

OPENING SALE Navy Yard Lots

Two Hundred at $125 to $300—Easy Terms
Within Five Minutes' Walk of Navy Yard Gate

Exact Location Where the Big Ships Will Be Built at Navy Yard

Well, we feel like telling you "we told you so." At last the Government has appropriated.

SIX MILLION DOLLARS

For the construction of shipping ways, etc., in order to build battleships at Government Navy Yards.

The Puget Sound Navy Yard Will Be Equipped at Once

Within one year the population of Bremerton and Charleston should double.

Within one year real estate prices will be advanced at least 100 per cent.

We have 200 more lots for sale at the old prices, $125 to $300 per lot.

These lots lie level, are right in the city limits, and must increase in value as the population comes in to do the work.

The press dispatches say:

"The Navy Yard Bill will bring to the Puget Sound Navy Yard one of the biggest pay rolls in the Northwest. Mechanics and other skilled workers to the number of 3,000 will probably be employed, bringing a new pay roll of $3,000,000."

Now we want you to make some money by buying at once. We are making money at above prices, but when we sell 200 more lots our price will be doubled, as the lots are worth double, but until we do we will give you the greatest opportunity you have ever had for profitable and quick money-making.

Clear Title. Warranty Deed. Fair Treatment. Easy Terms.

Call, write or wire. No lots held without cash deposit for any one.

Our salesmen will be glad to show you the property.

MY SUMMER SEARCH FOR LOVE!

BY ETHEL G.

The True Story of the Poor Girl Without a Home, Who's Hunting a Husband

IT IS SURPRISING HOW DELICIOUS ARE EVEN THE ODORS OF A CAFETERIA FILTERED THROUGH THE FRAGRANCE OF LOVE.

CHAPTER TWO.

It broke my heart to see my sweetheart taken away from me by a girl whose only fascination lay in the fact she had a place where she could practice her little arts and graces, receive a surreptitious kiss or clasp of the hand, without being insulted.

All thru the winter I had to watch the progress of the love affair that should have been mine. I grew thin and wan, and at last consulted a physician.

A young man in my office seemed to take great interest in my case. He brought over my medicine himself. I learned he, too, was alone in town.

He asked me if he could call; I said yes. The medicine the doctor prescribed began to help me right away. I felt better immediately. Spring had come, not only to the whole out-of-doors, but to my heart.

Sight of the open lovelorn of my whilom lover Tom and the girl who had a parlor had no pain for me now.

Harry was walking home with me from work each night.

Frequently we lunched together. It is surprising how delicious are the odors of a cafeteria filtered thru the fragrance of love.

I was sure Harry loved me, altho he had never told me so. He had never had a chance. A man can't tell a girl he loves her with two, three or four people listening.

But in the last of May, there came one never-to-be-forgotten day. The air was balmy and fragrant. The trees had on their beautiful spring frocks of tenderest green.

"I'm coming around to take you to the park," said Harry.

I put on my white skirt and my new pink sweater and tam.

"You are so sweet, dear," Harry murmured, as we sat down on a somewhat sheltered bench, "that I am almost afraid of you!"

"Here—here!" shouted a good-natured Irish voice. "Ye two turndoves better be takin' yerlives over there under the light. Ye'll be gittin' into mischief over here and then I'll have to run ye in!"

I felt my cheeks burn, and Harry turned pale. We did not move, however, and Harry muttered something about the parks being "built for the people."

tered something about the parks being "built for the people."

Slowly the red and gold in the west turned to silver and gray as the pale crescent of the moon smiled at us.

All at once Harry turned to me—there was no mistaking what he wanted to say. Irresistibly I bent forward and just as our lips met, we were jerked apart.

"Didn't I tell ye ye'd git into mischief. It's meself has orders to run ye in! 'No lalazagging in the park,' says the chief."

I saw murder in my lover's eye, and spoke: "Harry, Harry!"—but I was too late.

"Take your ugly hands off me," he screamed, and struck out blindly.

Not until my lover was almost pounded into insensibility was the fight ended. He was dragged off to the station.

The next day I read my name under the headlines.

The girl-with-the-parlor turned away her head, when I tried to speak. The manager told me my services were no longer wanted.

Harry was sentenced for resisting an officer. He seemed to feel I was in some way to blame for his disgrace. I never saw him again.

(Miss G.—will tell more of her experience trying to be courted in The Star tomorrow and succeeding days.)

PATROL AGENCY SUED FOR DEATH

Five thousand dollars retribution for the death of his son was demanded by Charles Frisell, 401 11th ave. N., when he filed suit in superior court Friday against the F. H. Surrey Agency and Night Patrol system and 25 of the agency's clients.

The son, Carl Frisell, 17, was shot and killed September 19 last, by A. Gouley, a merchant's patrol policeman in the employ of the Surrey Agency.

Gouley was aiding city policemen trail a gang of young men who had engaged in a street brawl. Supposing Frisell, who was hurrying away on a motorcycle driven by Edgar Moore, an acquaintance, was one of the gang, Gouley fired.

Frisell dropped from the tandem seat dead. Gouley was tried for killing Frisell, but acquitted.

Robert G. Saunders, Frisell's attorney, said he had included the agency's clients in the list of defendants, because of his theory that they were responsible indirectly for the lad's death.

"They put the gun in Gouley's hand," he said.

Among the clients are several leading department stores, banks and other business establishments.

SIX BOY SCOUTS from the Madison Park district will climb Mount Rainier this week-end.

RUSS ADVANCE IS NOW HALTED

Turkish Troops Give Aid at Critical Time

GERMAN LINES STRONG

BY ED L. KEENE
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Aug. 18.—Turkish troops shunted into Galicia after a round-about railway journey thru Serbia from Constantinople have stiffened the Austro-German lines before Lemberg and at least temporarily halted the Russian advance.

The appearance of the Turks on Gen. Bothmer's front was first officially announced by the German war office this afternoon, in a report of the repulse of further Russian attacks. That the Turks not only have stiffened the retreating Austro-German lines, but have enabled Bothmer to take the offensive is admitted in an official statement from Petrograd, reporting strong hostile attacks northeast of Stanislau. Despite their reverses in this region, the Russians continue to advance in the Carpathian region and are now threatening to invade Hungary.

Russians Approach Mountains
The Petrograd official statement reported Russian troops approaching the mountains of Koromez, at the Hungarian end of the Jablonitz mountain pass, and also reported the capture of two villages southwest of Stanislau. The German and Austrian war offices, however, claimed progress for their armies in the Carpathian fighting.

Recapture by the French of the village of Fleury, three and one-half miles northeast of Verdun, was the most telling stroke delivered by the allies on the Western front last night. The French announced that the village is completely in possession of the attacking French forces, the Berlin asserted the battle was unchanged at this point.

BIG BOND ISSUE FOR MEXICAN SITUATION

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 18.—An unexpected bond issue for $130,000,000 to carry the government thru the Mexican border situation until January was included in the report issued Thursday night to congress by the senate finance committee.

The proposed issue is included in the $205,000,000 revenue bill and is purely an emergency proposition.

BRITISH REPULSED

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—British troops succeeded in pressing back the German first line southwest of Martinpuich on a narrow front in yesterday's fighting, but were completely repulsed in attacks north of Pozieres and west of Fougereux wood. It was officially announced today.

Between Guilleumont and Maurepas, British advances were repulsed with heavy enemy losses.

Northeast of Hardecourt, bitter fighting occurred without any decision.
