his phrases.
"National adequacy and security" were the keynotes of his opening message to congress, read by him at a joint session of the senate and house.
Pan-Americanism, a partnership of the Americas against European aggression, in common causes of independence, political liberty, economic development and adjustments of the war, is the president's conception of the modern development of the American Doctrine.
Marshaling of the nation's resources, not for war, but to insure peace, in a union of the Americas to maintain, secure from European interference, American ideas and ideals, was the paramount thought pounded home by the president.
The address was the longest ever made to congress by the president.
Seathing, scorching denunciation of hyphenated Americans "who preach and practice disloyalty," was a feature.

Pictures Effect of World War

In dedication of the new era of Pan-Americanism and its bearing upon necessity for United States world affairs, spiritual partners, standing together because thinking together, quick with common sympathies and common ideals. Separated, they are subject to all the cross-currents of the confused politics of a world of hostile rivalries; united in spirit and purpose, they cannot be disappointed of their peaceful destiny.

"This is Pan-Americanism. It has none of the spirit of empire in it. It is the embodiment, the effectual embodiment, of the spirit of law and independence and liberty and mutual service."

Pleads for Greater Defense

PREPAREDNESS.

"There was a time when the United States looked upon itself as in some sort the guardian of the republics to the south of her," said the president. "Every thoughtful man of America must welcome the altered circumstances of the new days in whose light we now stand, when there is no claim of guardianship or thought of wards, but instead a full and honorable association as partners in the interest of all America.
"We still mean always to make a common cause of national independence and political liberty in America. But that purpose is now better understood.
Citing Mexican affairs as an example of the new doctrine, the president continued:
"Her fortunes are in her own hands. But at least we have proved that we will not take advantage of her in her distress and undertake to impose upon her a government of our own choosing. We will aid and befriend Mexico, but we will not coerce her; and our course ought to be sufficient proof to all America that we seek no sovereignty or selfish control.
"The moral is that the States of America are not hostile rivals, but co-operating friends, and that their growing sense of community of interest, alike in matters political and matters economic, is not unlikely to give them a new significance as factors in international affairs and in the political history of the world.
"It presents them as in a very deep and true sense, a unit in except for uses which are as necessary in times of peace as in times of war.

"But we do believe in a body of free citizens ready and sufficient to the care of themselves and of the governments which they have set up to serve them.
"But war has never been a mere matter of man and guns. If our citizens are ever to fight effectively upon a sudden summons, they must know how modern fighting is done. And the government must be their servant; must supply them with the training they need to take care of themselves and of it.
"The military arm of their government they must properly use to make their independence secure—and not their own independence merely, but the rights also of those with whom they have made common cause, should they also be put in jeopardy.
"They must be fitted to play the great role of the world, and play in this hemisphere, for which they are qualified by principle and chastened ambition to play.
"It is with these ideals in mind that the plans of the department of war for more adequate national defense are conceived which will be laid before you, and which I urge you to sanction and put into effect as soon as they can be properly scrutinized and discussed."

Explains Country's Naval Program

The navy building five-year program, indorsed in detail, was said by the president to involve "only a shortening of the time within which plans long matured shall be carried out."
"Great democracies are not beligerent," he said. "They do not seek or desire war. We insist upon security in prosecuting our self-chosen lines of national development.
"We do more than that. We demand it also for others. We have set America aside as a whole for the uses of the independent nations and political freemen.
"We regard war merely as a means of asserting the rights of a people against aggression. We will not maintain a standing army

Philippine Reform and Porto Rico

Trade and shipping is another problem of national adequacy, the president declared, urging the government ship purchase bill.
He did not recommend any specific appropriation.

"It is of capital importance," he declared, "that only the United States should be its own carrier on the seas and enjoy the economic importance which only an adequate merchant marine would give it, but also that the American hemisphere as a whole should enjoy a like independent self-sufficiency. If it is not to be drawn into the tangle of European affairs.
"Moreover, we can develop no true or effective American policy without ships of our own—not ships of war, but ships of peace carrying goods and carrying much more: Creating friendships and rendering indispensable service to all interests on this side of the water.
"They must move constantly back and forth between the Americas.
"They are the only shuttles that can weave the delicate fabric of sympathy, comprehension, confidence and mutual dependence, in which we wish to clothe our policy of America for Americans."

Emphasizes Need of More Revenue

New internal taxes mentioned by the president, "which can justly be resorted to without hampering the industries of the country or putting any too great charge upon individual expenditures," were:
Gasoline and naphtha, 1 cent per gallon, yielding $10,000,000.
Horse-power of automobile and internal explosion engines, 50 cents per horse-power, yielding $15,000,000.
Stamp tax on bank checks, yielding $18,000,000.
Pigiron, 25 cents a ton, yielding $10,000,000.
Fabricated iron and steel, 50 cents a ton, yielding $10,000,000.

