

Paragon Typewriter Ribbons

The clearness and uniformity of your typewritten letters is a factor of incalculable importance to your business—no one can estimate the value of a clear, clean cut, fine appearing typewritten letter as compared to a smudgy and unevenly written one. Just this difference may mean the gain or loss of an immensely profitable customer—just this difference between a Paragon Ribbon and just any typewriter ribbon.

Paragon Ribbons are made of the most perfect and uniform materials and by the most exact and modern process.

Each ribbon, for the character of work for which it is made, is precisely like every other Paragon Ribbon made for that particular purpose.

This means that when you have selected a particular kind of Paragon Ribbon suited to your particular work you are always able to get that particular kind of Paragon Ribbon—maintaining the uniformity of your typewriting year after year.

There is a Paragon Ribbon especially devised for every conceivable typewriting purpose—and there is a Remington representative ready to confer with you concerning ribbons best adapted to fulfill the requirement of your office.

MAY GET A BRIGADE

President Is Expected to Give Distinguished Recruit an Officer's Rank.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—For the first time in history, an ex-president of the United States is plunging through wilderness and desert to get in touch with his country, so that he may offer his services as a soldier to the republic over which he once ruled as president. Col. Roosevelt, hero of the battle of San Juan hill, is hurrying to a seaport from the interior of Brazil to get in touch with the United States by wireless, cable and mail. When he reaches a seaport city, he will use all three to offer his military experience to the country which honored him with the presidency.

He may be given command of a force, approximately a brigade. As a soldier he would serve under the command of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, the commander-in-chief of the United States forces in the field.

Roosevelt, as president, made Gen. Wood, giving the young surgeon his chances and his rapid promotions till he reached the rank he now holds.

When the diplomatic relations between the U. S. and Mexico first strained toward breaking, Col. Roosevelt received news by carrier and chafed at his enforced inactivity at such a time.

When the news of the occupation of Vera Cruz reached the interior of South America, the colonel broke all engagements, pulled tent stakes and started on his strenuous journey.

Speculations are rife concerning the post which will be given to Col. Roosevelt by President Wilson. His former great office of president of the United States will be added to his record as a soldier under active service in Cuba in influencing the result.

Complete Report of Market Today

The poultry market has been fair this week, with the demand especially good for fat hens. Spring broilers have been coming quite freely, especially the smaller sizes, and the demand is more or less slack. The demand for such delicacies is not so good as in former years. Spring and old ducks are lower.

The pork market is firm. Good block hogs are in demand.

PHOTO PLAYS

Scene from the rural drama, "The Town of Nazareth," a two-part American drama at the Grand tonight only. Rosney, jilted by Mary, the girl he loves, still watches over her. He attains success, but her husband fails and believing fate against him in the small town, leaves his wife and son for a larger field. Here the real character of Rosney is shown in his splendid charity and care of the deserted wife and son. In the end he wins his just reward, the woman he loves, when fate plays its card.

Variety at Alhambra

"Temper vs. Temper" is the name of a comedy in which a cure for a wife's temper is discovered. Hubby consults a specialist and is advised to treat her as she treats him. In putting it into effect he does it strong, and she fears for his sanity. She consults the specialist. "Just humor him and give him his way and he'll soon get over it," is his advice. And hubby wins!

War Drama at Class A

The timely two-part Kalem picture, "Captured by the Mexicans," will be shown for the last time tonight at the Class A. It shows the capture of an American by a Mexican rebel band, through the treachery of a greaser, and a battle between the rebels and a troop of federals.

"The Secret Marriage," a two-part Lubin drama at the Dream tonight, tells the story of the folly of deception.

Broncho Billy—Clemmer

Broncho Billy, the Essanay star who is playing at the Clemmer tonight in "Broncho Billy, Gunman," gave a barn hot the other night to the members of his Western company. "Slippery Slim," in reporting the dance, said: "Luke Boardman pretty high lost his eye-sight watchin' some o' those Tango steppers from over to Frisco. One o' the girls had one o' those fiery ceriat cut out kowns (there wasn't much left to cut out) that was held up by one suspender over her shoulder, and Luke was wonderin' as how long the suspender would hold up."

Italian Film—Tivoli

Mila Novelli of the Milano company, in a three-reel Warner feature at the Tivoli, "The Bogus Billionaire," is an Italian star. The plot exposes the clever criminal work of a "lightning change" artist. Tonight is amateur night.

"Pathe's Weekly" is a part of the Colonial's bill today.

Alhambra Until Wednesday Night "Lucile Love," adventure No. 2, two reels; "Animated Weekly," world's news; "Temper vs. Temper," comedy.

MILK DEALER DRAWS WRATH OF PRODUCER

Undersells Competitors: Now He Can't Buy Any More Milk From Wholesaler

SAY THEY'RE "SHORT"

Declares He Offered on Several Occasions to pay Cash But Was Refused

Elmer Olson, owner of the Ralnier Tea & Coffee Store at Hillman City, finds himself in a peculiar predicament.

He has the money to buy condensed milk for his grocery store, but he CANNOT BUY IT. That is to say, he can't buy a certain brand from the producers—because, he believes, he has been underselling the other retail merchants handling this brand of milk.

