DO GERMANS GET ENOUGH TO EAT?

Bill Shepherd, in Rotterdam, Tells Inside of Food Situation

COUNTRY IS HUNGRY

To ascertain at first hand what effect the food stringency in Germany was having on the lives of the civil population, Correspondent Shepherd went to Rotterdam and secured a set of food stories from travelers leaving Germany, detailing their experiences. This is the first of them.

BY WILLIAM G. SHEPHERD

United Press Staff Correspondent

ROTTERDAM, Holland, June 5.—(By Mail.)—Babies seven months to a year old are eating carrots, apples and spinach in Germany.

Other folks beside babies are having food troubles.

These food stories will tell about them all.

If you watch the consulates here and keep your eyes on the incoming trains, you can meet, every day, a scant few persons who have just come from Germany and who will gladly tell you what experiences they have had in their kitchens, dining rooms and stomachs since the food stringency in Germany became noticeable.

These travelers feel themselves heroes, as, indeed, you come to regard them, in a manner of speaking, when you see them abandon themselves to a full, man-sized meal here.

WRITERS LIVE AT HOTELS

Travelers to Berlin, especially the American writers, are dining at the best hotels. They return with stories of plentiful and excellent food.

Berlin is the wartime show place of Germany and the hotels where writers go are the wartime show places of Berlin. What the American writers have said of the plentifulness and the excellence of the food, is not necessarily true.

Here in Rotterdam you get the truth, straight from the dining rooms and kitchens of civilians in every part of Germany. It indicates that life in Germany is uncomfortable, highly so, for a civilian who is keeping house.

TAKING FOOD HOME

Here's a Swedish mechanic from Germany, running around Rotterdam, filling his arms with packages of bacon, bottles of olive oil and rice. Perhaps the Hollanders will refuse him permission to take these things across the border, but, "I'm going to make a try of it," he says.

Here's a pretty American girl dining alone in a Rotterdam restaurant. She's studying music in Berlin.

"I've just run over to Holland to spend a week eating," she says.

Here's a Spanish woman with three little children. "I brought the baby down to get him some milk. He is tired of carrots, spinach and apples. No wonder; he is only seven months."

WAIT FOR DINNER BELL

And here are Germans—rich, elderly, retired Germans—who haunt the doorways of the hotel restaurants, waiting for the American pianist dinner bell to ring and who seem to be always eating, even at the hated English tea hour.

They are here a week. Then they go back to Germany, to Germany, civilian Germany, is hungry.

Not hungry for victuals, because victuals are anything a human being can eat and digest, but for decent food like meat and wheat and milk and animal and vegetable fats.

(How and why toothless German babies eat apples, carrots, spinach and oatmeal, instead of gurgling milk, will be the subject of Shepherd's next German food story.)

GET 'SOFT'DRINK MAN

Raffael All, owner of a soft drink stand at 625 Weller st., was arrested Thursday night for the alleged sale of a drink. Patrolman W. W. Morris made the arrest. He followed a man to whom he had given the price of a drink to All's place, and when the drink was sold he placed the two under arrest. The stranger bolted and has not been found.

ON BAD TEETH

Guard the Teeth and Make Sure of a Sound Body

We Serve the Public

Dentistry is advancing by leaps and bounds through the efforts of men who believe in publicity, men who have services to offer and whose modesty will permit them to announce through one medium or another that they have a dental office and are willing and anxious to serve the people, young and old, rich and poor, to the best of their ability, causing little or no pain, and charging a moderate price for their work.

MANY AILMENTS RESULT FROM NEGLECT OF THEM

"For a man or a woman, a boy or a girl, to be strong in body and to have the necessary energy to do his or her work with a certain amount of new building material each day.

"This material is received into the mouth in the form of food. The teeth grind it and put it in proper condition to be handled by the stomach and sent out into the various parts of the body to be used in building up muscle, bone, brain and all parts that go to make up a well-poised, healthy, vigorous man. If there is any inefficiency in the teeth, and they fail to do their work thoroughly, there will be trouble all along the line.

"You can't expect your stomach to take care of a lot of food unless it is first properly masticated. Nature will tear the old structure down faster than she can possibly build up the new. It is in a frantic effort to prepare this material and send it out, and it will begin to break down under the strain. The alarm bell will be sounded in the way of headache, nervousness, torpid liver, stomach trouble and a thousand and one other ailments. Then you are apt to hustle off to the doctor's office to get a prescription for this, that or the other disease, when, as a matter of fact, the dentist is the man you ought to see. Set the teeth right and most other troubles will adjust themselves. Thoroughly ground and properly prepared material will be sent down to the stomach every meal time, and the stomach will respond with new vigor, the liver will shake off its sluggishness, and in a short time the body will be tingling with new life, the eye will be clear and bright, the brain active and the disposition good. The 'daily grind' will be a pleasure.

"The whole secret lies in the care of the teeth—the 'daily grinders.' Brush them carefully at least once a day. Have your dentist examine them occasionally, and the very minute anything begins to go wrong with any tooth, have the trouble corrected immediately. To delay is to invite more trouble. Nature has a big army of scavengers known as germs. Their whole business is to tear things down. They will attack anything that is not strong enough to resist them.

"The nature finds anything wrong with a tooth she send in her germ army, and they begin to tear it down. She cannot repair it, so she begins to get rid of it—to eliminate it. Our dentists, however, can repair it. They can take away the diseased part and fill the cavity in such a way that the tooth will be practically as good as it ever was.

"Most people fall at some time of life in the proper care of the teeth. Any neglect in this matter means trouble to come. There is only one sure, satisfactory way to avert this trouble, or to get relief when it comes, and that is to get the advice and help of a dentist whose experience and education have fitted him to cope successfully with all kinds of tooth troubles.

"With good teeth a man will have a good stomach, and with these two working in harmony, he draws power and strength from the things around him. Vegetables and meats furnish the elements needed to give him energy, strength and power. The secret of power, therefore, lies with the teeth. If the teeth are sound the man is sound. If the teeth are diseased the whole man is more or less diseased.

"A man owes himself not only a living, but a life. Mere living is only existence. Life—real, healthy, pulsating life—is the joy of living. Taste the good things of life. Have your teeth right, your stomach right, your liver right, your heart right. Teeth right first, then all the others will get right. Be alive. Enjoy the pleasure of the 'daily grind.'

"Consult your dentist often, instead of filling your stomach with drugs."

We are offering a 20 per cent reduction on prices given below—especially to our out-of-town patients—until July 10.
