'HUMAN FIEND' ALLOWED TO GO TO CHURCH AFTER 33 YEARS IN SOLITARY CONFINEMENT

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 25.—After 33 years of solitary confinement in a cell, Jesse Pomeroy, the "human fiend," has been permitted to worship God in the company of his fellow convicts for the first time.

During a whole generation of time this extraordinary criminal, who has grown to manhood and into middle age in cell No. 26 of the Charlestown prison, was regarded by the authorities of Massachusetts to be "too bad to go to church."

At 14, Jesse Pomeroy, a newboy, was sentenced to be hanged for the murder of a little girl and several boys.

Hears First Sermon
Because of his extreme youth, the sentence was commuted to solitary confinement for life.

Never permitted to look upon the faces of his fellow-prisoners, never allowed to exercise at the same hour, Jesse Pomeroy received the first mitigation of his sentence when he was permitted, on the 47th anniversary of his birth, to enter the prison chapel and listen to a sermon by the prison chaplain. A special keeper sat beside him during the services.

Pomeroy's interest in the proceedings was breathless. He studied every face in the chapel.

Knows Library by Heart
In every other secluded instance of lonely and protracted imprisonment a twilight of the mind has followed.

But Pomeroy has not gone crazy. On the contrary, he has developed from an ignorant newboy into an omnivorous reader of books.

The prison library numbers 8,000 volumes.

The man who was "too bad to go to church" KNOWS THEM ALL BY HEART.

He has learned French and Spanish and has become an expert bookkeeper.

He has made nine separate attempts to escape, and on several occasions has very nearly succeeded.

For this reason he is not permitted, as other prisoners are, to keep a knife and fork in his cell.

H. M. Kennedy, slayer of Harry Warner, leads Newport, Wash., posse through dense forest to body of victim.

Letters To Cynthia Grey

Q.—Every pair of shoes I purchase squeak as soon as I wear them. I have bought shoes of every description, but with the same result. Can you shed any light upon this subject? DISGUSTED.

A.—Squeaking of shoes is supposed to be caused by the separation of the upper from the sole, or an interstice in the sole. Soak sole in a pan of water over night, have the space filled with shoemaker's wax, or drive two or three shoemaker's pegs into the sole.

Q.—I am going to move into my own home, and no doubt the neighbors will call. How ought I to receive them, and ought I to serve luncheon in the living room on a small table? If so, what would be suitable to serve? Should I thank them for calling, or merely invite them to call again? How soon after they call should I repay their call? If they are not at home, should I leave my card? MRS. F. W.

A.—Receive them cordially and ask them into the living room, as you would friends.

A cup of tea and a light sandwich or wafers may be served, pouring the tea yourself from a low table, but this is not necessary for a first call. Neither thank them for calling nor invite them to come again, for it is understood that before they can come again the call must be repaid.

You may say, "I hope we may see each other often," or words to that effect. The call should be repaid within two weeks.

You may leave your card whether the hostess is at home or not.

Q.—Please, won't you help me, as I never went to court in my life, and am not posted on how to go about it, and being a stranger here makes it still worse for me. Like some other fool women, I married a man from one of these matrimonial clubs. Formerly I lived in British Columbia, owned my own home, and worked to support a 9-year-old girl and myself, which I considered was hard; but I did not better things any when I married this man.

He is a confirmed liar and misrepresented everything to me. I sold my furniture and came here to find an old log shack, away back in the brush, and him barely making a living for himself. But that was not the worst of it. He has filthy habits, the worst of which is spitting on the floor, and to me cleanliness is next to godliness.

I certainly was well taken in by this fake, as his description was "well-to-do, nice appearing man." Now, can you imagine my surprise when I arrived? I had no money to return, and that is why I come to you for advice.

I have no money to obtain a divorce at this time. If I should leave his house and get work, would I sue him for support? What will a divorce cost?

I was honest with this man, and he got the information about me from my home town, where I was known to be a respectable, honest, hard-working woman. Even if you think I have a pretty good case against him for divorce? And please tell me how to go about it.

UNHAPPILY MARRIED.

A.—Your letter will serve as a worthy answer to the men and women who write me daily for advice as to whether they should seek a partner through one of these bureaus, and I hope every one of them will read your experience and let it soak in.

