MIDGETS MARRIED IN NEW YORK CIRCUS

NEW YORK, April 21.—While the lion roared an accompaniment to a calloppe wedding march, Francis Short and Miss Elsie Reining were married in the most unusual wedding New York ever has seen.

The pair are midgets with a circus and were married in the center of the ring with two witnesses on one pair of legs—the double-bodied man performing the function.

A giant six times the size of the bridegroom was the best man, and the bride only came to the knees of the bridesmaid, a giantess.

The happy pair were wished well by glass eaters, sword swallowers, long-whiskered men, bearded ladies, fat boys and a few not distinguished by physical peculiarities.

The monthly banquet of the Sales Managers' association was held at the Butler Thursday night.

DENIES DIVORCE CHARGES BY WIFE

Marion Gordon, a steamboat fireman, living at 4745 Brooklyn ave. N. E., Friday made a positive denial of charges made by Mrs. Gordon in divorce proceedings started this week.

She is asking for a decree on the allegation that her husband, on April 2, accused her and her four daughters of wrong doing, and after threatening her with bodily harm, beat up the youngest daughter, Georgia, 11 years old.

"These statements are all false," said Gordon. "This trouble has been caused by a relative of Mrs. Gordon."

20,000 CASES FILED

During the past 65 years, the number of cases filed in the probate court of King county has reached 20,000, according to figures compiled Thursday by D. K. Sicksel, in charge of the probate department. This includes sanity cases, wills and disposition of estates.

Fair Weather Is Predicted for Easter Sunday!

The prim little turban of early spring days takes on a few fussy frills for Easter if one may judge from the advance guard of the Easter bonnet parade.

The trend toward frilliness is seen in the fetching little "poke" at the left. Plaited maline in pastel shades forms the top, the narrow velvet streamers are old blue and there's a tight little bouquet of French flowers at the left side.

An odd quirk to it is the visor brim in delicately striped silk. The Talbot model that looms up in the center shows the back trimming of ostrich tips.

The turban at the right—it's sand color silk—is simple enough, but notice those wide spreading wings of navy blue.

Quite "dress-up" after all is the "simple" turban.

all been made ready for the customary spring splash.

Next in importance, probably, to George's conclusions are those of Anna Winslow, who lives at the Frederick hotel.

Don't know Anna?

Well, she is the head trimmer in the back room of a Second ave. establishment.

"I have been bowing my back for the last four days," confided Anna, Friday, as she ate breakfast across from the reporter who wrote this story.

"What is the big idea in hats?" we asked her.

"The idea is so big that nearly any kind of a hat with lots of color gets by," says Anna. "Shepherdess styles, taken from the old French paintings, are all right. Leather is being worked into the small street and sport hats. We are making plenty of stuff with bright Russe colors—reds, oranges, and there are the Spanish shapes and colors that you see worn tipped forward on young ladies' noses."

From her galloping descriptions, and rapid-fire assertions, these things we take for granted:

—Skirts may be short enough to give anybody who wants to look a little peep at the stockings.

—Shoes can be high and most any color, but white is for a popular run.

—Tailored suits must have wide bottomed skirts.

—Suit coats have a perfect right to flare.

"In fact," says Anna, "the duds that the women wore a generation ago, in many, many cases, would be good style now."

Thus saying, she basked her raven hair in coffee, devoured it, scraped back her chair, and went forward to settle at the cash register.

Anna is in a position to know what's correct.

WHAT WILL EASTER HATS BRING FORTH? CYNTHIA GREY MAKES SOME GUESSES

By Cynthia Grey

April showers bring May flowers—and incidentally Easter bonnets.

If all the calendars were lost, one need only walk downtown to know Sunday is Easter.

All the windows are ablaze with a riot of color—Easter bonnets, of course.

What are they like?

Like everything and unlike anything is as nearly as I can describe them as a whole.

About this time every year, the curiosity seizes Mrs. Brown, and she contemplates what sort of bonnet Mrs. Smith will wear on the official bonnet day.

But it's no use this year, for she would never be able to guess in a hundred years.

It might be made of Milan, hemp, fancy braid, brocaded silk, leather, cretonne, lace, fluffly maline, or just plain straw.

It might be a dainty creation of palest tints of green, rose, pink, blue or gray, or it's apt to be brown, cerise, purple, black, white, bright green, red, blue, or even yellow.

It might be wide-brimmed and flat-crowned, or high-crowned and narrow-brimmed, or a mushroom, or bonnet. Yes, it might even be square.

It might be trimmed with bows of ribbon, a quill, silk flowers, leaves, feathery bows of tulle, strips or figures of brightly colored leather, beaded designs and tassels, figures traced in yarn, one or more small birds perched saucily at the side or top of the crown or feather pompons.

I haven't the ghost of an idea of what it will be like. Neither have you. So what's the use?

THESE ROBBERS HAD DRAMATIC TASTES

LOS ANGELES, April 21.—Detectives here today are searching for four of the most "melodramatic hold-up men" in recent police annals.

They surprised eleven Japanese laundry workers at 3 a. m. today. The Japanese, ten men and one woman, had just sat down to breakfast when four masked men slipped in.

"Hands up!" one of them commanded. The Japanese were lined against a wall and forced to disrobe. They were then bound hand and foot.

Money, checks and jewelry taken amounted to $600. Mrs. K. Narochi, the woman, freed herself two hours after the robbers left. She released the ten men and then telephoned the police.
