leaving Douglas and Mahoney together. When we returned, Douglas said: "I've just had a talk with Jim and he asked me if I was going to insist on the death penalty. I told him if he desired to make a statement he could call for me later and I would hear what he had to say."

"Then Douglas turned to Jim and asked, 'Jim, is that the conversation that took place?' Mahoney said it was."

STATE RESTS ITS CASE; DEFENSE BEGINS

On cross-examination, Johnston asked Tennant: "You adopted a theory in this case and followed it through?"

"I did," replied the witness. "And you found the body right where you thought you would?" put in Patterson.

"I did," was the reply. The state rested its case. L. B. Schwellenbach, assistant defense counsel, presented the opening statement of what the defense will attempt to prove. He said:

"There are two important facts in this case; one is the identity of the woman whose body is in the morgue. We expect to prove it is not the body of Mrs. Mahoney. The other is the disappearance of Kate Mahoney. We expect to prove she was alive after April 16, the date when the state contends, she was murdered."

Mahoney may take the stand in his own defense. If so, he will be called as the last witness, his attorney said at noon.

Mrs. Nora Mahoney, the defendant's mother, Mrs. Dolores Johnson, his sister, and his 13-year-old niece, Margaret Johnson, will be defense witnesses, counsel said.

DIVER FIRST WITNESS CALLED BY DEFENSE

Frank Mapes was the first witness called by the defense. As a diver for Finch & Co., he testified he searched the bottom of Lake Union for the mystery trunk beginning May 23, eight hours a day for 23 days. Part of the time he worked at the end of a 60-foot rope and part of the time off a sea-lead. He said the water was clear enough for him to see 10 feet. Another crew of divers, part of them police officers, was working at the same time, he said.

On cross-examination the witness admitted that some of the time it was impossible for him to see more than two or three feet under the water. He was unable to say whether he had ever searched that area where the trunk was finally found. He admitted he might have missed a trunk altogether if it had been lying on the bottom of the lake.

Another diver, Henry Finch, Jr., testified as the second defense witness that he searched the lake bottom from May 23 to June 24, by the same methods used by Mapes, and found no trunk.

His cross-examination brought out that the water was so dirty, he walked in a stooped position. In this position, he said, he would have been more likely to miss a trunk that was suspended in the water than one lying on the bottom. He said he had found two electric transformers in the lake that he had been searching for once before. These transformers were about the size of a trunk. He admitted he could not guarantee to find an object the size of a trunk on the lake bottom by the methods used.

He said, however, that if a trunk were suspended by a line reaching to the lake bottom, his air line would be likely to become entangled with the trunk line.

MAHONEY DEFENSE PROBABLY WILL BE ALIBI

An alibi is Mahoney's probable defense. In addition, he probably will dispute the identity of the woman's body in the morgue, declared by state witnesses to be that of Kate Mahoney, his alleged murdered bride.

Nineteen witnesses to testify in his behalf were quietly subpoenaed late yesterday by the accused ex-convict's attorneys.

"I have contended all along and still contend," said his attorney, Lee Johnston, "that the body is not Kate Mahoney's."

"I don't know, frankly, what the defense will be," he added. "We will attempt to spring no surprises. This is just an ordinary plug case—plug along and do what we can when we see what the state is trying to prove."

Johnston said he did not know who his witnesses would be. At the same time he placed in the hands of the clerk of the court the names of the 19 he wanted summoned to court this morning.

These witnesses are:

Fred and Adeline Matthews, husband and wife, neighbors of the Mahoneys, who testified for the state. Their testimony was that Mrs. Mahoney was alive, because they had heard her voice in her apartment after a man's voice had summoned a trunk to the apartment to haul a trunk to the night of April 14.

A. F. Diller, 2327 First ave., a new figure in the case. He is a roomer at the New Baker house, at that address, operated by Mahoney's mother and sister.

Ed Moagher, George Bailey and Tom Hoeman, of the Uxue Audrey, the tug on which the trunk containing the body was landed when hauled out of Lake Union.

Dora Courtney, 2718 Fourth ave. Sigwald Johanson and Hjalmar Jansen, roomers at the New Baker house, fishermen, probable alibi witnesses.

