SHALL 'LONESOME GIRL' KEEP HER IDEAL, EVEN THOUGH HE IS RICH AND SHE IS POOR?

"Lonesome Girl" is 28, has worked since 14, is considered good looking and neat dressed. Her young man, her ideal, speaks to her, saying she looks lonesome, and asking permission to talk to her. She introduces them to him. He asks for permission to call. She gives him her telephone number. She learns he is the son of a "wealthy and big-up" family. "I knew when he found out who I was," she says, "he wouldn't have anything to do with me. I couldn't have him come to see me because of my home." He telephones, and asks to call. She meets him at her home. They go to the theatre, and he takes her riding in auto. He always calls her "Gaby."

"Lonesome Girl" asks Cynthia Gray what to do. "He has millions, while I am only a poor working girl," she writes. "Shall I try to forget or go with him, and maybe get turned down later?"

"The Star passed the question of this real romance to its readers. The best answer will get $5.00.

Address your letter to "Lonesome Girl" Editor, Seattle Star.

It's a mighty big problem. Scores of letters with various opinions for the solution of the poor girl's dilemma are flooding into The Star office. Just a few of the answers are given below. Do you agree with any one of them?

"There is no reason why you should not marry your ideal, rich or poor, but first prove him your ideal," writes "T. R."

"Granting that you are not a worldly person, I will not condemn the manner in which you became acquainted, for love laughs at conventionalities. While rich young men are not always to be trusted, the same will apply to persons of a more lowly station in life. You are privileged to have a husband, rich or poor. If he cares for you he will not condemn your place of abode. Permit him to call, go to the theatre with him, dine with him in respectable places, ride with him in his auto and if he insults you, slap him in the face; then accept his apology, if offered. Preserve your own self respect and when, after a reasonable probation, he has proved himself your ideal morally and physically, I would marry him, if you have the opportunity."

"Go in and win!" advised a writer signing the name "Happy Days" to the letter. "If you fail, turn your face toward the morning with the determination to be more worthy of conquest and of victory in the next encounter in the lists of love."

"If you are good, true, pleasing in appearance, of fair education and possessed of youthful charm, why should you think yourself less worthy than the young fellow who seeks your society? Money does not make for distinction nor will it buy any human virtue nor make its possessor more to be desired for self alone. Set up no false gods in your house. If you love him for himself and not for his motor cars or his money, grasp your opportunity, for the proverb says: 'It is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all.' Take your 'fighting chance,' dear little 20-year-old and give him back smile for smile, dream your sweet dream and love him with all your heart. Remember, 'The love of a good woman is worth all the glories of an empire.'"

"First of all, 'Lonesome Girl,' be proud," says A. Moe. "All men love to see women proud. This young man is undoubtedly like toward him, but rather act as if you were the daughter of a king. Do not think he honors you with his company, but rather show him that you do him the honor, even if you are only a poor, working girl. If he does not love you for your own personality, without regard to your social standing, he is not worthy of your love."

"Were I 'Lonesome Girl,' I would not drop the rich ideal," declares Mrs. F. McKernon, 341 Findlay st. "But I would let him know that I was a poor, working girl. Then if he cared for the girl herself he would not consider her poverty. Many a poor girl has won a rich man."

"So, 'Lonesome Girl,' do not worry about being poor."

"My answer to the 'Lonesome Girl' problem is: Ask him to marry you," says Mrs. Louise Marion, 7847 Stroud av., Green Lake.

"I would say to cherish your love for this gentleman," suggests Mrs. R. L. Donham, 6335 39th av. S. W. "If it is mutual, I see no reason why you should not accept his attentions. To me love balances all inequalities. Money does not constitute character. Breeding, health and good mental attainments should cast down any barrier between your position and his."

"I would recognize my superior in intelligence, but not in wealth. Don't let money or social position submerge perhaps the best instincts of your life. Develop your own individuality."

"June" writes in red ink: "Try to win your millionaire's love if possible. It is hard for a girl to live on love alone."

"A Woman of Experience" warns against further thought of the young man with money.

"I would advise you, 'Lonesome Girl,' not to waste your time, if it is at all valuable, even in the capacity of a working girl. I am a woman of experience and I have yet to meet the young or old man with millions who would risk his wealth and social standing by taking upon himself a poor working girl and the responsibility of opening a new and strange life to her. I would advise any young man or woman to seek an equal. Show your independence and sound sense."
