AND CHRYS GIVES ME A STRANGE THEORY THAT INVOLVES MY LOVELY RIVAL

"It can't be! A spot of blood—on Bab's little dress? Why, it's impossible!" I murmured, growing so faint that I slumped into the chair by Mrs. Chapin's bed. "Where did Morrison get the cloth? What else did he say?"

"He said I wasn't to tell a soul about it. But, my dear, I had to tell you know—or I'd go out of my mind! I begged him to say where it came from, but he just shook his head and said for me to go to sleep. Me sleep? When maybe it's all my own fault? But I'd left her that—often—"

Mrs. Chapin's self-reproaches ran on and on until the doctor came and gave her a quieting medicine.

I wanted to tell him that I needed a dose myself to keep that horrible word "murder" from ringing in my ears and to keep out of my mind that fleeting glimpse of white linen which Bob had studied in the lamp light.

For at last I knew what my husband had hidden from me—and why! I understood the depths of feminine tyranny my jealousy of Katherine Miller had dragged me.

I sat by Mrs. Chapin's bed until the medicine had put her to sleep, then I went downstairs to Mother Lorimer. How was I going to talk to her and not betray the dreadful secret Mrs. Chapin had confided to me? How was I ever going to be patient until Bob came back? I couldn't endure, alone, the thought that Bab's might be dead.

I even assured myself that the idea was perfectly absurd. Nobody had a motive for getting rid of that precious Mrs. Chapin. Mrs. Chapin, I decided, must have gone out of her mind with worry.

I met Chrys in the hall. She was also on her way to talk with mother.

"Gracious! Don't look so doleful, dearie!" she exclaimed, putting an arm through mine. "What's the matter?"

"Babs" was all I could murmur.

"Dry your tears, Jane, so that you can watch our daddy. Why, he'll have that baby back here before dinner, I presume!" I could tell from her tone that Chrys' cheer was not put on for my benefit. She hadn't a notion about the case at all like my own.

"The baby will be safe and sound, too. Precious thing! And such a beauty!" Chrys was talking, I could see, to dispel my gloom. "Why, the other day, when Katherine Miller looked so positively off-color in my room. 'Did you ever see a doll like that?' I said to Katherine. 'Why, you must have been exactly the same at her age, Katherine! What a remarkable resemblance!' But instead of being flattered, Katherine Miller looked positively offended. 'We Lorimers love the child so that we forget she's a bit of a splash on our 'seutcheon. To prove to Katherine that I wasn't implying anything about heredity, for instance, I just rubbed in the facts, carelessly, about the odd resemblance. 'She has your tip-silver hair,' I said, 'and what is more unusual, the same golden glow in her complexion.' Katherine was really annoyed, though. She went home pretty soon, in a bit of a huff."

"Babs does resemble Miss Miller awfully," said I, "I wonder if the resemblance will increase as she grows older."

"And after I had said it, I was paralyzed with a new idea—a horrible dread!"

11-YEAR-OLD GIRL WEDS MAN AGED 29
KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 2.—Edith Fain, 11-year-old daughter of Jacob Fain, Tulsa, Okla., and Steve Munoz, 29 years old, who lived in the same rooming house as the father and daughter, were married May 14 at Claremore, Okla., with the consent of Mrs. Jacob Fain, the girl's step-mother.

The father of the girl was in Mobile, Ala., when the marriage took place. Upon his return he objected, and sent his daughter to live with his sister, Mrs. Fred Smith of this city. Although married, the girl does not care to live longer with Munoz. The girl's father has asked the marriage be annulled.

ONE TRAIN RIDE AT 102
LONDON, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Ann Morrison of Strath Gairloch has just celebrated her 102nd birthday. She has only traveled once in a train, and that was 50 years ago.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG
Don't Stay Gray. Nobody Can Tell When You Turn Gray. Faded Hair With Sage Tea and Sulphur

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it dardens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

Cynthia Grey—

RED-BLOODED GIRL AND MAN CAN BE HAPPY IF LOVE AND CONGENIALITY BLESS UNION

A man claims that a girl may be happy as the wife of a man below her social status because we are living in an age of democracy. A girl takes the opposite view and says it "can't be did." What do you think about it? You will greatly aid a girl whom this question vitally concerns by expressing your opinion. Following are letters on the subject:

Dear Miss Grey: Thru your columns I wish to say to "Ellen," the society maid who has tired of the social butterfly existence, and who wishes to get out into the world and do real things and mingle with real men, to marry whom she loves.

Personally, I think it all tommy-rot that a red-blooded American girl could not be happy with a red-blooded American man, if they were congenial and really loved one another, even tho she were wealthier and he poorer.

Day by day we behold hide-bound conventions and aristocracy giving way before the mighty onrush of industrial democracy. This thing alone makes it possible for rich and poor to mingle on a common ground if they be so inclined.

