Anne Boleyn Heroine of Contest Film

Deep abiding woman's love for a fickle king is the keynote of "Deception," the big film production which comes to the Strand Saturday.

Henny Porten and Emil Jannings, two of the most celebrated screen stars of Europe, were the picture was filmed, have the leading roles, those of Anne Boleyn and Henry VIII, king of England.

This is the girl whose beauty tore the world in twain, whose fascination gained her a crown, whose romance shook an empire to its foundation.

Anne's beauty wins her a throne, but Henry's ardor soon cools and many scenes of great dramatic power ensue. Through her trials following the birth of a daughter, when King Bluff Hal had expected a son and heir, Anne's love for her lord and daughter sustain her regally and render her impervious to slander, deception and treachery.

The character of Anne opens the way for an interesting controversy. Do you think this young and beautiful girl should have passed out of the life of the treacherous king or was she justified in fighting for his love for the sake of her tiny daughter?

For the best essays on "What Should Anne Do?" there will be a number of cash prizes as well as theatre tickets awarded.

Watch for "Deception."

Choose Bride for Her Teeth, Advice

GENEVA, June 15.—Dr. Jung, a Basle specialist, states that when a man intends to marry he should not look for a pretty face and figure in a young woman, but should carefully regard her teeth. He said women with defective teeth make indifferent and also expensive wives. They are obliged constantly to visit the doctor or dentist, while their children have a tendency to organic diseases.
