A WIFE'S Confessions

THE BATTLE IS ON

The sun was just peeping into my room as I stumbled onto the bed half dead with grief and loss of sleep.

I could do no more for Kitty. Others were preparing her for burial.

I sank immediately to the comforting sleep of exhaustion.

It was 9 o'clock before I awakened. I opened my eyes to find that a cover had been placed over me, my shoes had been taken off and the windows opened.

Miss Heathcott was just bringing in a tray with a cup of hot coffee, a slice of toast and a tiny dish of orange marmalade.

"You must not let me make you so much trouble, my dear Miss Heathcott. You too, were up most of the night."

"But I am trained to sleep whenever I have time for it. I slept all the while you were talking with Mrs. Spencer. How are you feeling this morning?"

Up until she asked me this question I was not conscious of any feeling, but immediately I began to take stock.

Do you know, little book, those forms of salutation—"How are you?"—How do you feel? I think are all wrong. They probably, when they first were said in the distant past, represented a form of polite interest, but now they are merely a conventional group of words meaning nothing but always making the one to whom they are addressed mentally feel of his body to see if he has any physical ailments and of his soul to see if it has come thru the last 24 hours without more than the usual bruises.

I found that both my head and my heart were aching. I reached for my coffee without making any reply and saw a telegram on the tray. I hastily opened it, thinking there was more trouble. I found it was a night letter from Dick.

Am awfully sorry Kitty is ill, but I wish you would come home as soon as you can. I have a chance for you to buy a splendid little block of stock in the book concern; one of the stockholders wants to go West and is willing to sell slightly below par. It is a great bargain for I have just closed up big contracts in both Chicago and New York. We want to take up your loan. With this block of stock paid for, we will be comfortable the rest of our days. Give Kitty my regards and tell her as soon as she gets well to come over and we'll celebrate. Expect you home today. Will meet you at 5 o'clock train. DICK.

As I read the telegram the second time I almost wished I was in

CAN YOU WRITE FILM SCENARIO?

"The Queen of Jungle Land" cash prize scenario contest closes Tuesday night. No solutions will be accepted after 7 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Beginning Wednesday, the film story of "The Queen of Jungle Land" will be shown on the screen at the Mission theatre.

There is yet time, however, for you to solve the mystery of what becomes of Lola, the white girl jungle queen, and Phillip, the young American, who has fallen in love with her.

Up to Tuesday morning The Star had received many solutions, none of them alike.

If you did not see the first announcements, look them up in Saturday's and Monday's Star.

The Mission theatre, thru The Star, will pay three cash prizes of $3, $2 and $1 respectively, for the three best solutions to the jungle land mystery. In other words, contestants must complete the broken scenario of "The Queen of Jungle Land."

He whose scenario ends most nearly like the author's will get first prize, etc.

Address the Movie Contest, care of The Star.

SCENE FROM FILM PLAY AT LIBERTY

A charming scene from "The Girl of Yesterday," with Mary Pickford as the star, which will be the attraction at the Liberty for four days, beginning Wednesday. A feature of the picture is that scenes were taken on land, air and water. Mary makes her first air flight in this picture. Her companion is Glenn Martin, the noted aviator.

Kitty's place. I knew I was going to have a battle royal with Dick and in my inmost heart I wondered if I had done right to have made that investment without consulting him.

The book concern was a very prosperous business. As long as Dick lived, any money I had invested in it would be safe.

Was it worth fighting over? Did the gain or loss of one per cent mean anything to me beside a contented lot with Dick?

As these questions came uppermost in my mind, back of it all I was aware of a stubborn purpose not to put Aunt Mary's money into the book concern.

"If I do," I said to myself, "Dick will draw all the dividends and I will never have any real money of my own."

I determined to send a day letter to Dick.

I guess, little book I was a coward. I wanted to break the news to him before I saw him face to face.

(To Be Continued.)

CYNTHIA Grey's Letters

Dear Miss Grey: My husband gives me a certain amount of money each month for little expenses of the house and spending money.

Now, I pay these little expenses that he expects me to, and out of my pin money I've been trying to save up a little.

If I feel like going to a show, instead of going, I put that much in my savings bank and stay at home.

If I see something nice to have, but could get along just as well without, instead of buying it, I put the price in my bank.

In this way I've saved up $22 in the last 12 months, and put it in the bank in my name to start a savings account.

My husband says I'm a thief, and accuses me of holding out money on him, and he is also angry because I did not put it in his name instead of my own.

Miss Grey, do you think I'm entitled to this money? He gave it to me. Did I do wrong to put it in the bank in my name? Please give me your opinion and advice.

We have been married 14 years and haven't saved a penny. Once we saved up about $150. It was in his name. He drew it out and, of course, spent it; but I did not put this in my name thru disrespect for him.

I thought I was entitled to it, since it was given to me and I had saved it. I'd like to continue to add to it, but I want to be on the square with him.

Thanking you in advance for a reply, R. B.

Who has a better right to those few paltry dollars, I'd like to know, than the wife who denied herself every little pleasure so dear to the heart of all women in order to save them? If you want to be perfectly square with your husband, or rather get perfectly square with him, you ought to present him with an itemized statement, including meals, mending, and keeping his house, at $25 per month for 168 months. If he is going to treat you like an ordinary servant maid, you should at least demand a servant maid's wages.

Q—Is there any way to dry-clean a white feather neckerchief at home? EDITH.

A—Use cornmeal or flour to which hexam has been added, cover the ruff with the flour mixture and wrap it up in a towel for a day or two. Then brush out all the flour, and the dirt will be removed at the same time.

Q—Can you advise me where to write in regard to matrimony? ANXIOUS.

A—If you mean a matrimonial agency, no. If you wish to marry and do not know many women socially, get some of your friends to introduce you to some unmarried ones and try to win a wife in the conventional way. A man who is worth marrying does not have to depend upon a matrimonial agency to find him a wife.

Dear Miss Grey: I read with interest the answer of "Several Jolly Tars" to my letter as to why men enlist in army and navy.

Did these same jolly tars ever try to enter some of the theatres in New York, or other large cities of the East, and were refused admittance because they wore uniforms? Refused a chance to see the show by their own countrymen because some rich man's son or daughter might be sitting alongside of him? Did they ever feel the humiliation of that? Well, they need only to try to prove the truthfulness of my words. Did they ever see a millionaire's son in the army or navy? Oh, no! not unless he was a commissioned officer.

They speak of side-door Pullmans and tramps. Well, I'll say I've earned more honest dollars than some of them ever saw, and tell the truth; but it is only wasting time to argue with some people, for as the old saying goes, "Where ignorance is bliss, it is folly to be wise." EXPERIENCED.

Q—I am a young woman of 23. I have been married almost a year. My husband is very kind to me and we love each other dearly—but there is one thing I am very unhappy about. I have always been passionately fond of children and the dearest wish of my heart is to have a little one of my own.

My husband doesn't care for children, and thinks I should be satisfied with things as they are, but there are times when I feel that I cannot face the future without a child of my own.

Am I selfish to feel so, or is it natural to long for motherhood? When I see other women when their children, it makes my soul rebel to think I should be denied this blessing. K. L. M.

Certainly it is but natural for you to feel as you do, for motherhood is the most natural thing in the world. You are not one—if as selfish as your husband. People do not do wish for children should remain single.
