SUCCESS THUS FAR. Peary Making Elaborate Preparations for the Dash for the Pole.

Herbert L. Bridgman, Commander of the Expedition, Confident That the Explorer Will Succeed in His Undertaking.

Herbert L. Bridgman, commander of the Peary relief expedition of 1899, who arrived in Brooklyn the other day, believes that Peary will accomplish his purpose and reach the pole before his four years are up.

Mr. Bridgman said: "I have in my possession several reports written by Lieut. Peary of his work, but these I am not at liberty to make public."

Of Peary's work Mr. Bridgman said: "Peary's results in the first year of the four allotted to his greatest arctic work fully reward expectation and justify confidence. What he has already achieved removes his undertaking from the realm of doubt to reasonably certain success. With his knowledge of all the conditions bearing upon his work there is scarcely a possibility that any danger remains for the life, health and ultimate safety of the party."

"The first year has been spent in securing dogs and means of transportation, in practical training in sledding on the sea ice and in mastering the problems of traveling in darkness and at the lowest known temperatures under the most unfavorable conditions. Peary has during the past few months opened a post road from Cape Sabine to Fort Conger. Peary will take the field with himself and all his company, men and dogs, in perfect condition from the long, quiet rest of the winter. His landed stores and permanent stations give him an incomparable advantage when the final test comes."

Charles Frederick Sylvester, curator of anatomy in the university, who has been with the Peary relief party, has arrived at Princeton from North Sydney, Cape Breton. Mr. Sylvester said the expedition suffered no inconvenience from the cold. The trip north was rather an excursion, freighted with an abundance of real sport in hunting arctic birds, partridge, duck and foxes.

As a result of the expedition, Princeton receives a greater supply of scientific material than ever collected from a like tour. Besides securing the material of deep sea dredging, a vast amount of anatomical structure was brought together. Several new species of animal life were also found.

CHILDREN CAUSE A LAWSUIT. Ejectment Proceedings Begun in the Courts Against Fashionable Omaha Families.

Suits are likely to be brought in Omaha in a few days by a company owning a large number of fashionable flats in the city to eject several tenants because they have violated the terms of their lease in that the family now has children, whereas the lease specifically provided that no children would be permitted on the premises.

Several years ago a number of handsome modern flats were rented en suite to several fashionable people. The leases stipulated that no children would be allowed. In some cases, however, the presence of babies in arms were not objected to, though it was understood verbally that as soon as the babies became old enough to run over the grounds and become a nuisance to other tenants the parents would move. Now many of the tenants find themselves in this position, but they do not want to move, whereas the landlord desires that they shall. The defense of those who are threatened with ejectment will be that such a clause, while it was signed in good faith, is contrary to public policy and good morals.

Both sides are determined, and it is said that the fashionable families will employ a lawyer and resist the ejectment. One case will be selected as a test, and upon this both sides will rely and rest the entire case.

AMIALE BUT FATIGUED.

The Great General Had Been Roundly Treated But He Wanted a Few Winks of Sleep.

The Roman conqueror was home again, says the Washington Star. He had viewed the triumphal arches and heard the plaudits of plebs and patricians. The calcium lights had played on him for miles along the line of march. The chairman of the committee on arrangements approached him and said, deferentially:

"General, have we left anything undone which might convey our appreciation of the fact that you are the hero of the hour?"

"Nothing," was the answer. "Has the procession been as long as you think it ought to be in passing a given point?"

"It has surpassed my expectations." "Have you heard all the speeches you want?"

"Yes, thank you." "Have you had all the music you care for from the glee club?"

"Yes, thank you." "Have you had all the breakfasts and dinners and suppers you want?"

"Yes, thank you." "And all the fireworks?"

"Yes, thank you." "And all the speeches?"

"Yes, thank you." "Now is there anything else you would enjoy? If there is, please mention it, for you must remember, general, we think the world of you and there isn't anything we wouldn't do for you."

"Are you sure that if I spoke candidly there would be no offense?"

"Absolutely." "Well, to tell you the honest truth, I'd like about 20 minutes' sleep."

RUSSIA'S FINANCES.

Vast Railway Plans Must Be Postponed Because of Stringency in Money Market.

A great deal of interest is aroused in both political and financial circles by the appeal for assistance now being made by Russia in the London money market. For many years to come, writes Arnold White, in Harper's Weekly, Russia will require large financial resources to carry out her vast plans for railway development in China, Persia and Siberia. Unless London comes to the help of M. de Witte, the Russian minister of finance, the building of these railways, which bulk so largely in the scaremonger's eyes, is likely to be postponed for an indefinite period. It seems odd that Russia should come to London to borrow money for the advancement of schemes which are openly designed to thwart the political and commercial interests of England and the United States in the far east. It is unusual, to say the least of it, to invite prospective victims to subscribe for the expenses of their own internment. The only ground on which the application is to be justified is the cosmopolitan character of modern finance, which knows neither country nor patriotism. Every shilling subscribed in England or America for the building of Russia's strategic lines in Asia will be used against them. The spirit in which that portion of the Russian government which is hostile to Anglo-Saxon development administers the affairs of the interior of the empire and will administer the far east, is shown in the arrest and exile of thousands of students, and in the closing of nearly all the principal universities and colleges in Russia.

The better class of Japanese do not live in the twenty ports of Japan, which are frequented by the casual traveler. Life in these towns is so different from the real life of Japan that it is impossible to get an idea of the country from them.

Growth of Venetians. The habit of smoking does not seem to affect Venetians as it does the small boy, by stunting his growth, for the old veteran has added 150 feet to his stature within the past year.

Beginnings of Cooperation. A little more than 50 years ago a few workmen at Rochdale, England, joined together to purchase a sack of flour and a chest of tea. That was the beginning of a movement (cooperative) which now includes 1,000 societies, with a total membership of 1,000,000.

Universal Scientific Language. At a recent meeting of the Russian Academy of Sciences Prof. Dills advocated the use of English as a universal language for men of science.
