HERE'S REASON WHY NEARING 'GOT THE BOOT'

(EDITOR'S NOTE—The University of Pennsylvania is ruled by a board of trustees, the members of which are stockholders in notorious corporations or the tools of notorious corporations. Prof. Scott Nearing of that university rebelled at social conditions in America today, wrote books against them and talked against them. So the trustees fired him, as recently explained in the columns of this newspaper. Since that event, Milton Bronner, a staff correspondent of this newspaper, has been reading Prof. Nearing's books in order that he might tell our readers something about this discharged teacher's ideas. The following article is one result of Mr. Bronner's readings.)

BY MILTON BRONNER
PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 25.—Following the old nursery rhyme about the house that Jack built, this story might begin this way:
This is the state that privilege rules.
This is the most conservative city in the state that privilege rules.
This is the "safe and sane" university in the most conservative city in the state that privilege rules.

This is the group of corporation men who control the board of trustees of the "safe and sane" university in the most conservative city in the state that privilege rules.

And finally here is Scott Nearing, the young adjunct professor who shocked this group of corporation men and lost his job as a consequence at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

How did he do it? Well, I have been reading all his books for the benefit of the readers of The Star, and I find, for one thing, that he believes that the religion of Jesus is a real religion, not mere lip service, not mere endowing of churches and petting of fashionable preachers.

In his book, "Social Religion," published in 1913 by the Macmillan company of New York city, he inveighed against the haggard man, the motherless girl, the factory child; he denounced the overlong day of labor and the sacrifice of human lives to corporate greed.

He considered the feelings of some of the university trustees so little that he wrote:
"While misery remains in the land; while men are condemned to overwork and underpay; while women are forced into prostitution; while children are compelled to labor, there will be need for a Social Religion."

Closing his eyes to the fact that many of the trustees—his bosses—were big corporation men and that others were big corporation lawyers, this rash young man, speaking of churches supported by money made in Pennsylvania's pet industries, exclaimed:
"Beautiful buildings, exquisite windows, divine singing—but how was that church built? Who pays the salaries? There are men working 12 hours a day, seven days a week in the steel mills of Pittsburgh. Are you a stockholder of United States Steel? Did you drop an offering into the collection box? You thought that you were dropping in silver or gold, but it was the bloody sweat of a fellow-being, laboring hopelessly beside the roar of the blast furnace—sacrificed on the altar of industrial progress."

It is the policy of men like those who control the university board of trustees to preach that this is the best of all possible worlds; to discountenance anything that will make the "masses" discontented.

And yet here comes this mere adjunct professor who studies human lives as affected by wages rather than the stock market reports, and finally, quoting Christ's parable of the man who fell among thieves, says:
"Men and women all over America today have fallen among thieves. You must bind up their wounds; you must catch the thieves, and you must break up the system which promotes thievery. But before you begin thief-catching, ask yourself the question: 'If some one should cry, 'Stop thief!' would my conscience begin to run?'"

SAYS WE WORRY TOO MUCH

We of America are always worrying about what other folks think of us. The people in the big cities of Europe don't care a cent about the opinions of outsiders. Our attitude is a sign of provincialism, from which we should recover.

This was the charge of Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the University of Minnesota, addressing an audience of teachers and university alumni at Broadway high school, Tuesday evening. His subject was "The Sense of the State."

"The individual who trusts to luck sooner or later comes to grief. So with the nation. We need leadership, planning, co-ordinate work under a plan, steady thinking to carry out in one a well-constructed national purpose.

"I mean no irreverence, but I am able to see how Americans think this country has the personal confidence of the Almighty. Do you imagine any nation has a monopoly on providential guidance? Our conception should be large enough to include all mankind. No nation however, can be strong unless it believes in its own great purpose. We should be willing modestly and humbly to play our part in the great scheme of things."

Dr. Vincent was guest at a noon luncheon Tuesday at the College club. University of Minnesota alumni entertained him at 6 o'clock dinner. He left for Portland late Tuesday night.

WILL DEEPEN SEATTLE CANAL

Members of the national congressional rivers and harbors committee who are on the Sound looking over port facilities, etc., Tuesday gave assurance to Seattle advocates that they would support in congress the plan to deepen the Lake Washington canal from the locks to Salmon bay so the greatest ocean-going craft might enter at low tide.

Inasmuch as it is this committee which says what is and what isn't in rivers and harbors improvements, it looks as if the canal would be deepened.

The additional work would call for more dredging, so the canal below the locks would be from 25 to 30 feet deep at low tide. Under the present conditions all vessels of whatever depth may enter the canal at high tide, but not when the tide is out.

The last rivers and harbors bill provided for a preliminary examination of the canal for this purpose. The cost is estimated at between $200,000 and $300,000.

The committee members Tuesday visited the Bremerton navy yard, and at a luncheon given in their honor at the Bremerton Commercial club declared that the Pacific coast must be provided with adequate defenses, equal to those of the Atlantic. They promised to ask for more work for the navy yard, and to secure for the North Pacific a larger unit of the American fleet.

S. E. CO. HAS OWN ORGAN

The Puget Sound Traction, Light & Power Co. has named its weekly bulletin "The Electrogram."

This week's issue announces that Hazel Butterfield, 3030 W. 66th st., and Margaret Greeley, 2567 9th ave. W., have won the contest selecting the name of the new publication.

Vera Ferguson, 908 American Bank building, and Dr. Walter K. Seelye, 806 American Bank building, were second and third prize winners, respectively.

The bulletin contains an argument against the jitneys and figures showing the immense wealth of electric companies.

EVANGELIST SHOULDERS GUN

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—Gypsy Smith, the famous evangelist, is at the battle front with the British troops. The ministerial committee conducting services at the Van Ness tabernacle was advised of this today, but it is hoped to bring Smith here in October, for a series of sermons.

BULL THROWING WAS FIZZLE

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—Bull throwing was a complete fizzle at the exposition today when the "bull fight" concession on the Zone closed its doors. Patronage did not warrant the payment of hospital bills for matadors and toradors. One bull, however, which was responsible for several ambulance calls, was standing peacefully in a stall ready for another fight. The bull's name is "Grace."
