

A Married Man's Troubles

By Allman LINCOLN FARM GIVEN TO UNITED STATES

Disciplined by World
Here Lincoln had his beginnings. Here the end and consummation of that great life among romances and a bit incredible. And yet there was no break anywhere between beginning and end, no lack of natural sequence anywhere. Nothing really incredible happened. Lincoln was unaffectedly as much at home in the White House as he was here. Do you share with me the feeling, I wonder, that he was permanently at home nowhere?

"It seems to me that in the case of a man—I would rather say of a spirit—like Lincoln, the question where he was is of little significance; that it is always what was that really arrests our thought and takes hold of our imagination. It is the spirit always that is sovereign. Lincoln, like the rest of us, was put thru the discipline of the world—a very rough and exacting discipline for him, and indispensable discipline for every man who would know what he is about in the midst of the world's affairs; but his spirit got only its schooling there. It did not derive its character or its vision from the experience which brought it to its full revelation.

"The test of every American must always be, not where he is, but what he is. That, also, is the essence of democracy, and is the moral of which this place is most gravely expressive.

Not "Typical"
"We would like to think of men like Lincoln and Washington as typical Americans, but no man can be typical who is so unusual as these great men were. It was typical of American life that it should produce such men with supreme indifference as to the manner in which it produced them, and ready here in this but as a part of the little circle of cultivated gentlemen to whom Virginia owed so much in leadership and example. And Lincoln and Washington were typical Americans in the use they made of their genius.

"But there will be few such men at best, and we will not look into the mystery of how many they come. We will only keep the door open for them always, and a hearty welcome—after we have recognized them.

"I have read many biographies of Lincoln; I have sought out with the greatest interest the many intimate stories that are told of him, the narratives of nearby friends, the sketches of close acquaintances in which those who had the privilege of being associated with him have tried to depict for us the very man himself, 'in his habit as he lived'; but I have nowhere found a real intimate of Lincoln's.

"I nowhere get the impression in any narrative or reminiscence that the writer, in fact, penetrates to the heart of his mystery, that any man could penetrate to the heart of it. That brooding spirit had no real familiar. I get the impression that it never spoke out in complete self-revelation, and that it could not reveal itself completely to anyone.

"He dwelt apart
"It was a very lonely spirit that looked out from underneath those shaggy brows and comprehended men without fully communing with them, as if, in spite of all its genial efforts at comradeship, it dwelt apart, saw its visions of duty where no man looked on. There is a very bold and very terrible isolation for the conscience of every man who seeks to read the destiny in affairs for others as well as for himself, for a nation as well as for individuals. That lonely search of the spirit for the right perhaps no man can assist. This strange child of the cabin kept company with its thoughts, but dominant and intimate but that of its own mind, assembling and deploying thoughts.

No Need of Eulogy
"I have come here today, not to utter a eulogy on Lincoln; he stands in eulogy of none; but to endeavor to interpret the meaning of this gift to the nation of the place of his birth and origin. Is not this an altar upon which we may forever keep alive the vestal fire of democracy as upon a shrine at which some of the deepest and most sacred hopes of mankind may from age to age be rekindled? For these hopes must constantly be rekindled, and only those who live can rekindle them. The only stuff that can retain the life-giving heat is the stuff of living hearts. And the hopes of mankind cannot be kept alive by words merely, by constitutions and doctrines of right and codes of liberty.

"The object of democracy is to transmute these into the life and action of society, the self-sacrifice of every man and woman willing to make their lives an embodiment of right and service and enlightened purpose. The commands of democracy are as imperative as its privileges and opportunities are wide and generous. Its compulsion is upon every man. It is a great and great light for the guidance of our own feet. We are not worthy to stand here unless we ourselves be in deed and in truth real democrats and servants of mankind, ready to give our lives for the freedom and justice and spiritual exaltation of the great nation which shelters and nurtures us."

DANCE, BOOZE AND 2 CAUGHT

"Packhorse" Bert Conway and O. A. Wiley, former saloon man, both of Redmond, were in the county jail Monday, unable to furnish $1,000 bail each, and facing a charge of bootlegging at a Saturday night dance in their town.

