DETECTIVE IS GUARDING MURPHY'S SON

Two years ago, at the end of a bitterly fought case in the superior court here, a young criminal listened intently while John F. Murphy, then prosecuting attorney, argued with vehement eloquence and inexorable logic that it was the duty of the jury to find the defendant guilty.

Six weeks ago Murphy, now in private practice, met the young man and his mother at the corner of Second and Madison, in the heart of the retail district. The young man would have attacked Murphy, but his mother threw her arms about him and quieted him. "Don't be a fool!" she said. Then, to Murphy: "I KNOW A BETTER WAY. WE'LL GET YOU YET."

Anxious to avoid a scene, Murphy hurried away through the crowd. The old woman shook a withered fist at him as he departed. Yesterday an automobile drew up in front of the Murphy residence, 1115 Federal ave. A young man asked for Mrs. Murphy. Ruby Lipton, a servant, told him Mrs. Murphy was not at home.

"I've come for Jack," the man said. "His father sent me. He is waiting at Second and Union." Jack, who is four years of age, shouted: "Goody! Goody!" and tried to rush past the servant, but was dragged back. "If Mr. Murphy wanted Jack to go with you, he would telephone," said the domestic, and slammed the door in the stranger's face.

Today Jack has for a playmate a big man who never lets him get out of his sight. The big man is a detective. The entire police force is looking for the vindictive convict.

BRIGHT LIGHTS CAUSE SUICIDE

Her fancy for the bright lights of San Francisco and her consequent estrangement from husband and son, is given by the San Francisco police Saturday as the cause of suicide, yesterday, of Mrs. Chase Garfield, formerly of Seattle. No motive for the suicide was revealed until the police pieced together the torn bits of a special delivery letter from the woman's husband, who lived in Los Angeles.

The Great Northern has agreed to make any necessary repairs to the library building, provided the city will drop all other suits for damage which grew out of the settling of earth while the tunnel was under construction.

What They Ask Cynthia Grey

Q.—We have just started to take The Star, and I find a great interest in reading your letters. I thought I would ask you how I could entertain a young man whom I would like to ask to call. I have never invited any boys to call yet. We have just a little house with four rooms. After supper we all go in the front room and we have no kind of an instrument that any of us plays. I have four little sisters and when any one comes, they always have to hang around and bother. Let what I want to ask you is, how could I entertain him? He has a violin, which he plays. Thanking you. N. C.

A.—The more closely I study the modern girls who have arrived at the beau stage, the more I find that too many of them are not genuine. They are too self-conscious and do not depend enough upon their personalities to get them along.

A generation ago the majority of girls lived in small houses, there were larger families than nowadays, and they had no musical instruments to depend upon for entertainment. And still more girls married in proportion to the population than now. Don't fool yourself that a boy with any sense is coming to see you because you live in a fine house, because you have a piano, or because you wear a silk dress.

Now, my girl, don't be ashamed of your home and don't scorn your little sisters; remember, you were once at the curious age. Invite your friend to your home some evening and tell him that you know no music at your house, and that all of you would enjoy hearing him play. He will no doubt enjoy playing for you more than to sit and listen to some one else play. Later on in the evening, make some candy. Let every one help, as a crowd of people get as much fun out of making candy as they do eating it. If you are a wholesome, good-natured girl, there is no reason why you and the young man should not become real good friends; that is, if he is sincere.

Q.—Please tell me an appropriate way to make a crepe de chine skirt. Thanks very much. DOROTHY D.

A.—Shir about the waist to form a yoke, either deep or narrow, to suit the taste and figure. Cords may be run in, if desired. Wide tucks appear in many of the best skirts. Side-plaited skirts are very stylish.

Q.—I am a girl of 24, and have the problem of earning my own living staring me in the face. I have only a common school education and would like to learn a trade or profession, something I can depend upon in after years. Will you help me decide? ANXIOUS GIRL.

A.—This is one of the most impossible questions that I ever have to answer. To be successful in a profession or in work of any sort the person must be adapted to that work. His taste, his personality, his powers of endurance, his health as well as his education must be taken into consideration. So it is impossible to choose a life work for another person, especially when no particulars as to that person's tastes or temperament are given. I might recommend library work to a girl who hated the sight of a book, or nursing to one who faints at the sight of blood. But generally the range of professions in which women are engaged is so broad nowadays that no woman should have trouble in finding her proper sphere.

Q.—I took out my first naturalization papers about six years ago. Will I have to take my first papers out again before I can get my second papers? My wife time in this country during the six years and can establish proof that you took out first papers, you should be able to get your second papers, provided that you are qualified in every other way.

Q.—I am a young married girl, have a comfortable home and a good husband. I am not extravagant in any way. I am alone all day and have decided to get myself a little pet dog or bird. My husband thinks it would only be a nuisance and a waste of time. Please give me your opinion on it, as I want him to see your answer. Thanking you in advance. CURLY.

A.—I think you might put your time to a much better advantage than fussing over a pet dog or bird. You could surely find a little child whose parents are having a struggle to keep it and bring it up to help them out. Or if your husband is willing, get an orphan child and bring it into your home and care for it as though it were your own. If you cannot do this, there are special courses in painting, china-painting, needle-work, music and literary work that you could take up your spare moments, which would turn your idle time into something worth while. Seize every opportunity to broaden yourself by seeking the higher and better things in life.

STREET CAR FLIRTATION ENDS IN JAIL
It began with the most guileless sort of a flirtation on a street car—the merest flash of an eye—and has resulted in the arrest of John S. Hawkins, the conductor, and the home-leaving of Miss Elsie Ryan, who now resides at 710 Pine st. Hawkins has been working on the Seattle, Renton & Southern, and as conductor met Miss Ryan, who made daily trips between York station, where her parents have their home, and Seattle, where she was employed as a salesgirl in a department store.

Miss Ryan is pretty enough to attract the eye of almost any man, and Hawkins, although married, a fact which she did not know, she says, flirted. That was early in October, 1913. An acquaintance that at first was only a good-natured morning and evening became more intimate. Last May she learned that Hawkins had a family out on the Renton line. She turned to Justice Reah Whitehead and a warrant was issued for Hawkins' arrest. Constable Lambert located him in the dispatcher's office at York, Friday afternoon.

FIND DEAD MAN

Craig, who is the son of Robert Craig of Richmond Beach, was drowned March 16 when he and a party of three other boy friends embarked for a pleasure trip in a skiff and rocked the boat. F. Peterson of Richmond Beach heard the lad's cries for help and rescued three.