In other words, he has committed the crime of putting a crimp in the grand old game of sticking the people with high prices, held up by agreement of manufacturers and retailers.

Since last December he has been buying Mount Vernon Evaporated milk from the John B. Agen Co. He figured he could sell at a profit at four cents for 30 cents, while others were selling three for a quarter. He fixed the lower price and did a good business. The people were glad. It made a hit with them.

But, evidently, someone interested heard of the "four cents for 30 cents." Olson ordered another lot of milk from the company and was notified the firm was short on that brand.

Say They Are Short He went later in person and was unable to buy milk of the producers. They were short, they said.

Then, on April 24, he got a letter from them, returning a check he had sent for several cases of the milk. A purchaser in the open market was unable to buy milk when he had the money.

Here's the short letter, telling him of the shortness of milk. "Dear Sir: We have yours of the 22nd, inclosing check to cover five cases of milk. We are short of milk at the present time and unable to fill your order and are returning your check herewith. Thanking you for the order, we are yours truly."

"THE JOHN B. AGEN CO." said Olson, "is whether or not a producing company can refuse to sell goods to a man who has the cash. I didn't even ask for credit and yet I cannot supply my customers."

you, for almost every one would misunderstand me, but Dick is not the kind of a man that attracts a woman of great intellectuality. I don't think jealousy means a great love; to me it means a great vanity on the part of the one jealous—one whose pride is easily hurt and to whom complete possession of the mind and body of the one loved is the only idea of perfect love.

CONFESIONS OF A WIFE

CHAPTER CXL. Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Enterprise Association. CHILDLESS WOMAN LIKE A CHILDLESS TREE

Had a letter from Jack this morning, overflowing with gratitude because I have helped to make the little girl he married comfortable. Says he slept well for the first time the night he got the letter from Mary telling him how well she was fixed and how "sweet" I had been to her. Aunt Mary, too, seems almost content. She is knitting baby socks and jackets and talking over with Mary the best way to take care of young children, of which, like all childless women, she is, of course, an authority.

I have hardly had time to cultivate any of the women in the hotel, and, between you and me, little book, I don't think many of them are worth cultivating. They seem such a lazy, inconsequential lot, and it takes all of the brains most of them have to plan how they shall fill the hours that they pass between waking and sleeping.

Most of them are so greedy for the admiration of every man whom they meet. And the only time they seem to wake up is at night, when the men in the house come home from work.

That little Mrs. Brown is a gossip, and she is always nosing about. Yesterday she came up to my room and said she had heard that the Symones were going to get a divorce, and she thought she would ask me about it, because she knew I would be sure to know all about it.

"I certainly do not," I answered, emphatically. "I do not think Eliene would get a divorce if she had cause, as you know she is a devout Catholic. But when Mr. Wayerly and I, the other night, bade good-bye to Mr. and Mrs. Symone as they boarded the train for New York, from whence they had engaged passage for Europe, I am sure that nothing was further from my own thoughts."

"Do you really mean they started abroad without any notice?" she asked, surprised.

"Mr. Symone found it imperative to be on the other side, and Eliene started with him on the minute." This is absolutely true, and I hope will stop the gossip, as Mrs. Brown did not stay long, as she was anxious to tell the news.

I do not know how the Symones are going to patch up their differences, but I am sure Eliene will not divorce him.

I wonder how I would feel if I knew that Dick had held another woman in his arms, and made love to her, all the time he was living with me?

I can't imagine it. I have never been jealous of Dick, not even of his affair with Eleanor Fairlow before we were married, even though I know she still loves him.

Some way, I feel now as though jealousy means lack of self-respect. I guess I am rather a conceited person, but I think I could not be jealous of any other woman without acknowledging her superiority.

Of course, I know there are lots of cleverer women than I, but I have not yet seen them in Dick's company. You see, little book, I would not dare to say that to any one but you, for almost every one would misunderstand me, but Dick is not the kind of a man that attracts a woman of great intellectuality. I don't think jealousy means a great love; to me it means a great vanity on the part of the one jealous—one whose pride is easily hurt and to whom complete possession of the mind and body of the one loved is the only idea of perfect love.

I do not, however, consider that it would be an exhibition of jealousy to resent the conduct of one you loved, if that one was doing things which would bring you into disgrace. A lover's fame or disgrace may be keenly felt by his sweetheart or friend, but society does not associate them with the other's reputation or disgrace. Not so with husband and wife. His promotion is her honor—his fall her humiliation. There is "one glory and one shame" and their destiny is to "share each other's tears."

THIRD SERIES OF LUCILE LOVE, NOW ON SOUTH SEA ISLAND, PLAYS AT ALHAMBRA TONIGHT

"Loubeque with the Medicine Man"—scene from the third installment of Lucile Love, the adventure series now playing at the Alhambra. In this Loubeque, the international spy (unfortunately for Lucile) is cast upon the same isle with Lucile. He persuades the medicine man of the savages who inhabit it that Lucile will hurt his power and death then threatens her. (Lucile started on this wild adventure to retake papers stolen from her father, General Love, of Manila, and after an aeroplane flight, overtaking a China liner at sea, is shipwrecked, the two reels at the Alhambra today taking up the story at this point.)