Under Sheriff John Stringer passed thru Redmond Saturday and was told by the mayor that the latter feared Wiley, who has been arrested four or five times for the same offense, intended furnishing intoxicating refreshments at the dance that night.

He detailed Deputy Sheriffs Campbell, Brewer and Von Gerste to watch Wiley. About 3 a. m. Sunday they were said to have nabbed Conway as he was en route from Wiley's home with a demijohn of whisky headed for Wiley's old saloon.

About six and a half gallons of whisky was found and seized and both men brought to the county jail.

ORPHEUM
The Wilkes Players won appreciation with their presentation of "The Song of Songs," which opened at the Orpheum Sunday night.

It is said to be the most difficult vehicle Miss Phoebe Hunt, leading woman, has attempted to star in, and she is credited with making her best interpretation of character in it.

A big crowd greeted the first performance. George Rand is playing opposite Miss Hunt.

The president, in accepting the memorial, said:
"No more significant memorial could have been presented to the nation than this. It expresses so much of what is singular and noteworthy in the history of the country; it suggests so many of the things that we prize most highly in our life and in our system of government. There is nowhere in the land any home so remote, so humble, that it may not contain the power of mind and heart and conscience to which nations yield and history submits its processes.

"Nature pays no tribute to aristocracy, subscribes to no creed of caste, renders fealty to no monarch or master of any name or kind. Genius is no snob. It does not run after titles or seek by preference the high circles of society. It affects humble company as well as great. It pays no special tribute to universities or learned societies or conventional standards of greatness, but serenely chooses its own comrades, its own haunts, its own cradle even, and its own life of adventure and of training.

"Here is proof of it. This little hut was the cradle of one of the great sons of men, a man of singular, delightful, vital genius, who presently emerged upon the great stage of the nation's history, gaunt, shy, ungainly, but dominant and majestic, a natural ruler of men, himself inevitably the central figure of the great plot. No man can explain this, but every man can see how it demonstrates the vigor of democracy, where every door is open, in every hamlet and countryside, in city and wilderness alike, for the ruler to emerge when he will and claim his leadership in the free life. Such are the authentic proofs of the validity and vitality of democracy.

Mystery Here, Too
"Here, no less, hides the mystery of democracy. Who shall guess this secret of nature and Providence and a free polity? Whatever the vigor and vitality of the stock from which he sprang, its mere vigor and soundness do not explain why this man got his great heart that seemed to comprehend all mankind in its catholic and benignant sympathy, the mind that sat enthroned behind those brooding, melancholy eyes, whose vision swept many a horizon which those about him dreamed not of—that mind that comprehended what it had never seen, and understood the language of affairs with the ready ease of one to the manner born—or that nature which seemed in its varied richness to be the familiar of men of every way of life.

"This is the sacred mystery of democracy, that its richest fruits spring up out of soils which no man has prepared and in circumstances amidst which they are the least expected. This is a place alike of mystery and of reassurance. It is like that in a society ordered otherwise than our own, Lincoln could not have found himself or the path of fame and power upon which he walked serenely to his death. In this place it is right that we should remind ourselves of the solid and striking facts upon which our faith in democracy is founded.

"Many another man besides Lincoln has served the nation in its highest places of counsel and of action whose origin was as humble as his. Tho the greatest example of the universal energy, richness, stimulation, and force of democracy, he is only one example among many. The permeating and all-pervasive virtue of the freedom which challenges us in America to make the most of every gift and power we possess, every page of our history serves to emphasize and illustrate. Standing here in this place, it seems almost the ESSANAY NO LONGER WITH V. L. S. E., INC.

Essanay has withdrawn from the V. L. S. E., Inc. the withdrawal to take effect Sept. 16. This announcement has just been made by George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Co.

Spoor gives "business reasons" as the cause for the withdrawal. He states that a new organization for releasing Essanay features will be announced in the near future.

This confirms the reports which have been printed recently in regard to the separation from the V. L. S. E. and the realignment of companies under new releasing organizations.
