you have been reading my column any length of time, and I am a young man of 22, and have just returned after a prolonged absence, should I give a banquet or social in my honor, and I expect to make a speech of any kind, or what should be the nature of it? None of my relatives will be present. Thanking you very much. C. H. E.

A.—Should your friends think enough of you to give you a banquet, it is as little as you can do to express to them your appreciation. If you have been in interesting places since you left, you may recount some of the details for them, and then end by expressing the real joy of coming back to friends after your long absence.

Q—Will you kindly tell me through your columns a cure for kidney trouble? I cannot afford the services of a physician, and furthermore, I prefer trying something you recommend, as I have more confidence in you than in any physician. My eyes are swollen, and always look puffed. Thanking you for anything you can offer. ANON.

A.—I thank you for your confidence, but it is impossible for me to give prescriptions through this column. However, I will tell you that the best remedy of eating a handful of raw wheat several times a day is said to be good for the trouble you have. In any event, it will do no harm. Keep your mind off of your trouble as much as possible, and think and read on healthful subjects.

Q—I am just a young woman. My husband left me and I am to be a mother in four or five months, and haven't any money. Is there any place I can go, and where can I go to find it? I am so a stranger, it is hard for me to find most any place. Please answer, as I am very anxious to find this an excellent purchase. Mother.

A.—Go to the City hospital at the city hall, Fourth and Yesler, and ask to see the head physician. Let him send you. I am sure he will advise you well. Wherever you go, try to keep your mind quiet for the sake of the little one. Things won't always be as they are now, and you and your child have as bright a future as any. By being cheerful, you will help to bring it about quicker.

Q—Will you please give me advice. I know I need it. I am a young girl of 16, and came out of the convent last spring. On a date I met a young man of 18. I went with him, and he led me wrong. Now, Miss Grey, I don't know what to do. I am so worried, at her home. Please, Miss Grey, answer this, for I feel so downhearted. My sister is not good, and wants me to lead that kind of a life. This man promised to marry me, and write me right along, but I am sure he has changed his mind, for he has not answered my questions. He is not in town at present. Please don't turn this down cold. FLORENCE.

A.—My dear child, first and foremost, I want to warn you not to listen to your sister. Bear anything rather than that. Let the world scoff and sneer, if it will (the best part will not), but be the right kind of mother to your child. You have a duty to perform to it, whether or not the father shirks his part of the responsibility. You may, or may not, have been to blame in the matter. If you do not know any better then, you do now, and are responsible for the way you use the knowledge gained. Use this lesson to help you to solve others, and don't mix up your life problem by making worse mistakes.

Go to the juvenile detention station and tell them you sent you, or if you will, I would like you to come to my office any morning between 11 and 12 o'clock, and I will arrange for you to be well cared for, and the boy be made to marry you, if it is possible. No word of blame will I say. I want to help you. "The Kernel and His Friends," 517 Pike; 23c copy. Last 500 copies.—Advertisement.

stein, is going to give her a part in a new musical comedy, "High Jinks," which will produce next month. Miss Hammerstein is abundantly equipped with good looks and has a soprano voice which may some day awaken her grandpapa's interest.

WHAT THE FASHION SHOW DISCLOSES

A Resume of the Autumn Styles as Seen at the Bon Marche's Opening Display.

Now that Seattle's first Fashion Show is an assured success, so successful, in fact, that it will in all likelihood become a semi-annual event, it may not be amiss to say a word or two about the season's authentic fashions as shown at the Fashion Display. At the Bon Marche, a most elaborate display has been arranged—one that does great credit to Mr. Hoffman and his corps of expert decorators—this display seems to render the delightful Autumn Fashions even more charming.

Millinery is, of course, the center of every Fashion Show—and models shown at The Bon Marche are simply enchanting. Shapes are small—even to thinness, and the trimmings are mostly in the perpendicular order. In the imported models, natural ostrich and exquisite Bird-of-Paradise plumage are first favorites. The Fall Hats are mostly made of velvet, plush, velours, and like fabrics. And there is also a new aspirant for public favor in Peau-de-pêche, skin of the peach—there are lots of new colorings for you to see—alger brown, purple, callot blue, verto, russe, Rouge Reynard and many less prominent shades. Nearly all the hats have the soft crown effect—as velvet shows to so much better advantage in this style.

In the Evening Gowns and Wraps, the styles are very beautiful—having been deeply affected by the craze for modern art of the futurist and post-impressionist school. In fact, the great Russian artist Bokst has openly allied himself with the leading French designers—in the cause of artistic refinement—and so we have embroidered and printed effects in weird colorings and most artistic designs, for nothing is plain any more. In form, the new Gowns follow the lines of the natural figure very closely—with the addition of girdles and drapings. Quite different from anything seen before. In Suits, the long coat is back again—but cutaway this time—with the draped effect all thrown into the skirt. Coats promise to be very popular in Seattle this Fall—as they are ideal garments for our Puget Sound Winters. They are in a wide range of fabrics—all fancy—many imitations of furs—astrachan, chinchilla, and the like, and many in knotted boucle effects. Some are handsomely trimmed in brocade velvet or fur—others have just a touch of trimming in collar and cuff. In cut, they all follow the natural contour of the form.

With the advent of girdles and drapings, ribbons have come into their own again—and many a beautiful design is seen in fine brocades or rich post-impressionist effects. The dress garnitures are simply superb and present season styles give them full sway. Metal effects predominate—gold, copper, brass, silver, steel and jet. In silks and dress goods, the Fall styles are singularly beautiful, for, with the passing of plain fabrics, the highest skill of the weavers' art is brought into play—in the beautiful Brocades, Mataleses, Jacquards, and other exquisite fancy weaves.

GETS A LICENSE KILLED BY CAR

It needed six votes to override the mayor's veto on the renewal of C. L. Sheldon's saloon license. Councilman Erickson two weeks ago Monday refused to supply the sixth vote. Was Sheldon discouraged? Nay, nay. He immediately filed an application for a brand new license. That would only need five votes. And the council gave him a new license yesterday. The council also voted to override the mayor's veto of the Savoy hotel license renewal.
