Hal Forde and Marguerite Courtot in a Scene From the Four-Part Drama, "The Vanderhoff Affair," at the Mission Theatre.

A popular Keystone comedian was recently asked to give his idea of "the hardest job in the world." Instead of replying, as we might expect him to, "A tragedian's role," he said: "Making 'em laugh."

"Making 'em laugh"—we are accustomed to think of that job as something easy—something that comes perfectly natural. But evidently we are wrong, for the amusing roles this comedian has created make millions laugh until their sides ache every day in the year.

And the truth of the matter seems to be that the comedian has to work just as hard for his laughs as the tragedian does for his tears, especially when he is working for his laughs on "the silent stage," with no funny lines to help him. As this same comedian says: "Take it from me, making 'em laugh is the toughest job ever created. Ask any one who has tried it, and I wager he'll agree with me. On the speaking stage it's comparatively easy, but in the screen business—well, believe me, it's the toughest job in the world."

LIBERTY
"Mortmain," the weirdest drama of the year, ends its engagement at the Liberty Saturday night. Robert Edson, Muriel Ostriche, Jas. Morrison, Edward Elkes and other stars comprise the cast.

The story tells of Richard Mortmain, a connoisseur of art, who faces the alternative of entirely losing his right hand or of having the hand of another grafted to his wrist.

What he does is all told in this most sensational and gripping drama.

COLONIAL
"Keno Bates, Liar," with Wm. S. Hart in the title role, heads the Colonial's mixed bill. It is a drama of the wild and woolly, a charming love story mixed with the spice of adventure.

Then comes George Ovey, the little fellow with the big smile, in "The Little Hero." "A Dark Horse" is a racing drama, and for the kiddies there is "Helen's Babies," with Helen Badgley, the Thanouser kidlet.

ALASKA
Hazel Dawn is gaining new friends every minute of the showing of "The Heart of Jennifer," at the Alaska. Her winning personality, her boyish manners and delightful mannerisms sparkle thru the play and give it the necessary touches of lightness and comedy.

Miss Dawn impersonates Jennifer, the young wife, who, suspected of murder by her husband, is at last freed from suspicion by the confession of his sister.

Four American eagles are screaming at the Chicago studios of the Selig Polyscope Co. They are en route to the Selig Jungle Zoo, at Los Angeles, to add to the large collection of birds from all parts of the world.

Director William Betram has begun work on the second of the C. E. Van Loan "Buck Marvin" stories. As in the first one, Anna Little and Art Acord play the principal roles.

De Wolf Hopper carries a special trunk for wig. He believes half a player's success is due to looking a part.

Letters To Cynthia Grey

Q.—Can you tell me where I can find the poem, "Dangerous Dan McGrew," written by Robert W. Service, the famous Alaska poet? JACK.

A.—There are several books of poems by Robert W. Service at the public library, and most probably you will find the above mentioned poem contained in one of them. The librarian in charge will be glad to assist you in any way.

Dear Miss Grey: I want to thank you, and the gentlemen, also, for the answers to my queries in regard to joining the army; but after all that has been said for and against the army, my opinion has not been changed in the least.

I was born and lived near barracks for a period of 10 years, and most of the men I saw, and I think I met them all, were either big, swaggering bullies or cowed, dwarfed, green country boys, and the only women friends I ever saw them with were of questionable character.

I have also read past history of the soldiers during labor disputes and fail to find them doing anything but shooting down working men for such barons as Rockefeller. And in all the wars it has been the working class who shot the working class to appease the master class in all of my reading, and what little experience I've had, I have failed to see the ministers, priests, bankers and business men patriotically bleeding and dying for their country. They leave that for poor boys to do.

Jack London said, "The lowest aim in man is to be a soldier," and no one dare dispute it. In one of the answers to my query, one U. S. marine denies that a soldier is a willful murderer, but rather a peacemaker, preserving the rights of his country. Now how much of this country was that just another bait for the mutt to swallow hook and line?

Is it not true that if it were not that men will willingly went to the fir-
