Fair Recruits Must Pass Heart Test

How's your pulse? Here's the first test Uncle Sam demands of women who are volunteering as angels of mercy and for auxiliary war service in many departments throughout the United States.

Trying ordeals, hard work and terrifying tasks may be exacted of women who choose to do their part in defending the nation. For that reason the stethoscope must tell its whispering story of heart soundness or weakness for every fair applicant.

Surgeon C. W. Smith, of the navy, is here shown applying the heart test to Miss Evelyn Brockwell, of San Francisco, with Miss Norma Graham recording the tale of the stethoscope.

MEXICAN TROOPS MOVE TO BORDER

EL PASO, April 6.—Sudden movement of Mexican government troops toward the border today, in the states of Chihuahua, Nuevo Leon and Coahuila, is believed by federal authorities here to portend hostile action against border settlements, despite the explanation offered by Carranzista officials that the movements are a part of the campaign against the bandit forces under Villa.

Government agents here are watching closely for evidences of a border raid and action probably will be taken at the first hostile indication.

ACCORDING TO Deputy Auditor Hiram Nadeau there are still 4,200 automobile owners in King county who have not obtained their new licenses.

HOUSE VOTES TO DECLARE WAR AS WOMAN MEMBER PROTESTS

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Amidst the most dramatic scenes ever witnessed in congress, the house early today passed the resolution which formally declared Germany an enemy and launched the U. S. in the fight for the democracy of the world. The vote was 373 to 50.

For the first time in history a woman, Jeanette Rankin, of Montana, voted on the question of war. With a sob and a protest of her love of country, she voted "no."

The only things left now to make the state of war formal are the signatures of Vice President Marshall and President Wilson.

It was 3 a. m. when the historic resolution finally came to a vote, after hours of debate. All amendments were rejected, without roll call, thereby brushing aside the proposal that would prohibit the president sending troops across the seas.

Miss Rankin Votes Dramatically

President Wilson, as soon as the resolution is signed by himself and Vice President Marshall, will be free to strike back at the Kaiser with the army and the navy—to use all the nation's resources.

One of the tragically dramatic moments of the historic session of the house followed the call upon Jeanette Rankin, first and only woman representative, to cast her vote.

Silently she sat, with bowed head. Twice the clerk called her name. The first time she did not answer.

Then she arose. She was sobbing.

"I want to stand by my country," she was heard to say, "but I cannot vote for war."

Silently supporting herself against the desk, she stood for just a second.

Cries of "Vote! Vote!" broke the silence.

The woman crumpled into her seat. Her vote was recorded "NO."

History had been made. Never before in all the centuries of conflict had a woman sat with the counselors of a nation and been forced to cast one of the deciding votes.

Another dramatic moment followed the entrance of Democratic Floor Leader Claude Kitchin into the house of representatives. The word had been circulated thru the day that he would speak against the resolution, but his colleagues refused to believe it. They went in twos and threes to his office and argued with him.

Kitchin Stands by Guns

He was told his opposition might cost him the floor leadership—his whole prospective of political advancement. At 3 p. m. he entered the house, just after making the final public announcement he would oppose the resolution.

Several deserting pacifists returned to the fold on hearing Kitchin's decision.

But when the democratic leader spoke, it was without his characteristic fire.

He's Against War

"In view of the many assumptions of loyalty and patriotism," he said "on the part of some of those who favor the resolution, and insinuations by them of cowardice and disloyalty on the part of those who oppose it, offshoots doubtless of the passionate moment, let me at once remind the house that it takes neither moral nor physical courage to declare war for others to fight. It is evidence of neither loyalty nor patriotism for one to urge others to get into war when he knows that he himself is going to keep out."

"The depth of my horror, the intensity of my distress, in contemplating the measureless steps proposed, God only knows. Too grave is the responsibility for anyone to permit another to stand sponsor for my conscience. My conscience and judgment, after mature thought and fervent prayer for rightful guidance, has pointed out clearly the path of my duty, and I have made up my mind to walk in it, if I go barefooted and alone."

As the night wore on, and speaker after speaker added to the list of speeches, the cries of "vote," "vote," came more frequently.

Republican Floor Leader Mann told the house there was nothing more to gain "by a vote at midnight than by a vote at 6 a. m.—it's too important a matter not to have debate."

Mann Backs Wilson

Then speaking, he said: "For two and a half years I have done all in my power by voice and vote to keep this country out of the European war.

"Now the situation is changed—the president of the United States, who has the responsibility of dealing with these countries, and who is the spokesman of the people with the nations of the world, has asked us to declare war.

"The only thing left for us to do is to stand by the president elected by the people. We cannot say to the world that our goal is gold, that our only desire is wealth. We must, when the question is presented to us, declare we will maintain the rights of Americans abroad, as well as at home."

Rep. Gardner, Massachusetts, said "The United States is not going to war for 200 murdered Americans, but for the rights of man."

On his desk busily. Senator Stone gazed absently into the galleries. Every other senator leaned forward intently as Vice President Marshall picked up his pen.

It took just three minutes for the momentous measure to run its course in the senate and about four minutes for it to leave the senate chamber.

