AIRMEN WATCH CHICKENS COME HOME TO ROOST

ANXIOUS HOUR DAILY

'Who's Still Out?' First Question Fliers Ask as They Land

By Wm. G. Shepherd

HEADQUARTERS OF THE BRITISH ARMY, Northern France, April 28.—(By Mail to New York.)—I stood on the flying field at dusk this evening with a score of Gen. French's young men and saw "the chickens come home to roost." Of all the tense hours on the flying grounds, the one hour of twilight and dusk, before nightfall, is the hour that tugs hardest at the nerves of the flying men.

Wherever a flying man may be, you will see a certain nervousness and distraction come over him about sunset. Soon he will bestir himself. Whether he walks along the French roads to where his flying grounds are situated, or whether he is lucky enough to get a lift in a passing automobile, you will find him, some time before darkness begins to fall, on his own particular flying field.

He is "waiting for the chickens to come home to roost," as he calls it.

I walked out of the town this evening with two flying men. "I've got a couple of pals who have been up all afternoon," explained one. "I want to see whether they have come in or not."

When we got to the field we found 30 or more of the young, lithe Brits who make up Gen. French's flying squad at this place. They stood about in knots, chatting, cutting nervously at the grass with their canes, or sitting in the lee of the hangars to protect themselves from the wind.

"There's ———, I think," said one young fellow.

He looked his gaze and saw a dot in the sky, no larger than the head of a pin.

"No, that's ———," said another youth.

"Right you are," said the first one. "I was mistaken."

How he knew he was mistaken I could not understand.

Neither could the flying men explain the ability to distinguish one aeroplane from another.

They have developed it, that's all.

The spot grew bigger. Suddenly the machine tilted and spiraled down dizzily. Within a minute or two, it had alighted, and two heavily armed young Brits climbed from it.

One after another, spots appeared in the sky, were recognized, and swooped down to us.

At last they were all in but one. Night was almost upon us.

A man in an aeroplane must see the grass to alight.

There's a clever little throw of the lever which will bring him to earth lightly, instead of in a smash.

"He's a young fellow, and a new flier," explained an officer, "and I am rather worried about him."

"Better get out the flares," he said to an attendant.

The flares are white lights that are placed about the field when a flier is out at night. By them he can trace his way thru the night sky to his own flying field.

Suppose the flier did not come back. Where might he be?

This was not an ordinary peace flight. It was war time. He might be a wreck of broken bones and bleeding flesh; men had been trying to kill him all afternoon; they had been shooting at him like hunters shooting at a bird; he had gone hunting him in packs; if he had gone near the trenches, it was certain that a thousand German rifles had pointed him.

We were waiting for a man who might be dead. There were the soldiers setting out the flares and getting ready to light them. No one was speaking now.

"That's him," said an officer.

"Yes," answered three or four of the young men at once.

"Where?" I asked.

"Can't see him yet, but that's his propeller," explained one of my friends.

Their trained ears had caught the hum of his aeroplane engine.

Soon he came into view. It was almost dark when the machine settled down onto the field. Two young fellows piled out of it and walked over to us.

"Who is not in?" asked one of them.

"Everybody's here," said the captain.

"Good," said the chap for whom we had all been waiting. Then we dispersed.

Every "chicken" had come home to "roost."

FAT MAN IN NIGHTIE AMUSES BROADWAY

NEW YORK, May 21.—The spectacle of a corpulent man, puffing indignantly and clad only in a night-shirt, being shoved about by a jeering crowd on Broadway at 48th st. in the small hours of the morning startled Patrolman McVey.

He said he was Bartley McCullem, a moving-picture actor. He explained that he had been dumped into a tub of ice water during an initiation into a social club earlier in the evening and that later he dreamed the plunge was going to be repeated, so in his sleep he fled from his bed to Broadway.

"When You're Well, Keep Well"

BE SURE SUMMER FOOD ISN'T TAINTED

Most people are extremely careful not to cheat themselves in regard to money matters, and yet they are the same people who deliberately cheat themselves in regard to health—which, if they only stopped to realize, is vastly more valuable to them than money.

People tell themselves they are "living the simple life and dieting," when, in reality, they are gorging themselves.

After deciding to go on a diet, many persons promptly cut down their meals to two a day. They tell themselves at once that they are on the high road to health, but they are only fooling themselves.

for they really are hurting themselves by eating more in two meals than they formerly ate in three. They do not know that an over-heavy meal clogs the system worse than the same amount of food spread over the usual three meals a day.

And there are many other ways in which people cheat themselves. They think they ventilate their houses, when it really is the "dead air" they are breathing that is giving them more than their share of colds and is exposing them to the dangers of pneumonia and tuberculosis.

Women who decide that all that they need is exercise for that "run down" feeling will stir around the house a little, walk to the car, ride to the park, walk around a few minutes, take the car back home, and then sit down in easy chairs and fool themselves into thinking that they have taken exercise enough to burn up the waste in their bodies and keep the muscle fibers toned up.

To relieve sunburn, apply vaseline, cold cream, witch hazel, buttermilk or any other soothing application. Boracic acid or toilet powder applied before going out in the sun will help to protect the skin.

KNOW THY HUBBY

CHICAGO, May 28.—Men who Altho Charles F. Gondiof had been known to the police for years as a notorious swindler and gambler, Mrs. Gondiof swore before Vice Chancellor Leaming, in Camden Court of Chancery, that she had lived with her husband for 21 years and always thought him to be a traveling salesman.

Mrs. Gondiof's husband is now serving a five-year sentence in Sing Sing prison for swindling.

PETROGRAD, Russia, May 28.—INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 21.—Emily Smith, 68 years old, who for 25 years had been known to Indianapolis people as a pauper, possesses a fortune of $8,000. When sanitary inspectors called at Miss Smith's home yesterday to clean it they discovered hidden under newspapers which covered the floors to a depth of 18 inches $347 in currency, a certified check for $200, mortgages valued at $5,000, bank books showing deposits of $1,800 and other property of unknown value.

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With The Othine Prescription

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first application should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double-strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

HUNGRY PUG EATS THE BLOOMIN' LOT

PHILADELPHIA, May 28.—Chas. Weber, a puglist from New York, while in a cell here on a charge of forgery, told Turnkey Gordon of the Thompson st. police station that he hadn't eaten for a week; that he was as hungry as a polar bear, and wouldn't Gordon please get $1 from his money in the sergeant's desk and take his order for a square meal? Gordon did.

Ten minutes later Gordon faced the house sergeant with a wry face. "What do you think of that fighting guy?" he asked. "E said ez ow e wanted a square meal and sent me out for a dollar's worth of cream puffs, and blow me if e didn't eat every bloomin' one of 'em."

JIM WAS MISTAKEN

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 28.—James F. McGee, former cashier of the Crestwood bank, got the scare of his life and suffered a shock which necessitated calling a physician when he found a six-foot "Georgia Bull" snake crawling about his room in a local hotel.

Thinking a friend was playing a joke on him, McGee grabbed the snake, when the reptile began to show fight and put up a hard battle.

Clerks and attaches of the hotel came to his rescue.

A clerk at the hotel said the snake belonged to a vaudeville performer whose room was directly above that of McGee's.
