

MARVELOUS OPERATION SAVES BOY

Sliver of Bone Is Removed From Brain of Lad Hit by Street Car

When little Homer Huffman, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Huffman, of 4302 Phinney ave., was struck by a Phinney Ave. street car, a week ago, his skull was fractured, his brain badly injured and his life despaired of.

Today he is reported as having passed the danger point on the road to recovery. His life was saved by a remarkable operation performed at Columbus sanitarium by Dr. M. L. Herzig, of 4303 Fremont ave., assisted by Dr. H. F. Nelson, former president of the state board of medical examiners.

"It was found," said Dr. Herzig, "that the boy's skull had been splintered. A disk of bone was pressing against the brain. The middle meningeal artery had been severed on the left side. A bone sliver an inch and a half long had been driven into the brain at another point."

"The cut artery was causing hemorrhages, and the boy was gradually sinking into coma. He could answer only a few questions. His temperature was 102, approaching death, and his pulse 130."

"We put him on the operating table and tied the bleeding artery. By a decompression operation the disk of bone was removed. The sliver was then taken out."

"For days we were uncertain whether he would pull thru or not, but he has. I think we are safe in announcing today that he will survive."

Beauty Fails to Hold Husband's Love Sues Wealthy Artist for Separation

Pierre Tartou and wife, formerly Claudie Windsor of California

BY ZOE BECKLEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Charge another failure to beauty! This time it's Pierre Tartou whom the wife he called "the most beautiful woman in the world" is suing for separation.

Long is the list of famous beauties whose marriages have failed. Why can't beauty keep the fires of love burning?

AMONG THE MOST PROSPEROUS PAINTERS

Tartou is among the most prosperous painters. For a portrait he is said to receive from $50,000 to $100,000. And Mrs. du Pont du Nemours is said to have paid $600,000 for his "The God of Happiness."

But happiness was short-lived in Tartou's luxurious New York studio after he brought Claudie Windsor there from California as his bride.

She was the second wife of the artist. After his first obtained a divorce he announced gaily, "I am happy in my freedom." But now she is silent.

"Even beauty can't cope with the artistic temperament," said a friend of the Tartous. "Ben Franklin must have been thinking of artists when he said: 'Are women books? Then would mine were an almanac, to change every year!'"

The artist recalled some famous instances. For example, Madame Masterlink, who gave up the poet when he became infatuated with a young girl.

"In love," she said, "the end is always a natural thing. People are astonished that a great love ends. They should be astonished that it has lasted several years. Beauty can't insure love. Nor yet intellect."

And the opinion of Paul Hellen, the ether: "Beauty and love are alike—both ever subject to change! To the man of temperament it is the elusive that holds."

And the views of Dr. Andre Tridon, the noted psycho-analyst: "No man ever married a woman for her brains. The love that drives one into marriage is the result of an image impressed upon the subconscious mind in early childhood. We are forever seeking the realization of this image."

"When we find the person who comes nearest the image we feel the attraction we call love. We think the one who aroused it is beautiful, or intellectual. Sometimes she is. But it is not beauty nor intellect in itself that causes the attraction."

"Later one may discover the substance unlike the image. Then—disaster."

MOLDERS KICK ON WAGE SLASH

Declare Employers Refuse to Submit to Mediation

Charges that their wages were reduced and their working conditions were changed arbitrarily by their employers, and that all offers of mediation were refused, were made Thursday by representatives of local 158, International Molders' union, whose members walked out of seven Seattle foundries Tuesday.

"When notice of the intended 15 per cent reduction in wages appeared on the shop bulletins, our representatives visited every foundry in the city, asking that we be allowed to present our side of the matter," said O. J. Rice, president of the Seattle local. "We were received kindly, but the employers stuck together, and would not even appoint a committee to meet ours for the purpose of arbitration."

POSTER NOTICES THEIR FIRST WARNING

The first men knew of the intended changes was when the notices were posted in the shops, Rice says. The 15 per cent wage cut, and also an increase of the working week from 44 to 48 hours was specified, he states.

"We instructed our men to go to work as usual on Monday," Rice declared, "and made a last approach to the foundrymen."

"But as before, they refused to consider our views, and on Tuesday morning our members walked out of the seven shops in which the new conditions were supposed to prevail."

Union molders have been getting a minimum of $7.94 a day for a 44-hour week, a wage considerably less than the union scale in other Coast cities. Employers are said to want to reduce the minimum wage to $6.40, and bring back the 48-hour week.

"MOLDERS' WAGES NOT REDUCED ELSEWHERE"

"The argument the foundrymen give us," Rice says, "is that wages are being reduced all over the country. Our national headquarters informs us that this is not true so far as molders are concerned."

"We believe that a general and decided reduction of wages at this time would retard the stabilizing of business which everyone so much desires."

But $5 of the 350 union molders in Seattle are employed at the present time, according to Rice.

Telephone Resonator Warns Moonshiners

GOLDENDALE, Jan. 13.—A telephone resonator constructed from an old tomato can aided moonshiners to escape capture here yesterday.

Warned of the approach of the authorities by the voice of a woman confederate over the improvised telephone, the moonshiners dismantled their still and hastily buried their mash.

BEGORRA AND THE MAN WAS NONE OF YER FLOORWALKERS

Judge Charles Murphy, superior court reporter, rural justice of the peace, school director and parlor entertainer, went to a leading department store to buy gloves.

This occurred Saturday, during the rush.

Murphy entered the main door, noted a uniformed personage to his left, whom he thus addressed: "Floorwalker, can you direct me to the glove counter?"

To which the uniformed personage thus replied: "B-r-r-r-ee! How the devil should I know, sir?"

"Then I looked up," recalls Murphy, "and discovered the personage was a Canadian major of marines, all covered with maple leaves and braid."

The proposed institution will be erected as soon as a site can be secured and financial arrangements completed. It will replace the Seattle General hospital, now declared to be inadequate.
