

MOUSE DOES SURGICAL FEAT

Rodent Saves Own Life by Operation

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 8.—A tiny mouse, the pet of a life-term prisoner in the Ohio state penitentiary, has given science a new insight into animal instinct. A month ago the rodent mother performed a Caesarian operation upon herself to deliver her offspring.

So complete was the operation and so successful her recovery, that Dr. J. F. Baldwin of the Grant hospital staff, has begun a search of medical records of the world for a duplicate of this case. He has enlisted the aid of other scientists to delve into this new phase of highest animal instinct and in his queries to his fellows in medicine and surgery has raised this question:

"Is medical science entitled to the credit that has attended the accomplishment of birth by the Caesarian method, or does that honor rightfully belong to mother nature, which man, with all his knowledge, can hope only to approximate?"

The Caesarian section is supposed to have been practiced first by the Greeks, and many notable figures in ancient history are reported to have been born this way. It is only recently, since 1890, that the operation has come to take its place as a well-recognized surgical procedure in certain desperate cases.

The mother mouse was dissected at the veterinary hospital of Ohio State university, and a voluminous report of the autopsy was made to the various scientific bodies. A brief history of the case begins with the illness of the mouse on October 23. The following day at 10:25 a. m. the mouse was observed gnawing at her abdomen, accomplishing an incision less than one inch in length by means of which she delivered a litter of four mice, unassisted.

The convict, who had fostered the mouse as a pet, had called the attention of Dr. Willis A. Whitman, penitentiary physician, to the mouse's action and together with other prison officials kept a close watch on the developments. The mouse recovered fully from the self-

WAS it the voice of the dead that spoke that night to Kate Ward, alone on a park bench?

Kate, beautiful young widow, had heard that her husband had been untrue. The whole happiness of her life depended on her learning the truth of that statement.

The unseen voice spoke: "Find the trunk. Find the man called James."

Kate set forth and found them both—and learned the secret she sought.

section, the incision closing in a most natural healing process without causing any ill effects. Dr. Baldwin and other noted surgeons immediately became interested.

When the mouse was killed, to enable a close study of the case, it was found that the scar had healed perfectly.

A motion to quash testimony against them and to force return of their goods, on grounds that the arrest was illegally made, was denied by Federal Judge Jeremiah Neterer late Thursday.

Defense counsel held that the warrant used was issued for another man not on board the Dragon at the time of arrest.

Approximately $11,000 worth of liquor was taken from the Dragon. Trial date has not been set.

CLAIM OIL IS LEPROSY CURE

Chaulmoogra Oil Saves 19 "Hopeless" Cases

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—Physicians are becoming increasingly confident that the recently discovered chaulmoogra oil treatment for leprosy will eventually rid the islands of the Pacific of that disease. It is in the South Seas and adjacent regions that leprosy has its greatest hold.

Added belief that this is the case was felt by physicians here with the news that 19 lepers at the Kalaupapa leper settlement in Hawaii have been recommended for parole by physicians in charge of the colony.

This is declared to be the first time in the history that actual recommendation has been made that lepers be paroled. Parole means that the patient is on the way to recovery. For centuries leprosy has been listed as an incurable disease.

The recommendation in the case of the Kalaupapa colony was made by Dr. W. J. Woodward, an expert on leprosy. The 19 patients in question have all been treated with injections of the chaulmoogra specific for three years. The treatment is voluntary. No leper is required to take it, as it is still regarded as somewhat in the experimental stage.

Dr. Woodward declared that all of the 19 show marked signs of improvement. The disease has been completely arrested in its development—a thing hitherto never known, for leprosy is a so-called "creeping disease," increasing from month to month and year to year.

What is declared to be particularly important is the fact that all of the 19 were severe cases, who had been given up as hopeless.

The efficiency of the chaulmoogra specific has already been demonstrated in Honolulu hospitals. Beginning or suspected cases of leprosy have been treated with the oil there during the past three years, with the result that not a single patient has been sent to the leper colony. All of those so treated have eventually been released from the hospital, either completely cured, or with the disease arrested, in which case it is no longer dangerous.

Plans are being made to put the 19 paroled men and women on homesteads in a big tract which has recently been opened up by the Hawaiian territorial government.

Dr. Arthur L. Dean, president of the University of Hawaii, is credited with the discovery of the chaulmoogra oil treatment.

MAYOR BACKS UP ON CHARGE

Mayor Brown has backed water on his opinion of the way the women on dress out at the University of Washington.

In replying to the charge made from the pulpit of Plymouth Congregational church by Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, Mayor Brown said last Monday: "Well, if the girls in the dance halls dressed like some of the girls at the Varsity ball there'd be some cause for complaint from the clergy."

But he weakened when a storm of protest broke out at the university as a result of his statement. When taxed by H. Little, president of the Associated Students of the University of Washington, the mayor explained:

"I didn't think the girls at the Varsity ball were immodestly dressed. I just thought that if some of these gentlemen who are clamoring to close respectable dance halls would compare the way the coeds dressed and danced with the way the girls at the dance halls dress and act they would have no complaint to make. There's nothing wrong about either. As for the way the coeds dressed, they were simply following the fashion."
