HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF FISH WASTED IN ALASKA

SEWARD, Alaska, Sept. 9.—After a couple of years in Alaska it is apparent that this is the best governed part of the United States, so far as the people of the territory are concerned, and about the worst governed as regards its resources. It would be difficult to conceive of a much more simple way to govern a people. The president appointed the governor of Alaska, its judges, district attorneys and United States marshals. The governor appointed game wardens; the judges named commissioners and clerks; the marshals named their deputies. Fish Trust on Job. All very simple. And it works, too, for Alaska is free from crime and there is mighty little graft in the administration of its laws. So far so good, but here comes the hitch: The coasts and rivers of Alaska are the greatest fish producers in the world. Its mountains are full of mineral, and the valleys full of trees. In the list of officials named above there is not a single one except the president who has any authority to regulate or use these great resources—fish, mineral and timber. When all the row was on about coal and forest reserves, nothing was said about fish. Try as they would, the people of Alaska could get no champion to take it up. The fish trust lobby was there to smother every effort. The salmon packers import all their laborers from the slums of Pacific Coast cities, cheat them from the start, feed them bad food, work them all kinds of hours. Besides all this, they kill two fish for every one they put in cans. Waste Enormous. It is hard to realize what a waste this means, but when you consider that a salmon will make about four or five cans of fish and that it is not uncommon for a cannery to throw away 40,000 or 50,000 fish every now and then, it can be comprehended. Early in August, Aron Erickson, a game warden for Kenai peninsula, made a trip up Cook's Inlet in a power driven dory. At a point above Kenai river, there is a trap installed by a cannery which is not only used in case fish are not running thick enough near the cannery. A tugboat goes up to this trap and brings back a load. There is no communication between this trap and the cannery and it is kept closed all the time. After fish have been in a trap four days they die. When the trap gets full of dead fish and they begin to decay the men have to empty it and let more get caught—this when the fish are not needed at the cannery. Just before Erickson went by the

JUST THE GIST

STELLA SORGHUM SAYS:

Girls—When a guy calls you a "tomcat," don't get mad! You may be blown out. The marriage game is an endurance race. If it is correct to tip the waiter—usually the tip is coming to the patron.

Mrs. Chester Verdin, wife of rancher near Cle Elum, dead of ptomaine poisoning. Help! Port Townsend has three phone systems. Wants long distance service of three consolidated. Three dead in New York city of heat. Ya just naturally can't beat Seattle's climate! Rudd Love, Louisiana, Mo. negro, believed lynched. Taken from 40 constables by four masked men. The Missouri mule's going abroad! British agents buy 15,000 of 'em. Thought to be used in Asiatic campaign. German Catholic paper charges Pope Benedict's mail isn't arriving at its destination. Machinists strike in five Chicago factories manufacturing war munitions. Battleship Michigan awarded battle efficiency pennant; battleship Georgia gets runner's excellence trophy; Patterson, destroyer prize; K-8, submarine.

A SCRAPPER Golfer—My boy, do you know that head caddy? Golfer—What's the most striking thing about him, boy? Boy—His fist!

Fleed work on establishing harbor lines at Poulsbo and Liberty Bay to be completed by October 1. Tide lands will be platted in front of Poulsbo and they will be offered for sale about January 1.

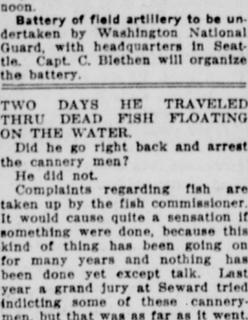

WHAT HE DID Dad was home on Labor day— And he spent his time this way: Fixed the front room grate gas log; Washed the windows and the dog; Patched that broken cellar screen; Fixed the kitchen clock and cleaned out the furnace; Got the lawn; Found out where the mouse's gone; That was on the garden hose; Aired that chestful of shoes; Knocked that bird's nest from the eaves; Burned those papers in the shed; Then went back again to his M. C.