ELDON.

Dear Miss Grey: In regard to "Ellen's" question as to whether a rich girl could be happily married to a poor man, I will answer that I do not think it possible, that is, for any length of time.

I have known of a number of such marriages, and they all fizzled out at the end of three or four years, and many of them before. As one example, I give the widely-published case of Mrs. Jack Gerahy, the wealthy girl who eloped with Jack Gerahy, her father's chauffeur. Only just recently I noticed that she had discovered that love in a cottage with Jack had become irksome, and is suing for a divorce.

Marry the chap with the money, "Ellen," of your own social status. Don't experiment on the poor, even tho ambitious, young man. For his sake, as well as your own, don't do it. Life's too short.

MARIE.

Calamity Howlers Out of Date
Dear Miss Grey: Do you believe this true—that people are aying about the world coming to an end? Such awful things and diseases that are going to happen this winter? Please tell me what you think and where we can find a good fortune teller.

P. H.

Personally, I take no stock in the crying of calamity howlers.

They have been predicting the end of the world every year since I can remember, and I presume they will continue to do so long after I am dead.

Since I have learned from experience and to my own satisfaction that the average fortune teller is a fraud, I have lost complete interest in them, and do not know where one might be found. And just a tip, my friend: Unless you have money to burn, keep away from them.

Contemptuous Carelessness
Dear Miss Grey: Just a few lines in regard to people who are unfortunate, such as cripples, cross-eyed, etc. Why is it that so many people, well-dressed ones included, who should know better, sit and stare and pass remarks about these unfortunates in public places?

I notice it more on street cars and it seems to be mostly among the women who do this. As I was coming home on the street car, a girl sat near me who very cross-eyed, and every one in her range was staring at her. Isn't that ill-mannered and the height of ignorance?

BETTER MANNERS.
IT IS ill-mannered, indeed, to call undue notice to those unfortunately afflicted, but I cannot believe that people do so thru ignorance. It is pure carelessness and thoughtlessness. They permit their curiosity to get the better of their breeding.

Easy to Hold His Home
Dear Miss Grey: A few days ago a letter appeared in your columns, written by a girl who signs herself "A Little Jealous."

As a man who, at times, has struggled with about every possible influence to try to be worthy of the love of one of God's good women, perhaps you will give this letter space.

When one truly cares, one learns many things that are hidden before. One of these is that when love exists between a man and a woman, especially when the man is of a lower station, he owes it to her and all who truly love her to do his utmost to come up to her standards. Another is that there are plenty of outsiders who are willing to attend to every one's business but their own. Let no mistake be made about this, a lover wants that loved one to have the best possible protection that society can give her, and sometimes, even then, it does not give enough. Those who will misinterpret and resort to petty trickery to misrepresent the motives of those most vitally concerned, and to their lasting injury, are not friends, but antagonistic critics of people whose motives are as good, possibly better, than their own, and cease to be a factor.

Little girl, I think I know the man you wrote of very well, indeed. Don't you ever worry over any phase of the problem, and I think you will find that holding his love is about the easiest thing you ever did.

The final decision should be, and is, yours alone.

New System of Fat Reduction
Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at the old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements discovered by one of our foremost physicians. Now, from the same high authority, there comes another idea—the idea of condensing these same pure, harmless ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bed-time, they help the stomach to dispose of all the fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all drug stores—do for you what bodily exertion and self-denial can not do, and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all drug stores or sent post paid by the Marmola Co., 84 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. A large case—sufficient to bring lasting results—is but $1.

Don't Be Tricked by a Teaspoon!

A heaping teaspoon may contain two level teaspoons, three level teaspoons, or four level teaspoons—it all depends upon who heaps it and what they heap it for!

Here Is the Crescent Method—Try It Yourself

Take two level teaspoons of Crescent Baking Powder and put them on ONE TEASPOON and you have one heaping teaspoon.

House-to-House Workers Juggling With Terms

"rounding" and "heaping" may endeavor to create the idea that their powder contains "double strength" and that one spoonful is "equal to two spoonful" of Crescent Baking Powder.

But read the directions on the labels—

Crescent label reads "Two heaping or four level teaspoons."
The other label reads "One heaping or two rounding teaspoons."

Each means the same amount—four level teaspoons. Any other construction is merely a play upon words. This may be proven by their recipe literature, which calls for one level teaspoon to the cup of flour—just the same unit of measurement as for any baking powder of reasonable leavening strength.

Crescent Baking Powder Tests More Than 14%

CARBONIC ACID GAS (leavening strength)—the highest test of any commercial baking powder on the market.

During the war there has been no advance to the consumer in the cost of Crescent Baking Powder; the higher cost of production and distribution has been carried by the Crescent Manufacturing Co. and the retail grocers, who are patriotically serving the public at less than pre-war profits.
