Trinity Church Wedding Unites Miss Sowle and Mr. Henderson; May Plans for Women's University Club Are Made Known; Tennis Club Announces Summer Activities.

EMBLEMATIC of springtime, apple blossoms in all their dainty pink and white loveliness were the decorations used for the marriage of Miss Marion Sowle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. T. Sowle, to Mr. Phillip Austin Henderson, Saturday evening in Trinity church. Rev. William H. Bliss reading the service at 8:30 o'clock.

The interior of the stately edifice was transformed into a garden bower of apple blossoms. Tall white standards with their head-dresses of these sweet blooms, spiraea and gladiolus ferns, marked the aisles to the chancel, which was bowered with pale pink and white blossoms of the fruit blossoms. Low graduated wicker standards led to the altar where flickering tapers softly lighted the wealth of pink tipped buds adorning it.

Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Mr. J. Edmund Butler at the organ for the processional, and as the first notes echoed thru the church the ushers, led by Mr. Jack Sowle and Mr. L. H. Rubican, came down the aisle followed by Mr. Claire Henderson, Mr. Lawrence Calvert, Mr. Charles Rogers and Mr. William Figgett. Mr. Thomas Greer of Portland acted as groomsmen for Mr. Henderson.

Following them came little Tom Young as page, wearing a cunning white satin suit, and carrying the white satin cushion. Behind them came the bride, in a ruffled pink organdie frock, with pink tulle hair bow, made an adorable flower girl; she carried a miniature basket of apple blossoms.

Miss Dorothy Ewing, maid of honor, was wearing in a shimmering silver tissue dress with tulle of leaf green chiffon, designed with points on each side finished with a single flower and foliage. The bottom of the silver foundation was edged with blossoms, as was the neck of the white shouldered bodice, which was strewn with pink and white tulle folds of the chiffon. Her hat was of tulle and silver, blending with her costume, and she carried a graceful bouquet of apple blossoms.

The charming bride, entering on the arm of her father, was a picture in her mother's bridal dress of ivory corded silk, made Princess, with pearl and crystal cord over each shoulder which fell to the bottom of her skirt, and ended with pearl and crystal tassels. The bertha of rare point lace finished the wide neck.

Her tulle veil fell the length of her coat train; over this was draped a short veil of beautiful old rose point lace, bound to her coiffure with a coronet of the lace, with sprays of orange blossoms on either side. Her shower bouquet was of sweet peas, lilacs of the valley and white orchids.

Mrs. Sowle wore a costume of blue embroidered marquisette over silver cloth. After the ceremony an informal reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Laurelhurst.

On their wedding journey, Mrs. Henderson wore a midnight blue tulle of tricotine, with a silver chain belt finished with a silver ball, and a black tailored hat, with a feather ornament.

Mr. and Mrs. Henderson left for a fortnight's wedding trip and on their return will be at home at Oroville, Wash. Both Mr. and Mrs. Henderson attended the University of Washington, where she is a member of Phi Beta Phi sorority and he is a Phi Delta Theta.

Stage

"SIGN ON THE DOOR" AT METROPOLITAN

"The Sign on the Door," which opened at the Metropolitan Sunday night with Marjorie Harbeau in the leading role, is a pulsating melodrama, which pulsates without the use of artificial stimulants.

In other words, the Channing Pollock drama obtains a kick without resorting to the time-worn theatrical "hook" of the American stage.

Marjorie is an actress, not of the first rank, but with sufficient discernment not to beat on the doors in her mimetic irritation and not to shriek shrilly to denote aristocratic rage.

First class melodrama is rare. "The Sign on the Door" is far removed from the conventional thriller. Pollock, a Broadway hack, has outdone himself in the composition of the piece, and Miss Harbeau adds to the tone and drama of the play.

OLD FAVORITE AT MOORE ORPHEUM—Irene Franklin, the well-known vaudeville favorite, headlines the Orpheum vaudeville bill at the Moore this week. Miss Franklin's act is made up mostly of "character song stories" of a comical and pleasing nature. Burton Green is the pianist who assists Miss Franklin.

Harry Langdon, in his offering, "Johnny's New Car" is a comedy act that appeals to all. He is assisted by the Misses Rose and Cecil. George Yeoman appears in a good comedy monologue. Hibbitt and Mollie put across plenty of smart patter, and their act is well received.

Newell and Most, in their act, "On the Lawn," with their quaint song and dance numbers, were well liked by the audience.

"NAN'S ATONEMENT" AT THE WILKES

The dramatic finish of Ernest Wilkes' three-act play, "Nan's Atonement," which opened at the Wilkes Sunday matinee with Jane Morgan playing the title role, is the big scene that gets the act "over." The finish, which tells of a woman cocaine fiend's self-sacrifice for a young and innocent girl from her home town, puts any movie thriller to shame.

Miss Morgan plays the title role capably and Mary Thorne and Alexis Luce are also cast in star roles. Norman Fenner is an excellent villain. Henry Hall, Fanchon Everhart, Anna Athy, Julia Elmendorf and Rita Boland are well cast in their parts.

More than half of the gloves and mittens of the United States come from Johnston and Gloverville, N. Y.