DEFENSE TO CALL STATE'S WITNESSES

J. W. Goodspeed and Lottie L. Goodspeed, his wife, 4324 Fuhrman ave.

Walter M. and Julie A. Underhill, living in a houseboat at the foot of 15th ave. N. E., on Lake Union.

P. F. Nielsen, 1201 Sixth ave. N., brother-in-law of Kate Mahoney.

H. C. Bushe and E. T. Darsaw, fireman assigned to the fire station at Fourth ave. and Battery st.

H. Finch, Jr., 4004 California ave., and Frank Mapes, 10741 56th ave. S., who were diving for the mystery trunk when the search of the lake was first begun.

Eight more defense witnesses were named this morning. They are Mrs. O. C. H. Berg, 2303 E. Denny way; E. A. Klence; T. H. Pidduck, manager; and Frank Irish, janitor, all of the Lumber Exchange building; John P. and Edna Wheeler, Gus Johnson and Myrha Helm, who were witnesses for the state.

Johnston signified during examination of state's witnesses that several of them would be called to the stand as defense witnesses.

Several surprises were sprung by the state late yesterday.

"LOVING LITTLE" WRITES TO SEATTLE MAN

A letter was introduced in evidence. It was received here by O. P. Callahan, president of the Washington Fertilizer Co., in the Hoge building, from a girl he had never known in St. Paul, Miss Lucille Ernster.

The letter said in part: "I suppose you wonder why I'm writing. I have no one to step with. If you were here we would sure have one H— of a time. With love from Lucille Ernster."

It was then shown by Capt. of Detectives Tennant that a sheet of paper had been found in Mahoney's possession after his arrest on which was written:

"Miss Lucille Ernster, Main 9065 Minneapolis: I am sorry I left the St. Francis without seeing you again. Write or wire me at 409 Denny Way your present address. J. E. Mahoney."

Mahoney, Tennant said, told him that he had written the message intending to wire it to Miss Ernster, whom he and Mrs. Kate Mahoney had met in St. Paul and had taken to the theatre.

Inasmuch as Mahoney was known to have been handling cards of the Washington Fertilizer Co., quite indiscriminately about during his visit in Minnesota, the state inferred that one of these cards, with the name of Callahan on it as president, had fallen into the hands of Miss Ernster and that she, assuming the man who had given it to her, was Callahan and not Mahoney, had written the letter to Callahan intending it for Mahoney.

The letter and uncut telegram were introduced as evidence by the state as tending further to show that Mrs. Mahoney was not with her husband when he was in St. Paul. Johnston objected strenuously to their being put in evidence, on the ground that they were brought forth by the state merely to prejudice the jury against the defendant and were of no material value to the state in proving the charge of murder.

Capt. Tennant was called to the stand as the state's last witness late yesterday afternoon.

He explained, step by step, how he had gathered the evidence that ensnared Mahoney.

The crowd in the courtroom leaned forward to catch every word of the detective. Mahoney's face wore a worried expression.

Tennant said Mahoney had told him a certain letter received by W. D. Perkins & Co., Mrs. Mahoney's bankers here, had been dictated by Mrs. Mahoney to a stenographer in St. Paul and turned over to him to mail.

This letter had been previously identified by the stenographer from the St. Francis hotel, St. Paul, as one the defendant himself had dictated and she had typed. The stenographer said she did not see Mrs. Mahoney in St. Paul.

Tennant identified jewelry found in Mahoney's pockets when he was arrested.

This jewelry, Mahoney said, had been given him by his wife in St. Paul to bring back with him, Tennant testified.

PUYALLUP GETS READY FOR FAIR

Carloads of Livestock and Field Products Arriving

PUYALLUP, Sept. 28.—Carloads of livestock, lumbering trucks groaning under their weight of products of the field and factory, and lighter vehicles of many sorts form a continuous procession to the Western Washington fair grounds. Preparations for the 23rd annual fair to be held here October 3 to 9 are going forward with feverish haste.

Finishing touches are being put to the many new buildings; workmen are busily engaged in almost every department, and exhibitors and concessioners are working day and night to have everything finished before the gates are thrown open. Monday will be entry day and will be devoted to the entrance and arrangement of exhibits.

