BOY PRESIDENT RAPS GAVEL, BOY CHAPLAIN PRAYS, IN THIS LODGE

Boalt Tells About Meetings of Boys' Benevolent League of America, Organized by Seattle Man to Inspire Manliness in Youngsters on the Streets

By Fred L. Boalt

"They're bunking us!" said the boy. "Who?" asked Russ Bronson. "The Seattle Yacht club—that's who," said the boy. "If they're going to give us a boat to go to Vashon Island and dig those clams, why don't they do it? It looks like bull to me." "But, Jimmy," Bronson protested, "you don't go about it that way. You boys don't belong to a gang. You're members of a club—the Boys' Benevolent league of America. Your committee has the clam-hunt in charge."

"I get you, so far," said Jimmy. "Go on." "The yacht club also has a committee. The yacht club's committee cannot act until it has been waited on by your committee, which will express its appreciation of the yacht club's generous offer to take you boys to the clam beds, and accept the invitation in behalf of the Boys' Benevolent league of America. Such formalities are expected."

Jimmy's face cleared. "Then it's all right," he said. "Only I thought they were just bunking us along because we're kids." He turned away; then faced about for a last word. "Say," he said; "you got the right idea all right; but I happen to know the poor family we want those clams for. They ain't had a square meal since I don't know when. I ain't for being too formal about this, sir."

And with that he was gone.

Bronson, organizer of the league, laughed and admitted: "The boy's more than half right. Boys are often wiser than men, I've noticed, because their way is the simple and direct way."

JIMMY'S A GREAT PARLIAMENTARIAN

Nevertheless, it was Jimmy who, at the last meeting of the Boys' Benevolent league of America, in the lodge rooms of the Loyal Order of Moose, rose with a sheet of paper in his hand, and said, with much dignity:

"Mr. President, I move you that— and so on and so on. —ow Jimmy is a great stickler for parliamentary procedure. The motion—whatever it was—made, seconded, voted on, carried, and placed on the record.

It would do your heart good, if you like boys, to attend one of the weekly meetings of the Boys' Benevolent league of America, the birth of which was described in The Star yesterday, and the first camp of which was started in Seattle a few weeks ago.

Russ Bronson, manager of the Empress theatre, himself a Moose, is author of the idea of the league of the league. The camp is affiliated with the Loyal Order of Moose, and it is confidently expected by the local Moose that before long there will be a camp of boys in every city where there is a Moose lodge.

Picture a great lodge room. In the center is the altar. On the four sides of the room are the big chairs where sit the officers of the league. That is to say, the 14-year-old president sits at one end. On one side is the first vice and on the other side is the second vice. The third vice is at the other end.

Also at the far end, facing the president, sit the four guards who conduct visitors into the room with fine formality.

Over by the door, behind the guards, are the sergeant-at-arms and his assistant, whose scrutiny visitors must endure before they can be admitted.

MOOSE COMMITTEE ATTENDS MEETINGS

In a corner, close to the president's chair, is gathered the Moose committee which attends every meeting of the boys' league. The members of the league—there were 51 at the last meeting—are ranged around the room.

The chairman of the Moose committee opens the meeting, and then hands the gavel to the president of the league.

You will observe that, while the newest members grin and seem self-conscious, the others are grave.

Rising, the president accepts the gavel and says: "Brothers, what is our mission?"

"To become worthy citizens of our beloved city and state." Asks the first vice: "For what purpose were we organized?"

"To do unto others as we would wish to be done by." Asks the second vice: "What is our creed?"

Then the many responses: "To believe in a just and kindly God—To honor and obey our parents—To have the courage to do right—To desire to live clean, wholesome lives—To shun all evil—And to be steadfast and true to our fraternal father, the Loyal Order of Moose."

Third vice: "The guard will place the colors." Solemnly, then, the guards step forward and drape Old Glory over the altar.

President: "We will sing our opening ode." That's the hard part for boys. You are thinking that they don't sing, but only mumble, shamefaced. Let me tell you, you're wrong. They sing it lustily.

same. Hollingshead-Hubbell leads the singing—(she is teaching the boys to sing and never misses a meeting), and Miss Sherwood plays the accompaniment on the piano.

The ode begins, "Washington, My Washington," and it is sung to the tune of "Maryland, My Maryland."

NAME COMMITTEE TO HELP HUNGRY BOYS

The guards return to their posts, the secretary (knee-high to a grasshopper) sedately intones the minutes, and then the league is ready for the "regular order of business."

"Mr. President, I move you that a committee be appointed to confer with the Seattle Yacht club committee relative to—get that 'relative to'—the Vashon Island clam-hunting excursion."

Seconded and carried! The thing is done with expedition.

Next, a committee to search out and relieve the distress of hungry boys.

Then a sick committee. And a committee to meet with Moose committees of Seattle and Tacoma to frame a constitution and by-laws.

The matter of buttons is taken up and threshed out. A member must earn his button by excellent conduct, by a high quality of fraternal spirit, and by a creditable showing in the tests of "civic geography."

An excellent study—"civic geography"—when you come to think of it.

The present officers were selected by the Moose committee. By and by the boys will elect their own officers.

A motion is carried, urging members to memorize the ritual and in other ways to fit themselves for holding office.

It is voted to organize a baseball team and a football team, the predominant idea being that by starting early they will be able to wallopp the Tacoma league.

That about concludes the "regular order of business."

"The chaplain," states the president, "will now offer prayer." The littlest boy in the whole room steps forward to the altar. He asks for courage and strength to help other boys "whom the world has forgotten."

It is an eloquent little prayer, simply and earnestly uttered, and if there be any efficiency in praying, the Boys' Benevolent league and the Loyal Order of Moose may count with confidence on the help of a power more than finite.

GERMAN PUBLIC IS DISPLEASED AT SETTLEMENT

BY CARL W. ACKERMAN BERLIN, Oct. 15.—Anti-American criticism—in an undecorated, it is true, but nevertheless, criticism—has greeted the German-American settlement of the Arabic controversy.

The settlement does not meet with the public approval in Germany that the German government has given it.

Therefore I am asking the censor to pass this story, knowing that the Arabic disagreement was settled officially, but believing the American public should know what the Germans think.

I asked several high officials the reason for the present public attitude. One said the criticism in Germany is the many is willing to pay for American friendship.

"But we wait now to see if President Wilson is as firm against the British blockade as he has been with Germany," this official added. "If he is, then Germany will understand he is really neutral."

'SUBS' ON LONG TRIP

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Navy officials received reports by cable today indicating the success of the cruise of the four K class U. S. submarines from San Francisco to Honolulu, where they arrived yesterday. The K-7 made the trip without stopping her engines.
