A Most Appealing and Wonderful Story With a Beautiful Moral

The beautiful moral in this thrilling and spectacular production is carried throughout with a conviction that is as pleasing as it is forceful.

"Strength of Weak" at American With Mary Fuller

Mary Fuller, who appears at the American in "The Strength of the Weak."

STRENGTH OF THE WEAK

"The Strength of the Weak," based upon one of the greatest problem plays ever seen upon the stage, is the new attraction at the American theatre. Mary Fuller has been chosen to interpret the highly emotional role of Pauline D'Arcy, an orphan girl who has been betrayed by her legal guardian. In later years she falls in love with the son of the man who ruined her.

MARGUERITE CLARK

Marguerite Clark plays Elise, the delightful little Alpine shepherdess in "Out of the Drifts," which heads the new show at the Coliseum Wednesday. "Out of the Drifts" is a big story of the great Alps. In this story, Miss Clark gives us something entirely new—the fearless, unspoiled girl of the mountains.

ACTION AT THE REX

Manager John Hamrick of the Rex is seriously thinking of continuing Rex Besch's story, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," in pictures, now playing its second week, to a third week. It is a nine-act production with action all the way thru.

Kathlyn Williams, who appears at the Rex and the Clemmer theatres. At the Rex she appears in "Ne'er-Do-Well," and at the Clemmer she is seen in "Thou Shalt Not Covet."

THOU SHALT NOT COVET
"Thou Shalt Not Covet," at the Clemmer theatre, deals with domestic life, in which married infelicity in one case is powerfully contrasted with bliss in another. Amid it all we see the man rises superior to the ordeal that confront him, and in the production of self finds a solace in contemplation of the happiness of his neighbor's wife, whom he loves devotedly.

SHE'S ONLY SEVENTEEN
Pretty Helene Rosson, co-star with William Russell in "The Craving," at the Colonial theatre, a human interest drama in five acts, is one of the youngest and most versatile of screen stars. She is but 17 years old. She has a remarkable insight into each role she portrays and gives every angle of a new part deep study before attempting it.

PETROVA AT STRAND
"The Soul Market," a five-part story of life behind the scenes of a Broadway theatre, and along the Great White Way, in which Mme. Petrova is starred, is the new attraction at the Strand theatre. There are scores of interesting scenes of New York life, faithfully reproduced from the actual surroundings where the story is laid.

WHOA! 'HELL'S HINGES'
There will probably be a demand for Western melodramas as long as William S. Hart plays the leading roles and as long as they are so capably produced as "Hell's Hinges," which starts a four-day run at the Liberty today. The scene of the action of this stirring photoplay is a little border town described in a subtitle as being a "gun-fighting, man-killin' den of iniquity," and known as "Hell's Hinges." Manager Van Herberg, of the Liberty, wishes to announce that Fatty Arbuckle and Mabel Normand will appear in a brand new Keystone comedy feature, "The Bright Lights."

"LA PALOMA" GIRL HERE
In "La Paloma," which heads the new show at the Mission, Mary Anderson takes the part of a pure and unsophisticated Spaniard, who comes to America with her father. While on the water, a wealthy factory owner visits the steamer, where he is very much attracted.

William S. Hart, who appears in "Hell's Hinges," at the Liberty.

Scene From "The Craving," at the Colonial Theatre.

Developments follow fast. "Gertie's Awful Fix," a comedy, completes the program. "LEAP YEAR WOOING" This being leap year, what more proper than a leap year play in the movies? "A Leap Year Wooing," therefore, is shown at the Class A theatre. Also "Six Hopkins," with Rose Melville in the title role as usual, and another comedy, "When the Losers Win," is shown.

Confessions of a Wife

THE FIRST LITTLE CLOUD
I looked at my little nurse gravely. Someway I sensed the tragedy and yet I could only see it coming from one direction. At that moment, however, there was no hint of it in the radiance of her smile. Evidently her mind had not arrived at the point where the sorrow began. "I wish, Mrs. Waverly, you could have seen Harvey's face when I took him over that dear little apartment," she said. "I don't think he had ever seen before any rooms except those that had been furnished by professional decorators. He was simply delighted. He sat down in every one of the chairs. He examined the pictures from every angle; he fingered carefully the few pottery vases and pieces of copper that I had placed in the living room. His wonder at the little red Chinese lacquer framed mirror over my beautiful old Sheraton desk was purely of admiration. Most of all, in the production of self finds a solace in contemplation of the happiness of his neighbor's wife, whom he loves devotedly."

"Darling, I always knew you were my wonder girl," he said, "but I never realized that you were a regular little home maker. Why, there is more of that intangible something which satisfies in this tiny place than in all the rooms of my mother's great house."

"At the mention of his mother a shade went over his face and my heart missed a beat thru its airy fancy of coming disaster, but I would not allow myself to feel badly. With the hope of youth, I made sure that everything was coming out all right. "Now," I said, "I'm going to get you some supper, for I know you are hungry."

"It seems too bad to mope up this lovely kitchen," he remarked quizzically. "I laughed. Indeed, Mrs. Waverly, I do not think I ever laughed so much in my whole life as I did that one night that Harvey and I played at housekeeping in that little place."

"My, how happy we are going to be, dear, in this dear little place." "Will we?" I asked wistfully, for already I seemed to realize it was all too good to be true. "Of course we will, you dear, foolish little bird of ill omen," he said. "And then he stopped to kiss me on his way to his place at the other side of the table, before meat," was his smiling remark. "Don't, Harvey," I expostulated. "I don't want you to be the least bit sacrilegious, for, you see, I am rather afraid. We must be very good if we would live happily ever after in this place."

"Cronker," he said fondly, and he came around the table to kiss me again. "This lamb chop, baked potatoes and kisses beat the well-known bread, cheese and kisses to a frazzle," he said as we left the table, and he lighted a cigarette. "I slipped away from him and put away the food and dishes. "When I came back he was stretched out on the long dull blue velvet divan, smoking, but there was a moody shadow on his face. "Come over here, darling," he said. I sat down on the edge of the sofa, and he pulled me over nearer him. "And then like lightning from a