REPORTS INDICATE UNUSUAL INTEREST

Reports received by W. H. Paulhamus, president, indicate an unusual interest throughout Western Washington in the big fair of the season. The larger cities have come to realize that this fair really is a vital part of their industrial and commercial life, according to Paulhamus. The Western Washington fair, it is pointed out, represents all that district west of the Cascades to the Pacific ocean, and even from beyond the Cascades many exhibitors and visitors will come.

Twenty-eight head of running horses and several carloads of cattle that will be exhibited at the Yakima fair have arrived here. The famous dairy herd of the Washington State college is coming.

The Western Washington Experiment station will have a pen of its noted layers here for the six-day egg-laying exhibit at the Yakima fair. Poultrymen from many parts of the Pacific Northwest will exhibit their birds in the new poultry building, just completed, which is the largest structure of this kind west of Chicago.

SEATTLE CHAMBER TO SEND CARAVAN

In addition to the large crowds of visitors expected each day of the fair, the Seattle Chamber of Commerce is planning a special automobile caravan to the fair on Seattle and King County day, October 6.

Word also comes that a delegation of 25 boys, prize winners in the Joining day at the Y. M. C. A., of Seattle, will be here with their friends Saturday, October 2. Southwestern Washington day has been set for Wednesday, October 3. Chehalis and Centralia expect to send unusually large crowds to the fair, according to word received by the management.

Prison Term for Helping Robbers

Louis Lazarus pleaded guilty to a charge of assisting in the $25,000 bank messenger robbery of July 14, in Judge Eversett Smith's court Tuesday, and was sentenced to serve from five to eight years at Walla Walla. Ed Patton, also charged with assisting in the robbery, asked Tuesday that his case be postponed a week.

nanant testified.

"He told me," said Tennant, "that his wife had in her trunk a Paul and was going East. He said he put her on the train for Chicago and that she had written him from Chicago, Chattanooga, Key West and Havana. He said she had met a woman named Mrs. Atkinson and her son on the train that they had become friendly, and that they were traveling together."

When Mahoney found himself being trapped by his own statements, Tennant said, the prisoner refused to discuss the case any further.

Other state's witnesses during the afternoon were: Mrs. Stewart, niece of Mrs. Mahoney's, from North Vancouver, B. C.; Lieutenant of Detectives William E. Justice; Detective Chad Ballard and Ernest E. Davey, a policeman.

Mrs. Stewart told how she had missed her aunt and had tried to get Mahoney to give her Mrs. Mahoney's address, but had failed to get any satisfaction out of him, and of how she had finally gone to Captain Tennant and then the prosecutor's office to get an investigation started as to the missing woman's whereabouts.

On one occasion, she testified, Mahoney planned to take her East to "visit her aunt," and another time went with her to the cemetery where she attended her uncle's grave.

Justice and Ballard testified that they were the detectives who arrested Mahoney in St. Paul, and that he was filled with Mrs. Mahoney's jewelry.

Davey testified that he had received the jewelry at the city jail and had delivered it to Captain Tennant.

Ballard said he had known Mahoney some years. "He was in a show up in our department in 1918," Ballard testified. The witness on cross-examination told the jury he had been making inquiries as early as last March "about the man who married Kate Mahoney." The marriage was in February.

Sidelights on Trial

The Victoria which the Mahoney jury uses for its amusement at night got such vigorous use that it was out of order this morning. The Hoppe-Kelly Co., which loaned the instrument, sent up a man to repair it.

Balliffs denied today that anybody other than John Johnston, who had unlocked the door to defense counsel's private chambers where documents belonging to the defense are kept. They said Johnston has the only keys to the compartment.

Among the notables in the audience today were Mrs. Malcolm Douglas and Mrs. T. H. Patterson, wives of course of the state. Mrs. Patterson has been a daily attendant. Rev. W. A. Major, a Presbyterian clergyman and ardent baseball fan, occupied a front row seat.

Judge Ronald went to his chambers when court opened this morning, to peruse some law books. Meanwhile, Mahoney sat laughing and chatting with relatives and defense witnesses.
