

SOLONS MEET AT PUYALLUP, BUT BAR POLITICS

It was a good advertisement for the Western Washington fair—the assembling of members of the legislature at Puyallup yesterday. Thirty-three members of the house and 14 members of the senate accepted the invitations issued by Speaker Kelly and Lieut. Hart, respectively, to attend the fair. Behind the invitations, it was rumored, was a well-laid plan to talk over things and perhaps determine a course of action for the legislators in the matter of a special session. But if any one had any such idea at any time, it was previous to the Puyallup assembly. At Puyallup nothing of the kind was even broached or discussed. The legislators merely spent a few social hours viewing the exhibits, the horse races, kidding each other, and generally being entirely content to let the matter of a special session rest entirely with the governor.

At noon the legislators gathered for lunch, heard speeches by W. H. Paulhamus, director of the fair, and by Speaker Kelly and Lieut. Gov. Hart. The speeches had to do with the fair—politics being eschewed. And those who came with expectations of hearing some inside politics returned home disappointed. Kelly and Hart, it seems, sent out the invitations at the request of Paulhamus, they both being from that dear Tacoma—and Tacoma is quite close to Puyallup, you know. The legislators had a good time, anyhow.

KAISER SPENT COIN HERE BEFORE WAR

The following wireless to Berlin: "Your wireless received. Paid to Charles Gledhill thru Fred Hoomen $500,000. Gledhill requires further $1,000,000, which shall pay gradually."

On March 17 the following reply came to Schmidt from Berlin: "You may dispose out of Fred Hoomen on behalf of Gledhill, $1,700,000." This cable was signed "Direction," as were other cables from the bank.

The following report was sent by Schmidt to Berlin, March 18: "Paid Chas. Gledhill further $100,000."

Final Payment Reported March 20, Schmidt wired the Deutsches bank in Berlin: "Paid Charles Gledhill $300,000." Four days later Schmidt sent the following: "Paid Chas. Gledhill further $300,000."

On April 1, this message was sent by Schmidt to the Berlin bank: "Paid Charles Gledhill $483,500. Final payment."

In statements to the United Press today, the authorities indicated that trace had been found of a pouring out of literally millions of dollars—much of it to Americans—on Count Von Bernstorff's orders thru the Deutsches bank.

Millions Paid Out "Millions upon millions of dollars and securities have passed thru the Deutsches bank," said Perley Morse, expert accountant, entrusted with investigation of the Bolo Pasha and other intrigues. "If the source and destination of these sums and securities became known, the information would no doubt be valuable for the apprehension of many men closely connected with Germany."

Wide Search Begins

The widest possible search for just this information is now under way by New York authorities. Officials indicated today that the new government inquisitorial powers conferred on the trading with the enemy act might be turned over for the present exclusively toward running down the "leads" already uncovered in the Deutsches bank.

"A thorough investigation of the books and dealings of the Deutsches bank and the activities of Hugo Schmidt offers an unlimited field for the U. S. authorities which has not been exploited," said Attorney General Lewis today.

Lewis has been entrusted with the preliminary probe by the state and the government as well as by the French ambassador, who is interested in the matter because of the complicity of Bolo Pasha.

"We are leaving no stone unturned," Albert Becker, deputy attorney general, told the United Press, "to uncover the whole matter, and have found many crossing trails. A report of all information we obtain regarding other financial transactions of a suspicious character is being made directly to Washington."

"It was not definitely disclosed today whether Attorney General Lewis has been authorized to go further than investigate the Bolo Pasha intriguing, which he formally disclosed last night. This showed that Bernstorff thru financial transfers cleverly cloaked thru the Deutsches bank, had paid Bolo Pasha nearly $1,800,000 for influencing the French press.

"The system of German propaganda needed a strong financial backing," Perley Morse said. "The best way of tracing the whole scheme in my mind, is thru the money trail."

Hunt Other Agents

What makes the investigation of immediate and prime importance as a war measure is the belief hinted at by officials today that Bernstorff was only one of active heads of the espionage and propaganda system. Thru full probe, it is hoped that other agents may be unearthed.

Attorney General Lewis is examining many witnesses at his headquarters. Some of this testimony is directly in line with the Bolo Pasha case and is being transmitted to the French government for use against the Levantine agent now held in custody at Paris.

Used Bank for Screen

Other witnesses, it became known, are being cross-examined for the purpose of eliciting information of all the Deutsches bank transactions. Among those of the latter class who were expected to be examined was Hugh Schmidt himself. Lewis refused to say what Schmidt would be questioned about.

Other officials today pointed out that selection of a banking institution as the fountain of German gold, from which streams were to be diverted for propaganda was exceedingly clever, because behind the screen of the bank's heavy business, the trail would be lost.