Johnson, Liber and Von Bokelen, commission merchants fined $50 and costs by Judge Brinker Thursday on charge of selling cocoanut unit for food. Nearly 50 of large screens used at child welfare exhibit in Armory last year forwarded to Spokane by Central Council of Social Agencies. They will be put on exhibition September 13-15. Local master printers to entertain 150 delegates to American Typothetae convention at Los Angeles while the latter are here. They will arrive here Friday night. Congressman S. D. Fess of Ohio to address meeting of Young Men's Republican club at Butler Monday noon. Battery of field artillery to be undertaken by Washington National Guard, with headquarters in Seattle. Capt. C. Blethen will organize the battery.

TWO DAYS HE TRAVELED THRU DEAD FISH FLOATING ON THE WATER. Did he go right back and arrest the cannery men? He did not. Complaints regarding fish are taken up by the fish commissioner. It would cause quite a sensation if something were done, because this kind of thing has been going on for many years and nothing has been done yet except talk. Last year a grand jury at Seward tried indicting some of these cannerymen, but that was as far as it went.

BOALT SAYS THEY LOST STOMACHS

cooker." Food in it couldn't burn. So he chopped out his potatoes and onion, and put them with the bacon, in the pan, which he placed over the fire. Then he went away and left it. He lunched on hardtack and coffee. When the students returned to camp, they were apparently as fresh as "smart," as when they started. The spirit of the students is as remarkable as their achievements. All that I talked with want to come back next year. It is hoped to have an advanced class and a rooky class. The students are going to try to interest their friends and business associates. But no cheap military glamour inspires the war students. I talked with a lawyer, who said: "I do not believe there is a man here who is attracted by the prospect of wearing a shoulder strap and carrying a sword in a volunteer army. To all of us, I'm sure, even the thought of war is hateful, all sure I should enlist at the first call. I might—as a private. But I have a wife and children to think of, and I believe I should let the side men go first. "But I would go if I was needed. What I have learned here this year, and what I hope to learn next year, would be valuable in a small way. I could take charge of a squad. At a pinch I could take command of a company after a fashion. I would not sell my knowledge. "Nevertheless, this war game, as I have glimpsed it, the interesting part, is that if this country should go to war, I am not at all far more patriotic than I had supposed. It does not attract me. I cannot forget that the business of war is the business of killing men who are just as good patriots as I am and who love their own country just as dearly as I love mine. Nor can I forget that if I would prove a superior efficiency in war I must kill the enemy's man more quickly than he can kill mine. "I think I am fairly typical of the war students here. I would regret seeing the military spirit so strong in this country as to dominate it. A military that dominates a country is like a tall that was the dog. "On the other hand, while I am for peace, and while it would take more than ordinary jingo talk to stampede me, I want to be able, either as a microscopic unit in a citizen soldier, or as a free and untrammeled citizen of this great republic, to return the blow with interest when some bully punches me in the nose."

BILLY SUNDAY GIVES HIM HOT PLACE; TAFT DOESN'T "KA BIBBLE"

In a corner of American Bankers' association headquarters, opposite the New Washington hotel, is a heap of stuff, junk, things, etc., lost by bankers this week. Ex-President Taft said in his speech at the American Institute of Banking banquet, at the Rathskeller, that Billy Sunday, the evangelist, had consigned him to the "hot place." Dr. John Wesley Hill spoke on "Brains." "Look at the watch spring," he said. "A ton of pig iron is worth $20. Make it into watch springs and it's worth $1,000 a ton—$20 iron, $980 brains." The beautiful souvenir book of scenery about Seattle, which the Seattle chapter is giving visitors, contains 12 pictures, lithographed, and cost $4 a volume at the printers. Detective W. J. Burns was chucking Friday as he pocketed a contract making him protective agent of the A. B. A. until November 1, 1918. A. B. A. officials have sent letter of thanks to President Earling, of the C. M. & P. R. Ry., for the courteous treatment given delegates who came here over that road. J. Fletcher Farrell, Chicago banker, says there never was a time when the banks were in such need of good men. Taft played regular golf for nine holes Thursday. He made 'em in 46, but took 105 strokes to finish the course. E. F. Swinney of Kansas City, his opponent, finished in 95. Louis Hill of the Great Northern, J. M. Hannaford of the N. P., and Hale Holden of the C. B. & Q. Ry. are heads of the First National bank of St. Paul. They're hot after the farmer business.