In order to obtain a divorce, you must take your case to a lawyer, who will file your suit for you. It will cost you in the neighborhood of $25.

If your husband can barely support himself, there would be little or no satisfaction in suing him for support. I advise you to get away as quickly and with as little trouble as possible, and profit by your experience. When a woman marries solely for support, she invariably runs upon a snag.

Q.—Kindly tell me, if I draw up my own will and have it signed by two witnesses, would it be legal? Would a will drawn up before marriage be legal after marriage? P.

A.—The will will be legal if signed by the testator in the presence of two witnesses, and signed by both witnesses, in the presence of the testator and each other. That is, it will be legal so far as that point is concerned.

A will drawn up before marriage is legal after marriage so far as property or money accumulated before marriage is concerned. It would not, however, hold good in regard to community property if it conflicted with the law regarding community property.

Q.—A party owes a grocery bill in another city, which is past three years old. The debtors live here at present. Can the bill be collected or is it outlawed? How is a bill collected after it is outlawed? The grocer happens to be my brother-in-law. C. J.

A.—An open account is outlawed five years after date of last payment, so the grocery bill is good for two years yet. There is no way to collect a bill after it has been outlawed.

Q.—I am a young girl of 17. My father is dead and my mother is married again. My stepfather is very mean to me, if I don't do what he tells me to, he whips me. Sometimes I feel like I wanted to run away, but, if I do, I have no place to go.

If my mother was any comfort or consolation it would not be so hard to bear; but she wants me to go with her, at who knows are not respectable, and I will not do it. I am a respectable girl and intend to remain so, and if I can't go with a decent fellow, I won't go with any at all.

Miss Grey, is there a way I can get out of it all? Please tell me what to do. GIRL READER.

A.—I can scarcely believe that some parents have the welfare of their offspring so little at heart; for instance, the mother in the above case.

I advise this little girl to report her case to the judge of the Juvenile court, at the courthouse, and he will find a decent place for her to stay.

Q.—I would like to have you explain something which puzzles me very much. It is that fiery red light which is seen in the pupil of the eye at certain times. It is seen in every color of eyes and mostly in artificial light. A. R.

A.—Oculists claim that it is caused by the tiny blood vessels in the inner eye. This reflection is especially noticeable when the pupil is expanded and the light strikes it at a certain angle.

CHIEF LANG'S CRUSADE AGAINST GAMBLING CLOSES ANOTHER DEN

Patrolman W. G. Witzke is an innocent looking chap in plain clothes.

Which accounts for the misfortune which befell Harry Wong, 22 and S. Tae, 20, who are accused of running a gambling game in conjunction with a clothing store in Occidental ave.

Customer enters the clothing store. If he gives the password he is admitted to the gambling room after passing through couple of sets of swinging doors. Witzke entered the clothing store. No, he didn't want to buy anything. Was there any excitement going on anywhere? Wong gave him an exhaustive once over. Tae also squinted a couple of eyesful at him.

They decided he was just a plain simp. So they took him to the chamber of chambers.

There were about 99 in the room. Witzke drew his trusty revolver and informed his hosts, Wong and Tae, they were under arrest.

The rest of the crowd scrambled outside before Officers Pederson and Phillips joined in the Witzke festivities.

PEACE ASSURED GERMANS MAY MAKE STATE OF BELGIUM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—State department dispatches today showed conditions in Mexico were calm, the several factions apparently having agreed to a temporary truce.

Reports from Naco said conditions there were satisfactory. Gen. Scott reported that his negotiations with the Villista and Carranzista commanders would result in a permanent peace agreement so far as Naco, Sonora, was concerned.

LONDON, Dec. 25.—Germany is said to be intimating to Belgium that it is a permanently conquered country, will become a German state after the fashion of Saxony and Bavaria, and that the future ruler of Belgium will be Prince Otto of Windisch-Graetz.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 25.—After visiting an undertaking establishment, purchasing a coffin and leaving money to cover the expenses of a funeral and interment, Wm. Moler, 59, shot himself through the heart today, dying instantly. He left a note indicating that absence from his family and friends at Christmas time, with certain other causes, had prompted his act.
