

THEATRICAL NOTES
What's What in Local Playhouses

ALHAMBRA
The new show at the Alhambra Sunday is headed by a minstrel show of five people, two girls and three men. This is a mixture of comedy, singing, talking and dancing by the five Linnetts.

The Smiletta sisters contribute an acrobatic act. The Arthur Young trio, in addition to a line of melodies, furnishes a lot of clean comedy. Hayden & Goodwin complete the bill with a comedy, singing and talking act. J. Warren Kerrigan is starred in a brand new five-act feature play, "The Pool of Flame." It is a story of adventure.

ORPHEUM
Ciccolini! That name may not mean much to you, unless you have happened to drop in at the grand opera while in Paris, London, Milan, Brussels, Petrograd, Warsaw or Odessa. It is the name of him whom Mme. Melba calls "the world's greatest tenor," and he comes to the Orpheum tomorrow for a week's engagement. This is Ciccolini's first American tour. Other attractions are: George Howell & Co. in "The Red Fox Trot;" Willa Holt Wakefield, Miss Ray Dooley & Co., Jolly Johnnie Jones, Benny and Woods, Stevens and Falk and the Travel Weekly.

MOORE
In presenting "The Only Girl," musical comedy, at the Moore theatre, week commencing Sunday, March 19, Manager Joe Weber promises not only an excellent production and an augmented orchestra, but an exceptional cast as well. Some of those who are to appear in the production are: Edna Munsey, Edna Baird, Franklyn Farnum, Cecilia Novazio, Tom Hurton, Genevieve Houghton, Alfred Fisher. In addition, there is to be a chorus of pretty girls who will be arrayed in the latest up-to-date finery.

METROPOLITAN
The right of a husband to dominate his home as he does his business, or the right of a wife to retain her independence of thought. A bitter conflict over this question forms the motive of "Bought and Paid For," the powerful drama by George Broadhurst, which will be offered at the Metropolitan for the coming week, opening Sunday night.

The Wilkos players are excellently cast in the piece: Norman Hackett as Strafford, Phoebe Hunt as Virginia and Richard Vivian as the irresistible "Jimmy," who regards himself as a genius and tries to prove it. "Bought and Paid For" runs all week, with bargain matinees Thursday and Saturday.

PANTAGES
Headlining the new bill at the Pantages Monday will be the Seven Bracks, who are said to begin their acrobatics where most of the others leave off. The special added feature will be Little Lord Roberts, said to be the smallest comedian in the world. Other numbers on the program are the Hirschoff Troupe of Russian Dancers; Knight and Moore, singers and dancers; Marion Munson, quick-change artist; Nay Gray, a Scotch lassie, and the Riata, in a comedy on rings. The new installment of "The Girl and the Game" will be shown on the screen.

EMPRESS
The next week's Empress show, beginning Sunday, will be headed by a musical comedy tabloid with eight people, four men and four girls, called "Wallingford Outdone." The added feature attraction will be the Royal Italian Sextet of vocalists and instrumentalists. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Allen will offer a comedy sketch, "She Had to Tell Him." Edith Mote, a protean artist, is pretty and vivacious. Raynor and Bell, whistlers; La Toy Brothers, pantomimic acrobats, and the Fathe Weekly will be other features.

HIPPODROME
Headling the bill at the Hippodrome Sunday are the six versatile Coxes. Their act is said to be one of the most entertaining presented at this theatre. The Stroud trio sing, dance and tickle the piano. The De Bars in a water fountain juggling act, introduce "Baby Violet," clever juvenile. Orville Reeder will present a novelty piano act. The film feature will be Frank Daniels in the third success of the Mr. Jack series, "Mr. Jack Ducks the Alimony."
