HOW THEY'D SPEND MONEY

Winners Tell What They'd Do With $100,000

William S. Pond, 1118 Fourth ave., wins the first prize in the cash letter-writing contest, "What I Would Do With $100,000."

B. C. Hastings, Lincoln high school, takes the second prize.

Pond's letter follows: "My age is 30; occupation, chief clerk. Family consists of self, wife and daughter."

WOULD INVEST IN BUSINESS PROPERTY

"My investment of $100,000 would be as follows:

- Business property $25,000
- Bonds and mortgages ... 40,000
- Bank deposits 10,000
- Home, with acreage and equipment 15,000
- Altruistic fund (and principal devoted to public and benevolent objects) 10,000

"In addition to life insurance already carried, would take out policies guaranteeing my wife and daughter insurable monthly incomes for life, and including accident and health indemnities for self. I would order these policies and make my will before doing the investing."

"Finally, would take up an exhaustive study for two years of Puget sound farming possibilities, devote myself to land development, and thus take my part in the important work of the world."

HASTINGS WOULD BUY LIFE INSURANCE

Following is Hastings' letter:

"If I survived the shock, this is what I would do with $100,000 coming to me suddenly:

- "1. Buy the best $50,000 life insurance I could get.
- "2. Use $5,000 to pay debts, mortgage on home, needed repairs at home, and buy very necessary clothes for the family.
- "3. I would give $5,000 to churches to which I have belonged, and which I could not help as I wished.
- "4. Make a fund of $5,000 to loan to men school teachers with families, who need help at critical times.
- "5. Give $10,000 to the Near East relief, the Red Cross and other agencies for relief.
- "6. The remaining $25,000 I would hold in trust to give to individual needs, and I would use my spare time to find the needy cases."

BRITAIN IN GRIP OF DOPE TRAFFIC

LONDON, Jan. 1.—While fighting for her life during the war, England seems to have been shell-shocked into an ever-increasing use of drugs.

In Limehouse district, which is London's Chinatown, drug traffic has grown to such an extent that Chinamen will take long chances at smuggling—and they are slipping in drugs in great quantities.

Recently a Chinaman arrived on a ship from the Orient, wearing shoes with higher heels than usual. He was searched. In each heel was a spring door, inside of which was found two ounces of opium.

Several white men were held before police court, charged with having 92 ounces of morphine, enough to kill 20,000 persons. Others arrested were charged with having hundreds of tubes of cocaine and other narcotics.

Authorities are convinced there is a center for drug traffic located in Belgium or France. In a suitcase of a man staying at a fashionable hotel, they found a letter which said in part:

"It needs five or six very discreet and very sober intermediaries to handle the peddling part of the business. A fool, a chatterer, a drunkard, a gambler, or a user of it are not good fellow workers. They must be chosen for silence, rapidity of thought, action and their knowledge of bona fide usage."

"The youngster written about yesterday is a very bright London street Arab. He has worked in almost every restaurant and hotel in London and knows all the reputed users of the stuff, both men and women."

Another letter emphasized that, "as the cocaine supply is coming direct from the manufacturer, it is most important to organize sales in small packets weighing about 15 grains. This means that three grains of pure cocaine can be added to 12 grains of impur."

RINGSIDE NOTES ON COUNCIL

CITY COUNCIL, MONDAY

Indefinitely postponed, by a vote of seven to one, Councilman R. H. Thomson's ordinance calling for a 15 per cent reduction in the salaries of all civil service employees of the city.

Confirmed the appointment of A. H. Dimock as city engineer for the next three years.

Selected Councilman John E. Carroll, W. H. Moore, O. T. Erickson and Corporation Counsel Walter F. Misker to represent the city's interests at the coming session of the state legislature.

Passed an ordinance transferring $25,000 from the police pension fund to the general fund, the surplus in the pension fund having become greater than was necessary to pay pension claims.

Referred back to the license committee an ordinance for the revocation of the license of a pool room at 45th ave. and University Way, over the grounds that it was a bad influence for college and high school students.

Passed an ordinance appropriating $10,000 for the construction of new buildings and repair work at Frlands sanitarium.

When the majority on either side in the senate exceeds half a dozen members or so, the custom has been to assign the newcomers to desks at the rear and the side of the minority section.

These seats, in enemy territory, constitute the "Cherokee strip," and while occupied by members of the majority party, are the least desirable seats in the senate chamber.

Assignment to the "Cherokee strip" is one of the methods of disciplining a new member of the senate.

Senator La Follette of Wisconsin was the latest republican to occupy a desk in the "Cherokee strip." He was an outsider, so far as the G. O. P. organization was concerned, and he knew it. But he decided that when he did leave the "strip" he would move into the very best seat on the republican side—which he did.

D'Annunzio Troops Stage Final Review

ROME, Jan. 4.—Defeated but unawed, Fiume Legionnaires marched in final review before their chief, Gabrielle D'Annunzio, while Italy's soldiers looked on.

The review was held after the Fiume troopers had buried 19 of their fellows, killed when the regulars advanced on the city. D'Annunzio himself took part in the funeral services, advancing uncoopered to the graves when a priest had completed the religious ceremonies.