Vigorously Lashes Hyphen Citizens

Returning to necessity for laws to deal with foreign plots and conspiracies, the president declared: "I am sorry to say the gravest threats against our national peace have been uttered within our own borders. There are citizens of the United States, I blush to admit, born under foreign flags, but welcomed under our naturalization laws to the full and free opportunity of America, who have poured the poison of disloyalty into the very arteries of our national life, who have sought to bring the authority and good name of our government into contempt, to destroy our industries wherever they thought it effective for their vindictive purposes to strike at them, and to debase our politics to the uses of foreign intrigue.

"Their number is not great as compared with the whole number of those sturdy hosts by which our nation has been enriched in recent generations out of virile foreign stocks, but it is great enough to have brought deep disgrace upon us and to have made it necessary that we should promptly make use of processes of law by which we may be purged of their corrupt distempers.
"America never witnessed anything like this before.
"It never dreamed it possible that men sworn into its own citizenship, men drawn out of great free stocks, such as supplied some of the best and strongest elements of that little, but how heroic, nation that in a high day of old staked its very life to free itself from every entanglement that had darkened the fortunes of the older nations and set up a new standard here—that men of such origins and such free choices of allegiance would ever turn in malign reaction against the government and people who had welcomed and nurtured them and seek to make this proud country once more a hotbed of European passion.

"But the ugly and incredible thing has actually come about and we are without adequate federal laws to deal with it.
"I urge you to enact such laws at the earliest possible moment and feel that in doing so I am urging you to do nothing less than save the honor and self-respect of the nation. Such creatures of passion, disloyalty and anarchy must be crushed out."

NEUTRALITY.

Wants Authority to Call Outsiders

Another recommendation was for steps to mobilize United States economic resources in time of national necessity. The president indicated he plans to ask prominent men in manufacturing and transportation circles to consult with army and navy officials to aid in solution of particular problems of national defense.

Conservation Bills Recommended

Conservation of natural resources by enactment of the conservation bills was urged.
"We should put into early operation some provision for rural credits," the president asserted, without specifying any particular plans.
"The transportation problem is an exceedingly serious and pressing one. The regulation of the railroads by federal commission has had admirable results," he continued.
"The question is whether there is anything we can do in the very process of regulation for bettering the conditions under which the railroads are operated and for making them more useful servants of the country."

HUMPHREY—HUMORIST

PROBABLY nobody would suspect it—for nobody saw Congressman Will E. Humphrey ever crack a smile—but he's a humorist.
Maybe he doesn't suspect it himself.
He wrote his bit of humor yesterday in the bill he introduced in congress, asking $1,250,000 for the submarine postoffice building in the south end of Seattle.
He has as much chance of getting that bill thru as the proverbial snowball in a certain warm climate. That's not the funniest part of the story—at all.
The humor of it all is that only a few weeks ago, Humphrey and his newspaper champions swore up and down that he had nothing to do with the purchase of that impossible site; that, altho Humphrey's friends sold the "goose pond" to Uncle Sam, he, Humphrey, was as innocent as a snow-white dove of any "pork barrel" politics in connection with it.
Of course, being entirely indifferent to the transaction, it is really puzzling to learn now that Humphrey is trying to make Uncle Sam sink another million and a quarter in the same pool. Or should we say swimming hole?
Puzzling? No, that's where Humphrey enters in the role of humorist.
It's almost as funny as when Humphrey voted $1,200 for himself out of Uncle Sam's treasury to pay himself "traveling expenses" for a trip which he never took or intended to take.

GOING AHEAD, ANYWAY

EVEN in the midst of the most cruel and destructive war history ever recorded, the Bavarian government has approved a project for a vast electrical power plant to supply all Bavaria with electric power.
A company will be formed with a capital of $7,500,000 to carry out the so-called Walchen Lake project. This is the spirit which has made Germany great, so great that the world cannot afford to see her receive a mortal wound.

QUITE CHICAGOESE

"THE Germans are permitting Serbian babies to die of starvation," writes a horrified war correspondent.
Run over to Chicago and you will get immune to such trifles, old man.

DAVE ENDS THE FAIR
Dave Tobias, of the commissary department of the Northern Pacific, returned from San Francisco Monday, after officially closing the fair Saturday night.
The attendance at the fair the last day, according to Tobias, was 418,000, and over 19,000,000 paid admissions during the life of the exposition.
Everything in Frisco booming, but thousands and thousands of people were leaving the city Saturday.
Seattle for his, however, the Great Big Baked Potato man says.

EXERCISE

Exercise is most important in keeping the body toned up and warm and comfortable during cold weather. When the general muscular system is kept active, the more blood is brought to the surface, where it assists in overcoming the effect of the external cold.

Exercise helps to relieve the congestion of the internal organs, which usually occurs during the cold weather, when the blood supply of the surface is diminished by the low temperature.

For instance, the kidneys are more active in the winter than in the summer, since during the former period the amount of blood in these organs is greatly increased, and their function therefore much increased. On the other hand, it is diminished during the warm season, for then the skin is more active, and aids in throwing off bodily waste.

Walking is the most common and the most valuable form of exercise—for it is a "poor man's game," and can be indulged in, winter or summer.

Soap and hot water, thoroly applied, are the best disinfectants after disease, and the best preventive before.

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find itching and digging about the scalp and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look a hundred times better.
