Printer's Ink Is "Sticky" Call of Blood to This Girl

Miss Sarah Grist, proofreader and editor of the woman's page on Yorkville Enquirer, which her great-grandfather started, and paper's plant.

YORK, S. C., May 13.—When printer's ink gets on the fingers it sticks. And when it gets into the blood, the family sticks—to the newspaper business.

The Grist family of this town is just one more example of it. Six members got out the Yorkville Enquirer, a semi-weekly newspaper. Children of the fourth generation still follow in the footsteps of their great-grandfather, John E. Grist, who entered the publishing business when the state was young.

"It's the call of the blood," says James D. Grist, reporter.

The first Grist came to what then was Yorkville, in 1833, and took a job on the Unionist Patriot. It lived two years. Then he started the Journal of the Times. Two years later he started the Compiler.

In 1851 Lewis Mason Grist, his son, who had learned to set type at the age of nine, took over the paper and changed the name to the Enquirer.

Long before Lewis Mason Grist died in 1903 his sons, Wood Davidson Grist and Albert M. Grist, had taken an active interest in the paper. His will stated that if they would share his $75,000 estate they must engage in no other occupation.

James D. Grist, son of W. D. Grist, ran away from home when a lad, but the call of the ink came and he returned to York. He now is a reporter on the Enquirer.

When Miss Sarah Grist graduated from Winthrop Normal and industrial college, three years ago, she was offered a position as an instructor in English. Instead she returned to the Enquirer as proofreader and editor

Scientists Experiment With Serum of Swiss

BY MILTON BRONNER
LONDON, May 13.—Henri Spahlinger offers new hope that tuberculosis will be conquered.

Spahlinger is a Swiss, 40, son of a wealthy Geneva hotel proprietor. Educated by the law, he gave up this up to devote himself to bacteriological experiments.

Just before the outbreak of the war he perfected a serum with which he hopes to conquer consumption.

It is obtained by treating various animals, including the horse, the cow and the goat.

The particular serums invented by Spahlinger are being kept secret to protect the public from fakers.

Spahlinger's method is twofold:

FIRST. In cases of acute consumption the tubercular poisons are attacked by antitoxins.

SECOND. In cases of chronic consumption there is a vaccine treatment.

One of the English medical scientists who thinks the method well worth investigating is Dr. Leonard Williams. Dr. Williams says: "I met Spahlinger in 1912. He came to London with good introductions and asked that he might treat tuberculosis under me at the two hospitals with which I am connected. The results were excellent. The war stopped the trials."

"All the men, with one exception, who were treated in 1913 and 1914 under our joint supervision, are well and at work in London."

"But it is imperative that we shall not raise any false hopes. I may sum up the situation in this brief sentence: "Enough has been demonstrated to make it worth while continuing experiments with test cases."

WE DON'T BELIEVE A SETTING'S FOR SALE

DOUGLAS, Ariz., May 13.—The goose that laid the golden egg had nothing on the hens that laid the eggs in the crate confiscated by officials here.

Between each row of eggs in the crate was a row of slim pint bottles of Mexican mescal.

It must have been the hens, of course, for S. B. Price, rancher, who was in charge of the crate when it was seized, said he didn't know anything about the mescal.

Two years ago Miss Margaret Grist, daughter of Albert, entered the office as a typewriter operator.

When Lewis, another son of W. D., returned from war, a Norfolk paper offered him a place.

"I'd rather go back to the Enquirer than have the biggest job on the biggest paper in the country," he replied. And he's back.

Gets Real Audubon at a Rummage Sale

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—A woman bought an old picture of a green tree on which birds of many species were perched at a rummage sale here. She paid $1 for it. On the way home she stopped at an art store, thinking she might sell the frame. "That picture is a genuine John James Audubon, the most famous painter of birds in this country," the salesman told her. He offered her $100. She refused.

Pay 70 Cents a Day to Officials There

PARIS, May 13.—The French colony of Mauretania, in Africa, can boast of having the cheapest state budget in the world. In the general secretary's office are officials whose salaries are 70 cents a day. Officials of the department of agriculture receive $15 monthly, while the head of the public instruction department has a salary of $100 yearly.

Movie Blue Law Is Clamped on Jersey

JERSEY CITY, May 13.—Organizations for the relief of the starving Chinese, the "hard of hearing" and other charities will suffer as a result of a recent ruling barring Sunday "benefit" performances of movie houses. It was intimated that the Chinese and others didn't get a very large percentage of the receipts.

Lord's Daughter Is Going Into Movies

LONDON, May 13.—Lord High Chancellor Birkenhead's daughter, Eleanor, is said to be going into the movies to eke out the family income, like several other daughters of titled families. Judgeships recently have been refused by practicing lawyers on the ground that they couldn't afford to accept the honor. Income and super-taxes are the cause of the refusals.

Gets Floral Wreath While Still Living

DETROIT, May 13.—After receiving a beautiful floral wreath from his fellow members on the jury who believed him dead, A. E. French walked into the court and thanked them, but assured them positively that he was alive and kicking. When he did not appear for duty the report spread that he had died.

A THOUSAND VARIATIONS in the little things make these coats especially attractive.

THE RIGHT COAT

For This Season Must Be ¾ Length

It may have lining or it may not, so as to be heavy and warm or light and breezy. The color is immaterial and the material likewise, but the length must be three-quarter.

It may be priced between $17.50 and $48.50. Cuffs and collars are also optional. You may even have some novelty buttons, or perhaps, some fancy stitching or fringe for effect.

A cape or belt may add to the style and utility of some models, or you may select a conservative flare without the belt, but in any case it must be of THREE-QUARTER LENGTH, and to find so many models in one shop you must go to the