Before the bill was out of the room the senate had resumed its usual slow, dignified course.

The bill was sent into the office of Secretary of the Senate Baker.

Delivered by Bike

There the single sheet of parchment containing two of the three signatures needed to plunge the nation into war was wrapped up, carefully sealed, tied with liberal red tape that accompanies the colloquial red tape at the capitol and dispatched to the White House by a bicycle messenger.

The messenger, having run the gauntlet of the White House guards, delivered the message and returned to the capitol. It was 25 minutes after the vice president signed the paper until it was on its way to the White House to receive the president's signature.

CHINA MAY DIVE IN WAR ON KAISER

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese minister, called on Secretary Lansing yesterday and manifested a great interest in the war plans of the United States.

China is said to be considering following the lead of the United States into active war. She was the only nation to accept the lead in severing relations.

The Chinese have much to gain by entrance in the war. She would risk foreign control and gain higher customs, a moratorium on Boxer indemnities and a seat on the League of Nations.

Way It Was Done

The usual procedure was followed.

South, entering the center aisle of the senate, awaited a pause that followed the morning prayer.

"A message from the house of representatives," announced a senate secretary.

"Mr. President," said South, "Mr. Secretary," Marshall replied.

"I present senate joint resolution No. 1," said South, "declaring that a state of war exists between the imperial German government and the people of the United States and asking provisions to prosecute the same."

Wilson Takes Short Walk

South cleared his throat. Marshall, followed suit and it sounded as the every one else emulated the example set.

Just before news of Marshall's signing the resolution reached the White House, the president and Mrs. Wilson went for a short walk.

"I present also," said South, "house resolution No. 12, an act making appropriations for the army."

South turned to leave the senate, handing the bill to the senate employee sent to greet him. Senator La Follette did not turn his head in the momentous resolution was announced and borne down the aisle to the clerk's desk.

MARSHALL SIGNS WAR DECLARATION

long three minutes between the signing of the resolution and his receipt of it.

Marshall Signs It

As he waved for a clerk to record the bill on the big senate official ledger, Marshall took up a new stub pen, set it carefully with his tongue and held it ready. As the resolution was put on his desk after a little smudge had been erased of the space left for his signature, Marshall dipped the pen into the inkwell and signed, "Thomas R. Marshall."

The vice president then carefully shook the superfluous ink into a convenient cuspidor. While the bill was going thru the little formalities of the senate the reading clerk was reading the usual gist of telegrams from "back home."

Every little stir sounded noisy in the silence of the senate chamber.

Every One Sighed

As Marshall finished there was a long-drawn sigh from every one. Those in the galleries and on the floor squirmed and twisted for a better chance to see history in the making.

The buzz and apparent confusion—not noticeable in normal times—sounded like a threshing mill in operation in contrast to the quiet that had preceded it.

Jerry South, clerk of the house, presented the resolution in person, an unusual procedure for capitol officials.

91 GERMAN SHIPS IN YANKEE PORTS SEIZED IN HURRY

possession of the vessels in the name of the U. S.

At Hoboken, N. J., alone, 18 vessels, including the giant Vaterland, were taken over. In all, 7 ships were seized in New York waters.

The total number of German ships in American waters which were seized is 91. They represent a total gross tonnage of 594,696.

No Trouble Reported

From Philadelphia, Boston, New Orleans, Jacksonville, Wilmington, N. C.; Seattle, San Francisco and other ports came reports during the morning of the seizure of ships. No trouble was reported. In every instance, marines or bluejackets were armed, waiting and ready for the signal to take over the ships. This signal was word that the house had passed the war resolution.

In New York harbor a long, gray, war-painted destroyer waited anxiously on the water just off the bow of the giant Vaterland. Her guns were trained on the enemy sea monster. The busy launch of Collector of the Port Malone churned the waters of the bay as he hastened on his early-morning enterprise. All night long he had waited for the order to seize the ships.

All Ships Damaged

His deputies, by scores, were on the docks and piers in Hoboken, New York and Staten Island. When the word came, the waiting men hurried aboard. The German sailors were ordered to pack their belongings and were hurried away to Ellis Island. The same scenes were enacted at other ports.

In all cases the enemy sailors were sent to the immigration stations, some later being released on parole.

At New London, the steamer Wilhelm, which has served as mother ship to the merchant submarine Deutschland, was seized. The German vessels are now subject to use by the United States. Whether any of them can be put in commission at an early date, however, is problematical. In most cases the machinery of the ships has been wrecked.

TWO WASHINGTON MEN OPPOSE WAR

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 6.—Two congressmen from Washington state voted against the state-of-war resolution early this morning.

They were C. C. Dill and W. L. La Follette, both from districts east of the Cascade mountains.

La Follette is a cousin of Bob La Follette of Wisconsin, and frankly admitted that he had the same viewpoint relative to the war move.

All the other members of the Washington delegation went down the line behind the president.

Dill spoke against the war resolution.

"I thought that I might go home and explain that war had been forced on us against our will," he declared, "but that would be a lie! I do not know what the future holds for me politically, and I don't care much, but when the resolution is adopted, my opposition to it ceases."
