Miss Peters Complimented

Fifty maids and matrons enjoyed the hospitality of Miss Margaret Hutton today at her home in Hamilton Arms and extended congratulations to the honored guest, Miss Jeanne Peters, whose engagement has just been announced. Spring flowers were used effectively in the drawing room, where the guests were received. At the tea table, which was attractively arranged in yellow with a mound of acacia, peonies and pussy-willows, Mrs. J. D. Butler and Mrs. J. L. Mohundro presided, assisted by Miss Elizabeth Chadwick, Miss Patricia Fotheringham, Miss Betsy Booth and Miss Eleanor Linder. Mrs. E. H. Thomas gave several piano selections during the afternoon and Miss Marion Hutton received the cards at the door.

Seattle Style

Tenth of The Star's snapshots of attractively-dressed women on Seattle streets.

The tendency to panel effects in suits is charmingly shown in the model pictured here. The suit is of reindeer color broadcloth-finished velour, made with the bloused effect. A novel feature is the fur trimming used to weight down the side panniers. With this suit is worn a very becoming brown hat, bordering on the poke-bonnet style. DAISY HENRY.

If the lady pictured here will call at The Star's editorial rooms and identify herself she will receive two tickets to the Moore.

I FEAR TO TELL CHRYS THE AWFUL NEWS

"In a world so crammed with sorrow, it's strange that a man and a woman can achieve their supreme happiness merely by being together." I thought, as I regarded Jordan Spence and Chrys while they chatted away in complete oblivion to their surroundings. It was my unhappy duty to spoil their small portion of joy by handing them the paper with its dreadful news.

I let them chat on, and smile on, while I gathered up my courage. The report that the "lone" had gone down could not be concealed from J. D. Lorimer's daughter for any length of time.

Chrystabel Lorimer had always prided herself on her ability to face the hard facts of life. She had a pet theory that men and women behave in an emergency according to the habits they have formed under ordinary conditions. If a man or a woman has been accustomed to meet small daily trials bravely, he or she will be brave in the face of tragedy. Only those who shrink their portion of minor hardships will slump like cowed men when confronted by accident or sudden death.

Chrys' pride in her personal reaction to the inevitable was about to be tested, but I had to admit that I was a plain coward. I could not force myself to tell her what the paper said.

"Dr. Spence!" I called. Spence crossed the room and I thrust the newspaper into his hand.

His jaw set hard as he grasped the meaning of the big black type at a single glance. Then he adjusted the window shade in order that he might turn his back to Chrys while he framed a question with his lips.

"I answered in a whisper: 'You tell her!'"

He raised his eyebrows as if he doubted my wisdom. "Tell her—at once—she is very brave! She will like you the better for treating her as if you expect her to be brave."

With that he went over to her, following him. He sat down by her side, opened the paper and spread it on her knees.

Chrys snatched the meaning from the dreadful heads and then, without a word, she wilted into her lover's ready arms. Her head went down upon his shoulder as if she had been accustomed to seek comfort there for

Tschaikowsky Symphony on Friday's List

In response to many requests received for a repetition of Tschaikowsky's "Pathetic Symphony," Conductor John Spangur will give the work, together with two other interesting numbers, at the ninth symphony at Meany Hall Friday evening.

Tschaikowsky's Sixth symphony, the "Pathetic," strange and baffling in mood, has become one of the most popular of modern symphonies. Its rendition is being eagerly awaited by music-lovers who heard it last December.

Maurice Ravel's "Mother Goose," a set of five children's pieces, will present a distinct novelty by one of the most talked-of composers of the day.

The program will close with Beethoven's magnificent "Leonore No. 3" overture, composed for a revival of the composer's opera "Fidelio" in 1806.

War Nurse Is Here to Visit Her Brothers

One of the last of six nurses to leave Brest was Miss Anne Radford, member of a Seattle family, who is here to visit her five brothers, Jack, Collins, Burton, George and Walter Radford.

Miss Radford wears four service stripes. She was chief nurse while at Brest with Camp Hospital 32. Miss Radford will remain in Seattle until she is "demobilized" by the war department. During her service overseas, Miss Radford served with Miss Elizabeth Lancaster, Miss Ruth Tennant, Miss Olive Osborn, Mrs. R. W. Graves and other Seattle women who went "over there" as nurses.

TAILORED HATS FOR SPRING MONTHS

Costume hats, fashioned of the material of which suit or gown is made, are expected to continue in vogue during the summer, the latest representing the greatest demand in straw, or straw with satin or tulle. Hat crowns are, for the most part, flat, but a few are draped, and the "Tam" is still popular. The "Pan" crowns are all of fruit, flowers, or glycerinated or plain ostrich. They present a semi-tailored appearance, which makes them suitable for both dress and tailored wear.

HEADS H. C. L. FIGHT OF FEDERATION OF CLUBS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Miss Georgie A. Bacon, who has been nominated for the General Federation of Women's clubs presidency by her native state, Massachusetts, has been made chairman of the high cost of living campaign which the federation is conducting at present, under the direction of the department of justice. Massachusetts club women credit her with "remarkable genius for organization, a gift for successful financial management, efficiency in presiding and clearness of vision."

MISS GEORGIE A. BACON

Miss Bacon has won recognition not only as a club woman. By appointment of the governor of Massachusetts, she was made a trustee of the Worcester insane hospital and is now chairman of the board.

Girls Get Same Pay as Men If They Do Same Work

BY CYNTHIA GREY

Three working girls have written to me asking me to explain why girls who are employed receive less for the same kind and amount of work than do boys or men.

It is my opinion that women who work by the side of men, who do the same kind of work and an equal amount of it, do not receive less for their services. If there are those who do, I believe it is because they are too timid to "go after" what they earn.

There is no basis for an argument as far as war work is concerned. Girls who became elevator operators, cab drivers, shipyard workers, automobile mechanics' helpers over night, have not FILLED the men's positions; they have simply taken men's positions, and the only reason they are being retained now is because they will work for less.

Professional women, physicians, lawyers, shop-keepers, etc., reap the same profits as do their professional brothers. In all the instances I can think of, where women have gone into some work intelligently, and have proved steady, capable and trustworthy as men would in the same position, they receive as much, and sometimes more, salary than their male competitors.

Dear Miss Grey: Just a few lines about the girl whose mother wanted her to marry for money, and not for love.

Can there be such girls today? It sounds almost too good to be true. I was under the impression that the girls of today marry the man with the most money or for spite, as afterward I learned my wife did.

Can it be possible that this world holds a few real pals, who will go thru thick and thin with you, and finish up with a smile because it was for you?

The woman I married was a nice one as long as there was any hope of getting money; but as soon as these hopes were picked up and left.

So that was the case of a girl who married for money and to spite the man who would not marry her. Then to hear this poor girl talk of marrying for love only makes one nearly sick to think of the other side and to see what torture, agony and heartaches one can go thru for a woman that didn't care any more for me than a rat. It reminds me of a story I once read, "A Woman Without a Soul."

I do not own a dog; but if I did and any one came into my yard to shoot him, I think I would take a pop at him for trespassing. Surely a home-loving American citizen has some rights which should be respected!

A FRIEND OF THE HELPLESS.

Dear Miss Grey: If you can give me the address of the four children who own the dog named "Bill" that the man who signs himself "A Poor Man" wrote about in your issue of the other day, I will get a license for "Bill" and will give a good home to some one's pet who is not able to keep it because of this new license law.

A LOVER OF DOGS.

I am sorry, but the reader who reported the sad plight of "Bill" and his companions did not mention any name or address. If he should happen to read this, and will send the address, I will be glad to get you in touch with "Bill" master.
